Poetry.

A PIG IN THE FENCE.

Didst never observe when a pig in the fence
Sends forth its most pitiful shout,
How all of his neighbors betake themselves thence,
To punish him ere he gets out?
What a hubbub they raise, so that others
May know his condition and hence
Come running to join them in adding a note
To the pig that is fast in the fence.

Well, swine are not all of the creatures that be,
Who finds themselves sticking between
The rails of the fence, and who strive to get free
While the world is still shoving them in;
Who find that the favor they meet with depends
Not on words, but on dollars and cents;
And that 'tis but few who will prove themselves friends
To the pig that is fast in the fence.

ST. MICHAEL, THE WEIGHER.

BY JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL.

Stood the tall archangel weighing
All man's doing, doing, saying,
All the failure and the pain,
All the triumph and the gain,
In the unimagined years,
Full of hopes, more full of tears,
Than old Adam's conscience yet
Backward searched for Paradise,
And, instead, the flaming blade saw
Of inexorable law.

In a dream I marked him there,
With his fire-gold, flickering hair,
In his blinding armor stand,
And the scales were in his hand:
Mighty were they and full well
They could poise both heaven and hell.
"Angels" asked I humbly then,
"Weighest thou the souls of men?
That thine office is, I know."
"Nay," he answered me, "not so.
But I weigh the hope of man
Since the power of choice began
In the world of good or ill,"
Then I waited and was still.

In one scale I saw him place
All the glories of our race,
Cups that Belshazzar's feast,
Gems, the wonder of the East,
Kublai's sceptre, Cæsar's sword,
Many a poet's golden word,
Many a skill of science, vain
To make men as gods again.

In the other scale he threw
Things regardless, outcast, few,
Martyr ash, arena sand,
Of St. Francis cord a strand
Beechen cups of men whose need
Fasted that the poor might feed,
Distillations and despairs
Of young saints with grief-grayed hairs
Broken hearts that break for man.

Marvel through my pulses ran
Seeing then the beam divine
Swiftly on his hand decline,
Watched with spellen for and renown
Mounted light as thistle down.

SHE COULDN'T PLAY.

Hostess—Won't you please play some thing for us, dear Miss Swindle?

Miss Swindle—Oh, I cannot, really, I'm so horribly out of practice.

Hostess—Oh, Miss Swindle! When you always play so beautifully at any time!

Miss Swindle—I? I play beautifully when I really don't pretend to be anything more than an amateur? I only wish I could play.

First Guest—Do play, Miss Swindle.

Second Guest—Oh, do.

Third Guest—Please do, Miss Swindle I've heard so much about your exquisite playing and have always wanted to hear you.

Miss Swindle—Oh, thank you! But I really am quite out of practice and I simply play a little for my own amusement.

Guests (in chorus)—O-o-o-o, Miss Swindle!

Miss Swindle—Really, I don't pretend to play well.

Fourth Guest—Do please play some thing for us. Let me escort you to the piano.

Miss Swindle (reluctantly)—Well, if I must, I must, I suppose; but I shall play horridly, and I really don't know of a thing to play, anyhow.

Hostess (to her husband an hour later—We really must do or say some thing to get that stupid Miss Swindle away from the piano. She's played six long pieces now and is beginning on the seventh, and heaven only knows when she'll stop. Everybody's either yawning or giggling. I don't know what ever made me so stupid as to ask her to play, anyhow!—Detroit Free Press.

MAPLE SUGAR.

For want of knowledge of the best methods of maple sugar making, a vast amount of inferior sugars is every year placed on the market. A few suggestions are given in a contemporary which may be helpful to those who are making preparations to manufacture sugar this spring. The writer says:—

My way has been to have a water proof seed with an evaporator or large kettle set on a stone arch in it, and a good supply of dry wood split and ranked up neatly. One does not want to evaporate two measures of water, one from the fuel, therefore dry wood is indispensable. The Eureka metallic sap spouts and the covered pails, which may be hung upon the spouts, and are the very best apparatus for gathering the sap. The old fashioned wooden spiles and troughs dug out of the rotten leaves where they were left last year cause the syrup and sugar to be dark and ill flavored. When the syrup is ready for sugaring off it may be grained by stirring it as it cools with a smooth paddle, and if the sap has been gathered clean and boiled down right a nice lemon-yellow sugar will result. The addition of a quart of sweet milk to every kettleful of syrup before it boils will throw up the scum, and leave the finished syrup clear and bright.

MARRIAGE.

In choosing a partner for life, Midland pompously, as a preventative against unhappy marriages, better wed over the mixen than over the moor, which is equivalent to saying, marry one whom you have known for life. Good advice it is, if you wish to marry suitably, marry your equal, which our mother-tongue has paraphrased thus—Tak' a neat o' your ain kind, and it'll no scart ye. One thing bear in mind. A hairy man is a happy man, but a hairy woman is a witch. Briefly, you cannot do better than listen to Fuller, choose the daughter of a good mother. But, whatever be your choice, always remember that woman was made out of a rib from the side of Adam—not out of his head to top him—not out of his feet to be trampled under him—but out of his side to be equal to him, under his arm to be protected, and near his heart to be loved. And the ladies on their part will recollect that—

"To change the name and not the letter, is to change for the worse and not for the better."

Unsightly pimples, blotches, tan and all itching humors of the skin are removed by using Dr. Low's Sulphur Soap.

SUNBEAMS

Woman's sphere—a full dress ball.

The faith cure is no good for starvation.

The peal of banana has a falling inflection.

"Affections run to waist"—a love of a corset.

A transaction of hearts—playing the deuce.

It takes a bowled stroke to succeed at ten pins.

The undertaker's favorite exercise is boxing.

Passing away time—handing over your watch to a footpad.

The source of ignorance is about all the real praise we get in life.

All the world's a stage, and all men and women want to ride on top.

"What are you going to wear to the ball, my dear?" asked a fond father of his daughter. "I don't know, pa, until I see the society column in the Sunday paper."

"Study penmanship, my boy, as carefully as you know how. I lost a fortune once by bad writing." "How?" "I loved a rich girl, and she loved me. I wrote and asked her to share my lot, and she—well, she thought I asked her to share my note."

Chicago Girl—Oh, pa, please buy 'The Angelus.' Papa Parkrib—Nonsense! No one in the family could play on it if we had it.

Man at telephone (trying to find out who has rung the bell).—"Hello, there: are you 37?" "Young lady at other end (indignantly)—"No, you horrid thing; I'm only 17."

Mr Fussy—Why do you charge me twenty five cents for a hair cut when your sign says: "First class hair cut, fifteen cents?" Barber—Ah, but Monsieur has not the first class hair.

Ella—Do you know what Harry Harebrain threatens to do if you do not accept him?

Bella—No; I am sure I do not.

Ella—He declares he will put a bullet into his head.

Bella—Well, it will be a good idea to have something in there.

"You are nice and warm here," said the caller, as he entered the sanctum of the editor in chief. "D'ye know the reason?" "Steam heat?" "Partly so, but it is rather more due to the fact that we always a versifyer in the next room. That's where the paragrapher has his den."

"Ma," said Willie, who had been to the Missionary Sewing Society with his mother, "I feel very sorry for the poor little heathen." "That's right, Willie, I am glad to see you show such a spirit." "Yes'm. I'd feel sorry for anybody that had to wear the clothes that you people were making to-day."

Newspaper Decisions

1. Any person or persons who take a paper regularly from the post office, whether directed in his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment.
2. If a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken or not.
3. The courts have decided that refusing to take a newspaper or periodical from the post office or removing and leaving them uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intended fraud.

Beauty

Is desired and admired by all. Among the things which may lend to enhance personal beauty is the daily use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. No matter what the color of the hair, this preparation gives it a lustre and pliancy that adds greatly to its charm. Should the hair be thin, harsh, dry, or turning gray, Ayer's Hair Vigor will restore the color, bring out a new growth, and render the old soft and shiny. For keeping the scalp clean, cool, and healthy, there is no better preparation in the market.

"I am free to confess that a trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor has convinced me that it is a genuine article. Its use has not only caused the hair of my wife and daughter to be but it has given my rather stunted mustache a respectable length and appearance."—E. Britton, Oakland, Ohio.

Abundant and Glossy,

"My hair was coming out (without any assistance from my wife, either). I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor, using only one bottle, and I now have as fine a head of hair as any one could wish for."—R. T. Schmaltzer, Dickson, Tenn.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor in my family for a number of years, and regard it as the best hair preparation I know of. It keeps the scalp clean, the hair soft and lively, and preserves the original color. My wife has used it for a long time with most satisfactory results."—Benjamin M. Johnson, M.D., Thomas Hill, Mo.

"My hair was becoming harsh and dry, but after using half a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor it grew black and glossy. I cannot express the joy and gratitude I feel."—Mabel C. Hardy, Delavan, Ill.

THE DOMESTIC ANGEL.

When daisy leaves call the Bees
The golden Day to rolling,
And robins on the verdant lawn
The early worms do rake in,
And Sol begins to light the skies
And tint the hearing billow,
My lady in her chamber lies
Asleep upon her pillow.

Oh, beauteous sight! A cheek so fair
On snowy wings reposing,
And lips just parted, lookeds rare,
Two rows of pearls disclosing.
The lightlets her chamber steeping,
To brighten some adoring,
And she awakens from her dreaming
To greet the golden morning.

She springs from bed; how fair is she
All in her maiden glory,
Like Venus rising from the sea,
As told in classic story;
She opens her door, the charming sprite,
And calls her brother Freddy
To tell her ma the fire to light
And get the breakfast ready!

When she is dressed she goes down stairs
And gives the cook some orders,
Then to the dining room repairs
To mash the young men boarders.
The breakfast over up she springs,
And tells her ma and Hannah
To wash the dishes while she sings
And bangs the grand piano.

CHAPTER XXIII.

TOO LATE

What fear is this, which startles in our ears?
—ROMEO AND JULIET.

THE conclusion which I drew from these sentences after a close and repeated perusal of them was to this effect:

That Mr. Pollard instead of possessing only two sons, as was generally supposed, had in reality been the father of three. That the eldest, born in all probability before Mr. Pollard's removal to this country (he was an Englishman by birth), had, by some act of violence or fraud, incurred the penalty of the law, and was even now serving out a term of imprisonment in his native land. That this son had a daughter innocent and virtuous, whom he desired to commit to the care of her grandfather; that he had even sent her over here for the purpose, but that Mr. Pollard, taken down with illness which afterward ended in death, had not only failed to be on hand to receive her, but that, surrounded and watched by his wife and sons, who, in their selfish pride, were determined to ignore all claims of kinship on the part of one they despised, he had not even had the chance to take such measures for her safety and happiness as his love and regard for her lonely position seemed to demand. That the will, whose concealment in his desk he had managed to describe, had been made in recompense for this neglect, and that by it she would receive that competence and acknowledgment of her rights which the hatred of her unscrupulous relatives would otherwise deny her.

And this was the will I had weakly given up, and it was upon the head of this innocent child that the results of my weakness must fall.

When I first recognized this fact I felt stupefied. That I, David Barrows, should be the cause of misery and loss to a guileless and pure soul! I could not realize it, nor believe that consequences so serious and irremediable could follow upon an act into which I had been betrayed by mere cowardice. But soon, too soon, the matter became plain to me. I saw what I had done and was overwhelmed, for I could no longer doubt that the real will had been destroyed, and that the one which had been returned to me was a substituted one, perhaps the very same which I had seen among the papers of Mr. Pollard's desk.

The result of my remorse was an immediate determination on my part to search out the young girl, left in this remarkable manner to my care, and by my efforts in her behalf do what I could to remedy the great evil which, through my instrumentality, had befallen her.

The purpose was no sooner taken than I prepared to carry it out. S——could hold no duty from me now paramount to this. I was a father and my child lingered solitary and uncared for in a strange place. I took the first train the next morning for the "city of the east-wind."

The hour at which I arrived at number—Charles Street, was one of deep agitation to me. I had thought so continually upon my journey of the young waif I was seeking. Would she be the embodiment of ingenuousness which her grandfather had evidently believed her to be? Should I find her forgiving and trustable; or were the expectations I had formed false in their character and founded rather upon Mr. Pollard's wishes than any knowledge he had of her disposition and acquirements?

The house was so far as I could judge from the exterior, of most respectable character, and the lady who answered the summons was one of those neat and intelligent looking persons who inspire confidence at first glance. To my inquiries as to whether there was living in her house a young English lady by the name of Green—I did not like to venture upon that of Pollard, there being more persons in the connection I have shown you which led me to think that Mr. Pollard had changed his name which was on the card given me, and found, as I have told you that it was not the same lady at all who lived there and that there was not only no Miss Merriam in the house but that her name was not even known there.

"And you say the lady herself?"

"Yes, sir."

"And are you sure it was not the same as the one who was here?"

"Oh, yes; she was short and stout and had a frank way of speaking, totally unlike the one of the veiled woman."

"And the latter? How was she shaped? You have not told me."

I asked this in trembling tones. Though I was sure what the answer would be, I dreaded to have my fears confirmed.

"Well, sir, she was tall and had a full commanding figure, very handsome to look at. She was dressed all in gray and had a way of holding her head that made an ordinary sized woman like myself feel very small and insignificant. Yet she was not agreeable in her appearance; and I am sure that if I could have seen her face I should have disliked her still more, though I do not doubt it was in keeping with her figure, and very handsome."

I could have no doubts as to whom this described, yet I made one final effort to prove my suspicions false.

"You have given me the description of a person of some pretensions to gentility," I remarked, "yet from the first you have forborne to speak of her as a lady."

"An involuntary expression of my distrust and dislike I suppose. Then her dress was very plain, and the veil she wore quite common."

I thought of the dress and veil which my self designated "sister" had worn in the visit she paid to my rooms and wondered if they would not answer to the description of these.

"What was the color of her veil?" I inquired.

"Dark blue."

That was the color of the one which had been worn by my mysterious visitor as I had found from subsequent questions put to my neighbor, and I could no longer have the least uncertainty as to who she was who had carried off Mr. Pollard's grandchild. Sick at heart and fearing I scarcely knew what, I asked for the letter which had been left for Miss Merriam, and receiving it from the hand of this amiable woman in whom I appeared to have inspired as much confidence as her former visitor had alarm, I tore it open, and in my capacity of guardian read what it contained. Here it is:

MY DEAR MISS MERRIAM:

The gentleman, in the hope of whose protection you came to this country, is dead. I am his son and naturally feel it incumbent upon me to look after your interests. I am therefore coming shortly to see you: but till I do so, remember that you are not to receive any one who may call, no matter what their name, sex, or apparent business. If you disobey me in this regard you may do yourself a permanent injury. Wait till my card is brought you, and then judge for yourself whether I am a person in whom you can trust. Hoping to find you in good health, and as happy as your bereaved condition will admit of, I remain sincerely yours,

DWIGHT GAYLORD POLLARD.

"Ah, he wrote a day too late!" I involuntarily exclaimed; then perceiving the look of curiosity which this unguarded expression had awakened on the face of my companion, folded the letter up and put it quietly in my pocket. "It is an unhappy piece of business," I now observed, "but I shall hope to find Miss Merriam very soon, and place her where she will be both safe and happy."

And feeling that I ought to know something of the appearance and disposition of one I so fully intended to befriend, I inquired whether she was a pretty girl.

The reply I received was almost enthusiastic.

"I do not know as you would call her pretty, sir, she is so pale and fragile; but if her features are not regular nor her color good, she has something unusually attractive in her face, and I heard more than one gentleman here say, 'Miss Merriam is lovely.'"

"And her manners?"

"Very modest, sir, and timid. She seems to have a secret sorrow, for I have often seen her eyes fill when she thought no one was looking at her."

"Do you know her history or connections?"

"No, sir."

"Then she never talked to you about herself?"

"No, sir; though so young, she was strangely like a woman in many things. An uncommonly sweet child, sir, an uncommonly sweet child."

I felt the sting of a great reproach in my heart, and, anxious to hide the depth of my emotion, rose to leave. But the good woman detaining me, inquired what she should do with Miss Merriam's trunk.

"What," I exclaimed, "is that still here?"

"Yes, sir; she took, as I noticed, a box of some size with her, but she left her trunk. In the flurry of their departure I forgot to speak about it. I have expected an expressman other it every day, but none has come. That is another reason why I have felt anxious."

"I do not wonder," I exclaimed.

"Sometimes," she observed, "I have thought it was my duty to speak to the police about the matter; it would be such a dreadful thing if any harm had come to her."

"I will speak to the police if necessary," said I. And determined as I had never been before in my life, I left the house and proceeded to the depot, where I took the first train for S——.

CHAPTER XXIV.

CONFRONTED.

Stop up the access and passage to remorse,
That no compunctious visitings of nature
Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between
The effect and it be—MACBETH.

Being in the confessional, I have not fortitude to tell the worst of myself; I will not therefore, hesitate to tell the best. When on that very afternoon I entered Mrs. Pollard's grounds, it was with a resolve to make her speak out, that had no element of weakness in it. Not her severest frown, nor that diabolical look from Guy's eye, which had me quail, should serve to turn me aside from my purpose, or thwart those interests of right and justice which I felt were so deeply at stake. If my own attempt, backed by the disclosures which had come to me through the prayer-book I received from Mr. Pollard should fail, then the law should take hold of the matter and wrench the truth from this seemingly respectable family, even at the risk of my own happiness and the consideration which I had always enjoyed in this town.

The house when I approached it, struck me with an odd sense of change. I did not stop at the time to inquire why this was, but I have since concluded, in thinking over the subject, that the parlor curtains must have been drawn up, something which I do not remember ever having seen there before or since. The front door also was ajar, and when I rang the bell it was so speedily answered that I had hardly time to summon up the expression of determination which I felt would alone gain me admittance to the house. But my presence instead of seeming unwelcome, seemed to be almost expected by the servant who opened to me. He bowed, smiled, and that too, in almost a holiday fashion; and when I would have asked for Mrs. Pollard, interrupted me by a request to lay off my overcoat in a side room, which he courteously pointed out to me.

There was something in this and in the whole aspect of the place which astonished me greatly. It this sombre dwelling with its rich but dismally dark halls and mysterious recesses could be said to ever wear an air of cheer, the attempt certainly had been made to effect this to-day. From the hand of the bronze figure that capped the newel post hung wreathes of smilax and a basket full of the most exquisite flowers; while from a half open door at my right came a streak of positive light, and the sound of several voices animated with some sentiment that was strangely out of accord with the solemn scene to which this very room had so lately been a witness. Can they be having a reception? I asked myself; and almost ashamed of the surmise, even in the house of one so little respected, I, nevertheless, turned to the civil servant before me and remarked:

"There is something going on here of which I was ignorant. Is Mr. Pollard entertaining guests to-day?"

"Did you not know, sir?" he enquired. "I thought you had been invited, perhaps; Miss Pollard is going to be married this afternoon."

Miss Pollard going to be married! Could anything have been worse? Shocked, I drew back; Miss Pollard was a beautiful girl and totally innocent, in as far as I knew, of any of the wrong which had certainly been perpetrated by some members of her family. It would never do to mortify her or to mar the pleasure of her wedding day by any such scene as my errand probably involved. She must be spared sorrow even if her mother—— But at that instant the vague but pathetic form of another young girl flitted in imagination before my eyes, and I asked myself if I had not already done enough injury to the helpless and the weak, without putting off for another hour even that attempt at rescue, which the possibly perilous position of Mr. Pollard's grandchild so imperatively demanded. As I thought this and remembered that the gentleman to whom Miss Pollard was engaged was an Englishman of lordly connections and great wealth, I felt my spirit harden and my purpose take definite form. Turning, therefore, to the servant before me I inquired if Mrs. Pollard was above or below; and, learning that she had not yet come down stairs, I tore a leaf out of my note book and wrote on it the following lines:

I know your daughter is on the point of descending to her marriage. I know also that you do not want to see me. But the interests of Miss Merriam demand that you should do so, and that immediately. If you do not come, I shall instantly enter the parlor and tell the story to the assembled guests which will somewhat make your equanimity when you come to appear before them. My moral courage is not to be judged by my physical, madam, and I shall surely do this thing.

DAVID BARROWS.

The servant, who still lingered before me, took this note.

"Give it to Mrs. Pollard," I requested. "Tell her it is upon a matter of pressing importance, but do not mention my name if you please; she will find it in the note." And seeing by the man's face that my wishes would be complied with, I took up my stand in a certain half-curtained recess and waited with loudly beating heart for the issue.

She came. I saw her when she first put foot on the stairs, and notwithstanding my strong antipathy, I could not repress a certain feeling of admiration from mixing with the dread the least sight of always occasioned me. Her form, white as of the finest, was clad in heavy black velvet, without a vestige of ornament to mar its sombre richness, and her hair, now verging towards gray was piled up in masses on the top of her haughty head, adding inches to a height that in itself was almost queenly. But her face! and her cruel eye and the smile of her terrible lip. I grew cold as I saw her approach, but I did not move from my place or meditate the least change in the plan I had laid for her subjection.

She stopped just two feet from where I stood, and without the least bend of her head or any gesture of greeting, looked at me. I bore it with quietude, and even answered glance with glance, until I saw her turn pale with the first hint of dismay which she had possibly ever betrayed; then I bowed and waited for her to speak. She did so with a hiss like a serpent.

"What does this mean?" she cried "What do you hope to gain from me, that you presume to write me such a letter on an occasion like this?"

"Madam," I rejoined, "you are in haste, as so am I; so, without expressing any opinion of the actions which have driven me to this step, I will merely say that I want but one thing of you, but that I want immediately, without hesitation and without delay. I allude to Miss Merriam's address, which you have, and which you must give me on the spot."

She shrank. This cold, confident, imperious woman shrank, and this expression of emotion, while it showed she was not entirely without sensation, awoke within me a strange fear, since how dark must be her secret, if she could tremble at the thought of its discovery. She must have seen that I was affected, for her confidence immediately returned.

"I do not know,—" she began to say.

But I mercilessly interrupted her.

"But I know," said I, with an emphasis on the pronoun, "and know so much that I am sure the company with in would be glad to hear what I could tell them. Mr. Harrington, for instance, who I hear is of a very honorable family in England, would be pleased to learn——"

"Hush!" she whispered, seizing my wrist with a hand of steel. "If I must tell you I will, but no more words from you, do you hear, no more words."

I took out my note-book and thrust it into her hand.

"Write," I commanded, her full address, mind you, that I may find her before the day is over."

She gave me a strange glance but took the book and pencil without a word.

"There!" she cried, hurriedly writing a line and passing the book back to me "And now go; our time for further conversation will come later."

But I did not stir. I read aloud the line she had given me and then said:

"Madam, this address is either a true or false one. Which, I shall soon know. For upon leaving here, I shall proceed immediately to the telegraph-office, from which I shall telegraph to the police station nearest to this address, for the information I desire. I shall receive an answer within an hour; and if I find you have deceived me I shall not hesitate to return here, and so suitably accompanied that you will not only open to me but rectify whatever mistake you may have made. Your guests will not be gone an hour," I ruthlessly added Her face, which had been pale, turned ghastly. Glancing up at a clock which stood a few feet from the recess in which we stood, she gave an involuntary shudder and looked about for Guy.

"Your son, fertile as he is in resources, cannot help you," I remarked. "There is no pit of darkness here; besides I have learned a lesson, madam; and not death itself would deter me now from doing my duty by this innocent child. So if you wish to change this address——"

"I stopped; a strain of music had risen from the parlor. It was Meadles's Wedding March. Mrs. Pollard started, cast a harried look above and tore the note book out of my hands.

"You are a fiend," she hissed, and hurriedly scratching out the words she had written, she wrote another number and name. "You will find she is there," she cried, "and since I have complied with your desire, you will have no need to return here until you bring the young girl home."

The explosive manner in which she uttered the last words startled me. I looked at her and wondered if Medea were such a monster as coming to this country,—she gave a look of such trouble and anxiety that I was instantly struck with dismay.

"Miss Merriam!" she exclaimed; then, as I bowed with meaning acquiescence, continued in a tone that conveyed still more disquiet than her face, "She was here; but she is gone, sir; a woman took her away."

A woman! I must have grown pale, for she swung wide the door and asked me to come in.

"We can talk better in the hall," she remarked, and pointed to a chair into which I half fell.

"I have a great interest in this young lady," I observed; "in short, I am her guardian. Can you tell me the name of the person with whom she went away, or where she can be found now?"

"No sir," she answered, with the same expression of trouble. "The woman gave us no name nor address, and the young lady seemed too much frightened to speak. We have felt anxious ever since she went, sir; for the letter she showed us from the captain of the ship which brought her over, told us to take care of her. We did not know she had a guardian or we should not have let her go. The woman seemed very pleasant and paid all the bills, but——"

"But what?" I cried, too anxious to bear a moment's delay.

"She did not lift her veil, and this seemed a suspicious circumstance."

Torn with apprehension and doubt, I staggered to my feet.

"Tell me all about this woman," I demanded. "Give me every detail you can remember. I have a dreadful fear that it is some one who should never have seen this child."

"Well, sir, she came at about eleven in the morning——"

"What day?" I interrupted her to ask.

"Thursday," she replied, "a week ago yesterday."

The very day after the will was returned to me. If she were the woman I feared, she has evidently lost no time.

"She asked for Miss Merriam," she before me pursued, evidently greatly pitying my distress, "and as we knew no reason why our young boarder should not receive visitors, we immediately proceeded to call her down. But the woman, with a muttered excuse, said she would not trouble us; that she knew the child well, and would go right up to her room. If we would only tell her where it was. This we did and should have thought no more of the matter, if in a little while she had not reappeared in the hall, and, inquiring the way to my room, told me that Miss Merriam had decided to leave my house; that she had offered her a home with her, and that they were to go immediately.

"I was somewhat taken aback by this, and inquired if I could not see Miss Merriam. She answered 'What for?' and when I hinted that money was owing me for her board, she drew out her pocket-book and paid me on the spot. I could say nothing after this, 'But are you a relative, ma'am?' to which her quick and angry negative, hidden, however, next moment, by a suave acknowledgment of friendship, gave me my first feeling of alarm. But I did not dare to ask her any further questions, much as I desired to know who she was and where she was going to take the young girl. There was something in her manner that overawed me, at the same time it filled me with dread. But if I could not speak to her I meant to have some words with Miss Merriam before she left the house. This the woman seemed to wish to prevent, for she stood close by me when the young girl came down, and when I stepped forward to say good by, pushed me somewhat rudely aside and took Miss Merriam by the arm. "Come, my dear," she cried, and would have hurried her out without a word. But I would not have that. The sorrow and perplexity in Miss Merriam's face were too marked for me to let her depart in silence. So I persisted in speaking, and after saying how sorry I was to have her go, asked her if she would not leave her new address with me in case any letters should come for her. Her answer was a frightened look at her companion who immediately spoke for her. 'I have told you,' said she, 'that Miss Merriam goes home with me. It is not likely she will have any letters, but I'll she should, you can send them to the place mentioned on this card,' and she pulled a visiting card from her bag and gave it to me, after which she immediately went away, dragging Miss Merriam after her."

"And you have that card?" I cried. "Why did you not show it to me at once?"

"O, sir," she responded with a sorrowful shake of her head, "it was a fraud, a deception. The card was not hers but another person's, and its owner don't even know Miss Merriam."

"How do you know this?" I asked. "Have you seen this other person?"

"Yes, sir, I had occasion to, for a letter did come for Miss Merriam only a short time after she left. So thinking it a good opportunity to see where she had gone, I carried it to the address once when she stabbed her children to the heart. But it finished and was gone, and the next moment she had moved away from my side and I had stepped to the door. As I opened it to pass out I caught one glimpse of the bride as she came down the stairs. She looked exquisite in her simple white dress, and her face was wreathed in smiles.

CARDWELL'S CHOICE.

THE Cardwell Conservative convention was held at Bolton on Tuesday last to choose a candidate to represent Cardwell in the Local Legislature. A very large attendance was present, delegates coming from every polling division in the constituency. A good number of speakers addressed the assemblage. Each speaker announced himself as in hearty accord with Mr. Meredith's platform.

Eleven candidates were nominated, but they all retired except W. H. Hammell, Dr. Law and Houghton Lennox. On the second ballot Mr. Lennox was declared the choice of the convention. Mr. Lennox is a rising young barrister of Barrie, and would certainly make a good representative.

Everything passed off quietly and satisfactorily. The meeting closed with cheers for the Queen, Sir John and Mr. Lennox.

HALDIMAND'S VERDICT.

[The Empire.]

THE election of Dr. Montague by a very handsome majority to represent the people of Haldimand in the House of Commons affords strong evidence that the Conservative statesmen, whose policy he supports, not only retain the confidence of the electorate, but are growing in popularity. The constituency may be warmly congratulated on this triumphant victory, which has secured for it the services of the man of its choice in spite of the most unscrupulous efforts to falsify their verdict. Their perseverance and fidelity to their principles, in the face of the most strenuous opposition and in defiance of the most unworthy tactics, have been fitting rewarded. They will be represented in the Parliament of Canada by one who will do them credit and will maintain in the most able manner the policy which they have at heart. They have the satisfaction of knowing that while thus benefitting themselves they have rendered good service to their country by sending to its great council one who has made his mark in it, and has been regarded as one of its most promising members. Dr. Montague has been greatly missed in the House while his place has been temporarily usurped by an unauthorized intruder, and his return to the arena will be welcomed by all but those who have learned to dread his prowess.

To Dr. Montague himself we must tender our warm congratulations. He has stood to his colors throughout a series of conflicts that might have made a less resolute man and one less confident of the goodness of his cause retire from the field. His manly perseverance has now been rewarded by a signal victory, which should convince his opponent of the futility of further attempts to repress him and to deprive his constituents of their chosen representative.

The verdict of Haldimand is a striking indication of the current of public opinion in the Dominion. The reaction of which the Opposition journals have been boasting is apparently further off than ever. The invitation to withdraw their confidence from their chosen statesmen, and transfer it to the Opposition leaders, has been answered by a stronger declaration in favor of the Conservative standard-bearer. The people of Canada have again shown most unmistakably that they believe in the thoroughly Canadian policy of the Macdonald Administration and have no sympathy with the shifting tactics and factious efforts of the Opposition. The verdict of Haldimand presages that which the country at large will render when the time for pronouncing it arrives.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

WE are not going to call Dr. Montague bad names because he has been elected, but he is certainly a Tory healer. —Globe. This is a step in the right direction, and something the public will feel thankful for.

THE Orange bill, with but slight amendment, passed safely through the Banking & Commerce committee yesterday. Mr. Carnan announced that he would move an important amendment when the measure came up in the House.

SIR JOHN THOMPSON'S amendment to Dalton McCarthy's dual language bill was carried by a majority of ninety-nine in the Dominion Parliament on Friday. One hundred and forty-nine voted for the amendment, and fifty against. Fourteen members were absent. R. S. White, Cardwell, was with the majority, while Messrs. Semple, Centre Wellington, and McMullen, North Wellington, were with the minority.

The Grand Trunk is adopting a novelty that all travellers will appreciate. This is a station indicator. In one end of the car is a box filled with cards containg the name of each station on the route. When a train starts out a cord attached to a lever in the box is pulled and a card drops into view showing the the name of the next station. Thus every passenger who is not blind may know the station the train is approaching without making any effort of inspiration to interpret the cingermatical calls of the trainmen.

The Dr.'s Great Victory.

HALDIMAND GLORIOUSLY REDEEMED.

MAJORITY FOR DR. MONTAGUE 246.

CAYUGA, Feb. 26.—Polling today signalized the final redemption of the grand old constituency of Haldimand. The Reformers have not only been defeated, they have been routed all along the line and driven into the last ditch. The majority for the popular Conservative candidate, Dr. Montague, will reach nearly 200.

This result is the outcome not alone of that confidence which accrues to good government, but is attributable in a certain degree to hard work and good organization. At the time that Mr. William Hamilton Merritt first took up the standard in what, up to that time, had been considered a hopelessly Reform constituency, and during his two elections was laid the foundation of a party organization that has since been perfected, and that now ensures the full vote being polled as it was polled today. Added to this, the effective work done in the campaign by the candidate himself, and by such workers as Col. Tisdale, M.P., J. C. Patterson, M.P., Alfred Boultbee, Wm. Hamilton Merritt, Secretary Robt. Birmington, Colin Snyder, and a score of local and outside helpers, rendered success certain. It has been a glorious campaign, and the result has been not alone a complete vindication of the policy of the Government of which Dr. Montague is so able a supporter, but a protest by the honest sentiment of the people against the corrupt practices of which Mr. Coulter and his partizans were found guilty in the courts of the land.

Dr. Montague's majority was 246.

IN THE SOUTH.

BUREAU SOUTHERN NEWS,
RALEIGH, N. C.

The great desire of the general public is to know what is transpiring throughout the civilized world. Many northern people think the South is a part of the uncivilized; that it is inhabited by mosquitoes, negroes, and cut throat and aristocratic whites; that it is largely covered with swamps, and that there is little in the section to commend it to the best class of people. The majority of the writers and correspondents of the Southern News Bureau are of northern birth, and the General Manager takes this opportunity to say that he has selected them equally from the two great parties, Republican and Democratic; and that a truthful, fair and candid statement of facts as they exist and transpire in this part of the Union, shall be given.

Your readers are doubtless interested in the manner of living of the southern people; what the land is capable of producing; how the farmers plant and harvest; how cotton, rice, peanuts, sugar cane and oranges are cultivated. All these subjects will be taken up and interesting pen pictures of "down in Dixie" will be givin. The news of the day will be reported. The readers of the letters will be kept fully posted as to what the Southerners are doing in the industrial world. For instance, it is reported this week that the greatest smoking tobacco factory in the world, "The Durham Bull" of Durham, N. C., has been purchased by an English syndicate for three and a half million dollars This business was owned equally by a southern and a northern firm, and was started not many years ago with less than ten thousand dollars.

Those interested in the mineral resources will be posted as to the latest news in this line. We have this week the great gold find in Montgomery County, N. C., where in less than a week, in one spot, there was taken out of surface or placer mines by cradle working, one hundred and fifty thousand dollars worth of the precious metal.

Those who think the South is one vast stretch of sand and swamp are very much mistaken. There are lofty mountains of more than six thousand feet elevation; fertile valleys through which flow streams that afford many opportunities for the utilization of power by the capitalists and manufacturer; immense forests of oak, hickory, walnut and other woods; beautiful hills covered with native grass and underlaid with almost every known mineral and precious stone. It was a northern man's good fortune to find in the South a mine from which is taken a stone more rare that the diamond, and equalling it in value. This mine was discovered by Prof. Hidden, and in honor of him the stones are termed Hiddenites. Among the mountains the trout fishermen finds the finest sport, while the woods and fields abound with quail. The largest sporting club in America owns the right of hunting over a wide territory in the Piedmont section and has an annual trial of bird dogs.

It is about this wonderful unknown Southland that we propose to furnish information from week to week. One of the principal features will be our descriptive letters, 'How to make money at farming in the South." We will start out next week with 'The physical geography of the South," and follow with "How cotton is planted and cultivated." With this letter we send to the editor a package of cotton seed so that those interested in the subject may see the seed of the plant from which the larger part of our clothing is made. The seed will germinate and grow if planted in hothouses about the first of May; so the lady friends of the editor can speak in advance for a cotton seed plant.

We will treat of the humorous side of life down South. Hon Uncle Sambo and Aunt Dinah speak their happy, contented lives with song and jolly, health giving fun. The letters will be made amusing, interesting and instructive.

UNPRECEDENTED SUCCESS.—The interest that the public take in the great sale of Bankrupt Stock now going on at the old stand of Gilchrist & Kent is still unabated. It is the chief subject that engrosses their attention. It is sufficient to say that the sale is a genuine Clearing sale, and the public know it. One of the largest, best selected and most carefully purchased stocks that was ever placed in this town is now being sold at lower prices than will ever be quoted in this town again. There is a tremendous rush, and there are wonderful bargains given. The customers exhibit the greatest patience waiting for their turn to be waited on. Come early and get a share of the bargains.

A FATAL FALL.—A despatch from Wingham dated the [illegible] says: "Mr. William Johnston, [illegible] resident of Wingham, and who for many years has supplied the people of the town with milk, fell on the doorstep of the Congregational parsonage where he had been attending service. He was that day night, and sustained concussion of the brain, never having regained consciousness." Deceased was the father of Mr. William Johnston, tailor, of this town.

THE SUNNY SOUTH.—In this issue of our paper is a preliminary letter from the Bureau of Southern News. Next week we furnish our readers with "The physical geography of the South," to be followed by "How cotton is grown." We are promised a package of cotton seed and our readers and the public are invited to visit our office and inspect the seed. This letter will be of special interest to the farmers. Those who are not already subscribers to our paper should come forward and give us their names so they can from week to week learn something about farming down in "Dixie."

A POINTER FOR REPORTERS.—This is how an accomplished society reporter on a Dakota paper gives its readers an idea of a soiree, with a description of the costumes worn by the ladies of the party: "Mary Munroe, red frock, [illegible] neck, and hair bunched; Emma Latrobe yellow dress and high-heeled slippers; Marion Willoughby [illegible] red of this stuff, white, and tied up with blue tape, and hair frizzled; Jennie Murchinson, black cloths and a feather in her hair; Ella Wexford, red hair and eyes, built fast in front and stuck out behind; Pauline Tasley, dressed to the top branches—she had a velvet outfit a mile long and 16 rows of teeth on her gloves—her hair was a dead yellow, tied up like a bun, and had a lot of vegetables in it; Florence Ross, green dress, flipped with velvet, and hoisted up at one side with a white check rein; Vinnie Hammersly, white network with red streak, and hair frescoed."

HEATHENISH PRACTICES.—A Literary correspondent this week refers to the treatment and subsequent death of a baby in that locality. If the case is correct we say it is high time that such heathenish practices were stopped. We yield the palm to none in our liberality so far as a man's religion is concerned, but when it comes to allowing innocent babes to suffer and die through neglect in not making use of common sense methods to secure their restoration to health, we cannot and will not keep quiet. All the prayers and ceremonies known to Latter Day Saintism, or Joe Smithism, will not heal a broken limb or cure a deceased body without the use of the means Providence has placed within our reach, and all who rely on such prayers and ceremonies under these circumstances are morally, if not legally, guilty of murder should the patient succumb.—Shelburne Economist.

ORANGEVILLE VICTORIOUS.—On Thursday the Owen Sound and the Orangeville gun clubs met on the exhibition grounds here to compete in their second match. The day was unfavorable for shooting, which accounts for the low score. J. E. Duff, Orangeville's crack shooter, and J. J. Crealey, Owen Sound, shot for a purse of $25. Duff succeeded in making a full run of ten live pigeons, while Douglas brought down only seven. Several sweepstakes were also shot for. The score at the match appears below:—

PERSONAL.

Dr. Bonnar, of Mono Mills, was in town yesterday.

Councillor R. Kearns, of Tecumseth, brother of ex Deputy Reeve Kearns, spent a few days in town last week.

Mr. John Bunting, of the Mail job department, Toronto, called on THE SUN on Monday.

Mr. Wm. Johnston, tailor, was at Wingham for a few days last week.

Rev. Father Jeffcott, of Pickering, formerly of Orangeville, is in town.

Mr. Geo. Carson has secured a lucrative position in the Government printing bureau at Ottawa.

Mr. Robert Tweedy, of Honeywood, called into our office yesterday and renewed his subscription. Mr. Tweedy has been taking THE SUN ever since it started, and wouldn't be without it for anything.

Two attempts were made last week to wreck No. 20 M. C. R. express by placing ties and fence rails on the track. The first attempt was made east of Cornell, and the second west of Dufferin. In both instances the pilot of the engine threw the obstructions to one side. It is to be hoped that the wretches who committed these acts may be discovered and receive that punishment which they so richly deserve. A large reward will be offered for the arrest of the fiends.

The telephone cable between Point Pelee and Pelee Island was laid in August, 1888. Government reports for last year show that the cable, which is Dominion property, during the first 12 months of its existence not only paid for running expenses but earned a surplus of 33 cents.

SHELBURNE.

Rev. Mr. Boxing, of Tullamore, preached in the Methodist church on Sunday last.

Mrs. H. Phillips, who is about removing from town, was presented with a beautiful set of Dishes dishes by the ladies' Aid and the W. C. T. U.

Mr. John Polley, who has acted as secretary-treasurer of the Melancthon Agricultural Society for the past fifteen years, has resigned his office. Editor R. L. Mortimer was appointed secretary and Furnitureman Smith treasurer.

Economist.—We are sorry to have to report the death of James Jordan's baby. There was no doctor called in, but the Latter Day Saints decided it was congestion of the lungs. Of course their holy oil was capable of curing that. Strange to say the baby died. What would you call that? Murder or neglect, or what? Surely people will learn to let heathenism and its practices alone after this.

GRAND VALLEY.

A horse stopped on Mr. H. Donaghy's foot and injured it severely. Ex-reeve W. B. Jelly, of Amaranth, has purchased Mr. S. Davis' farm for the handsome sum of $1,725.

It is rumored that Hotelkeeper Smith, of Monticello, will apply for a liquor license, providing the present number of licenses will be increased.

The C. P. R. Manitoba exhibition car will be here tomorrow.

On Saturday week while the 'bus was coming from the station, it upset and threw four female occupants out. None of them were seriously hurt, but they received a bad shaking up.

The directors of the Mechanics' Institute will hold a meeting on Monday next, March 3rd.

The members of L.O.L. No. 256, of Grand Valley, and sixty visiting brethren had a sumptuous tea in the hall on Tuesday, the 28th inst. Music, songs, etc., were also on the program.

Rev. C. Scudamore has been laid up with inflammation of the eyes.

Tough & Hendry's creditors will meet at the Manning Arcade, Toronto, tomorrow, for ordering the affairs of the estate.

SALEM.

Salem folks are very sorry the snow has gone again, but they live in hopes of having some more yet.

Miss Martha Skelton is going to attend Miss Martha Leighton, of Cardwell as bridesmaid on Wednesday. A big time is looked for on the Centre road.

One night not very long ago Philosopher Carson was coming home from Orangeville, when at the third line corner la grippe seized him, and he has been unwell ever since.

Alex. Marshall lost a fine horse the week before last from indigestion.

Charles Scott got the shingles for his barn this week. He is going to put them on the first fine day.

William Bennett visits the stone house very frequently since the loved one has returned.

Several wedding presents have been purchased this last week. We think the bee-hive will soon be cleared out.

We heard Pink-eyed McGinty visited Blount Sunday last.

Mr. John Adair has purchased a 150-acre farm at Corbetton.

MONO MILLS.

AUCTION SALE.—Our usually quiet village was very lively for the last week or so, owing to the auction sale of dry goods, &c., which was then carried on. The mercantile benefactors have folded their tent, but the tailors here will be busy making "pants" for some time.

ROYAL ARCH.—On Tuesday week, the L.O.L. was opened for admission to the mysteries of the Royal Arch Purple degree. Thirteen candidates stood the ordeal out. All partook heartily of an sumptuous "Oyster Supper."

PARTIES.—Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather of late the young people around here are having their share of those lovely parties that last till the "wee sma' 'oors."

ALSO GLAD.—The Cardwell scribe to the Post is glad to assert the recovery of John McMaster. We are glad twice; 1st. Because of our acquaintance with the genial Johnny, and 2nd, because we anticipate an interesting time with Johnny's "Rangers" when the sap stirs in the toes of the spring grass.

Dr. Bonnar accomplished a feat which, we believe, has never been excelled. His tooth was aching one night last week so bad that he arose and extracted it. How's that for our Dr?

Our popular young painter is about to leave town. The reason assigned is that his best girl left the other day, and he is compelled to follow.

The Commercial's star boarder, H. D., is about to leave for ——, to follow the painter.

Tommy the Kid is in trouble again. This time over the payment of a board bill. The landlord has sued Tom, and the case will come up on the 8th of next month.

Clark, the Bolton knitter, who has held the fort here for the past two weeks, is laying off this week. He will, however, be back on Monday.

The people are complaining of the poor tayloring in Mono Mills. Wake up, Vedder, and get there!

In one of the new stores the mercury in the thermometer is always hovering around zero.

Dr. Bonnar has bought a grand, new double sulker, and, in consequence, is putting on lots of style.

CARDWELL.

Mr. Jack McMaster will, we are glad to say, now be himself again.

Miss L. Mathus is visiting relatives at London.

Mr. John Fleming, the farmer who lost his way in the fields while returning from Orangeville last week, has completely recovered from the effects of la grippe medicine.

Mr. and Miss Shaw, of Melville Cross, were visiting friends at Cardwell last week.

Cardwell can boast of having more handsome girls to the acre than any other hamlet of its size in Ontario. This is the centre of gaiety, and took out for weddings.

The Cardwell boys would like to know the name of the girl who John took to the show at Orangeville a short while ago.

FASHIONABLE WEDDING.—A very pleasing and ostentatious event took place at the residence of Mr. Joseph Leighton, Centre road, yesterday afternoon, when his eldest and accomplished daughter, Miss Martha J., was led to the hymeneal altar by Mr. William Feres, of East Garafraxa. Rev. G. H. Webb, pastor of Herald Angel church, was the officiating clergyman. The bride, who was handsomely attired, was attended by Miss Skelton, of East Mono. A dance took place in the evening, and eighty couple waltzed until late this morning.

A HAPPY TIME.—On Monday evening Mr. R. Jenkins, of the 1st line, gave a grand ball, at which a large number of friends and neighbors took part. The guests enjoyed themselves immensely until 5 o'clock A.M. Tuesday.

We wonder how the mechanic is getting along at Orangeville.

The Cardwell Ranger football club's postponed entertainment will take place in Morrison's hall, Camilla, on Wednesday, March 5th. Ticket holders for the last entertainment will be admitted without further charge.

A DEADLY DAM.

An Artificial Lake at Prescott, Ari., Breaks Loose.

PRESCOTT, ARI., Feb. 23.—The fine large storage dam built across Hassayampa river by the Walnut Grove Water Storage Company two years ago, at a cost of $300 000 gave way yesterday under the great pressure of the heavy flood and swept everything before it. Forty persons are known to have lost their lives. As the town of Wickenburg 30 miles below the dam, was on the same stream, great fears are entertained for the safety of that town, but as there is no telegraphic communication no news will be obtainable of its fate until tomorrow.

The service dam of the company, located fifteen miles below the reservoir, and fifteen miles of flume just approaching completion were also swept away, although the company has spent over $800,000 on the enterprise of storing the water. The hydraulic mining machine had arrived, and they expected to begin operations this week.

The dam which held the waters back was 110 feet long at the base and 10 at the top, forming a lake three miles in length by three-fourths of a mile wide and 110 feet deep.

Lieut. Brodie, in charge of the work was absent at Phœnix superintending the shipment of the machinery to the works, and was saved. Of those known to have been drowned were J. Haines, wife, and four children; H. Boone and daughters; John Silby; Joseph Reynolds, Mrs. McCarthy, and S. McMillar.

TERRIBLE DESTRUCTION.

Not the slightest doubt had been entertained of the safety of the dam across the Hassayampa river, which gave way yesterday. Numerous houses had been erected by miners at various points along the stream. These were uplifted by the raging waters as though they had been corks, and floated down the stream until they were dashed to pieces. The first intimation of the disaster was a sound resembling thunder, and at the same instant a perpendicular wall of water, fully fifty feet high, came rushing down the narrow valley with almost incredible speed. Fortunately they were but comparatively few people near the bottom of the hillsides, and of these a large number were warned by the awful sound and escaped to higher ground. The valley widens above Wickenburg, and much of the town lies upon the low lands close to the course of the stream, and it is almost certain that the vast body of water which rushed out of the reservoir has carried away many houses in that place. It is believed here that fully as many people were drowned there as immediately below the dam.

THE RUINED DAM.

The ruined dam is cut from the top almost to the bottom, as though a section had been dragged out, and the water above is only a few feet deep. Heavy rains had fallen for several days, and Friday night it was apparent that the water in the lake was approaching the danger line. The rain continued through out the night, and early yesterday morning the water rose to the top of the dam and cut a small passage near the centre, which rapidly widened and deepened as the water poured over it, until, in less than 20 minutes, the little stream had become a roaring cataract. The storage company is blamed for not providing a sufficient outlet for the water in times of danger.

STORAGE RESERVOIRS.

This is the first of the great storage reservoirs projected in the territory, and it is believed the disaster will operate to discourage the construction of similar dams.

LATER NEWS.

Arthur Allen and John McDonald have just been returned from the Octoria divide, fourteen miles south of the town, from where a view of the dam could be had with powerful glasses. The break in the stonework of the dam was plainly seen. There can be no estimate of the loss of life yet, or of property, but the latter will reach into millions, while the loss of life without doubt will be great, as many families were living near the stream in the narrow canyons. The confirmation of the news of the loss of the big dam has heightened the excitement. As the wires are now down near Prescott Junction, it is hardly probable any additional information will be received to night. A courier who brought telegrams for the owners of the Walnut Grove Dam arrived at 8 o'clock last night, and left this morning. He stated five bodies had been recovered and identified. The distance to the storage dam from Prescott is 40 miles, while the service dam where the employes were located is fifteen miles farther down the stream. It is from the latter place that the courier came.

PLEGGED OUT OF $2,700.

SUSQUEHANNA, Feb. 18.—Susquehanna county is greatly interested in a queer lawsuit. Philander Brown and his wife of Lathrop township were last week arrested and brought before Esquire Courtright, in Montrose, charged by Fred Hill of Lathrop with fleecing him out of $2,700. Hill says that Brown and his wife claimed to be spiritualists. They represented to him that Jesus Christ was in need of a large sum of money, and that Hill must supply it. Brown also said he had received letters asking for money and signed "Jesus Christ," and that he had also received letters purporting to have come from a deceased relative of Hill, saying that she was very much in need of money and clothes.

After one of the most exciting trials ever held in this county, Brown and his wife were held to bail, in default of which they were sent to jail. Brown now brings suit against Hill, and A. H. McCollum, his attorney, for damages amounting to $100,000, and also against Constable Orlando Watrous and Esquire Courtright for $10,000 each for false imprisonment.

THE ST. CLAIR TUNNEL.

An Engineering Project in Which Neither Brick Nor Stone are Used.

SIX hundred men are now digging the railroad tunnel under the St Clair River at Sarnia at the rate of 15 feet each day. This means that before the year is out one of the most important pieces of civil engineering in the country will be completed. More than 1,200 feet of the tunnel proper is now ready for trains on the Michigan side and 900 on the Canadian. The remaining 4,000 feet will be finished at a wonderfully rapid rate, considering the nature of the work, if no accident intervenes. It has taken six months to do the work thus far, but workmen are now more accustomed to the task and can work with greater facility in the use of the machinery, so that the engineers in charge place the completion of the work not later than the end of the year.

The tunnel itself is over 6,000 feet long. The approaches are equally long, so that the entire length will be more than two miles. Of this distance 2,310 feet are under the river, 2 390 feet on the Michigan land slide, and 2,100 on the Canadian. The grade is one foot in every fifty, except under the river bottom, where it is substantially level. It is an iron cylinder tunnel—the only one of the kind in the country. There is neither brick nor stone used in its construction. Neither are there any stays or supports—simply a mammoth iron tube built in sections underground. It is designed for single track.

Electric lights make it as light as day, air engines keep the atmosphere as healthy inside as above, and steam pipes hold the temperature at the proper point. It is as dry as a street in summer, and the disagreeable features common to subaqueous work are entirely absent. Work is pushed from both ends. The method of construction is simple. A great cylinder, weighing more 60 tons, 20 feet in diameter and 16 feet long, is driven into the blue clay, which constitutes the entire bottom of the river, by the use of hydraulic power with as much ease as cakes of soap can be carved out of a general mass. Inside this cylinder, which is called a shield, 22 men are at work removing the dirt. As fast as the shield is push ed forward, which is about two feet at a time, the clay thus brought inside the shield is dug out to the edge of the great cylinder. Then the hydraulic jacks are again started, and slowly but irresistably the immense iron tube moves another two feet into the solid earth ahead of it. Each jack has a power of 3,000 tons, and the combined power behind the shield is more than 400,000 tons.

Another ring of iron lining is put in to place, and each foot of tunnel is ready for track laying as fast as the work progresses. There is no mason work, as already stated, and when done the tunnel will practically be a continuous iron tube, 20 feet in diameter and nearly 7,000 feet long. The iron plates that form the lining are of such curvature and length that any 13 of them, with a small key piece, will make a circle 20 feet in diameter. The edges and ends are turned up, each piece being bolted by a dozen large bolts to its neighbor. Each one is 18 inches wide, and weighs as near 1,000 pounds as the foundries can make them. Those for the Michigan side are made in Detroit, and those for the Canadian in Hamilton, and thus the payment of duty is avoided. These great sheets are handled with cranes, and so rapidly that a complete circle is put up in about half an hour. The lining is about six inches thick, so that there is no danger of collapse from pressure. The ground through which the tunnel has passed thus far has been uniformly stiff blue clay. No water has yet been struck, an an occasional pocket of surface gas has been quickly disposed of by turning on a powerful current. The precaution has been taken, however, to provide for the contingency of striking a stratum of sand which might lead up to the river and let its waters down upon the subterranean workers. A compressed air arrangement is provided for use at once by which a pressure greater than that of the water above would keep the sand in place until the lining could be shoved under it and the danger be passed.

T. H. Murphy, who has charge of a portion of the work, says this tunnel will be the most economical one ever built, if no unforseen accidents happen. While employed on the Hudson River tunnel he was satisfied if his men made progress at the rate of 30 feet a day, but in the St Clair tunnel they averaged over 60 feet daily.

The cost of the tunnel, of course, cannot yet be stated with any approach to accuracy, but it will be very large—much larger than a second similar one would need to be, because so much experience has been acquired during the building of this one that could at once be made available without expense in the construction of another. The material is expensive, but the labor is of the cheapest. The diggers are paid 17½ cents per hour, the iron men receive 15 cents, and the remainder of the workmen 12½ cents. Aside from the engineering, there is no skilled labor.

Brakeman T. Buckley, of Pt. Edward, fell off the top of a freight car on Thursday morning, near York station, and was mangled under the wheels.

[illegible] Water in the Owen Sound harbor fell two feet eight inches in three minutes on Tuesday of last week.

A 'Soo team of horses, owned by Oliver Rahaus, of Sengrey, were drowned in that lake a short time ago.

A dog poisoner has let himself loose in Galt. A number of valuable pooches met their fate by the cut-throat.

A verdict of "wilful murder" has been returned by a coroner's jury in the case of Henry Smith, the London alleged murderer.

"AGE CANNOT WITHER HER," remarked an old gentleman, as he gazed fondly upon the comely little woman by his side; "but frankly," he continued, "at one time I was afraid cosmetics would. The silly little woman, in order to appear younger, plastered her face with different varieties of whitewash, 'pimple' balms, 'creams' and the rest." "Yes," interrupted the little woman, "I did, until my skin became like parchment and so plainly and coarse." "Well, my dear listener," "What do you use now?" "Why," was the reply, "nothing but common sense and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Common sense told me that if my blood was pure, liver active, appetite and digestion good, that the outward woman would take on the hue of health. The 'Discovery' did all these things and actually rejuvenated me." If you would possess a clear, beautiful complexion, free from blotches, pimples, eruptions, ugly spots and roughness, use the "Golden Medical Discovery." It is guaranteed to do all that it is claimed to, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded.

EAST LUTHER COUNCIL.

COURT ROOM, GRAND VALLEY, February 20, 1890.

The Council met to day as per adjournment of January 20th last. Members present—A. C. Gaviller, M.D., reeve; Dan. McLellan, deputy-reeve and W. S. Galbraith, councillor.

A letter was received from John McKee, stating his inability to attend through illness. John Barber was also unable to attend on account of sickness.

On motion of W. S. Galbraith and Dan McLellan the minutes of last meeting were adopted as read.

By-laws were duly introduced and passed appointing overseers of highways, fence viewers and pound keepers for the current year, as follows:—

Overseers of Highways.—Division No. 1, John Nairn, jr., 2, Robert Sims; 3, John King; 4, John Clayton; 5, Jas. J. Buchanan; 6, Geo. Tough; 7, Stephen Palmer; 8, Adam M. Harper; 9, David Desmond; 10, John Hall; 11, James Nichols; 12, James Eastwood; 13, Edward E. Dales; 14, Geo. L. Chatters; 15, Leo Grant Miller; 16, Alex M. McPherson; 17, James Tyner, 18, John MacAllister; 19, Samuel Benny; 20, Francis Brown; 21, Samuel Adair; 22, Conrad Schweitzer; 23, Marshall Millar; 24, Samuel Keast; 25, John Barber; 26, John Howlett; 27, George Lyon; 28, John A. Campbell; 29, James McEnery; 33, John Wilmott; 35, Matthew Robson; 36, Edward Holborn; 37, Thomas Barber; 38, George Platt; 39, Isaac Holborn; 49, Wm. Kirkland; 41, Edward Warrin; 42, Henry Duckworth; 43, Daniel Taylor; 44, Donald Blair; 45, James C. Scott; 46, Henry Colbeck; 47, Wm. Archibald; 48, John Graham; 49, John O'Reilly; 50, Robert Bruce; 51, Thomas McDonnell; 52, Weir McCulloch; 53, James A. Burkholder; 54, John Smart; 55, Wm. Wheeler; 56, Alex McDougall; 57, R. F. Taylor; 58, Stewart Tate; 59, Nelson Reaburn; 60, John Nicholl; 61, Wm. Rainey; 62, Jas. Sprint; 63, John McIntyre.

Pound Keepers.—James Jordan, H. Gilcock, Mark Baxter, Malcolm McNeelly, James I. Buchanan, George Clayton.

Moved by W. S. Galbraith, seconded by Dan. McLellan, that the following accounts be passed and that the Reeve issue his orders for the same:—Robert Jackson, taxes refunded for road work, the same having been done, $1.50; Messrs. Hart & Co., for stationery, $10; John McPherson, for printing, $16.50; R. E. Hamilton, express charges on stationery, 60 cents; G. H. Cooper and J. D. Watson, services as auditors to 1889 accounts, each $8; Messrs. Creed & Toy, for ledger for Treasurer, $150. Carried.

Moved by Dan. McLellan, seconded by W. S. Galbraith, that the petition from George Lyons and others from S. S. No. 10, and also the petition from John McArthur, from U. S. S. No. 2, be laid over until next meeting. Carried.

A petition was presented from Geo. Swain, signed by R. F. Taylor and 159 other ratepayers, praying that By-law No. 168 be amended so as to increase the number of tavern licenses in East Luther from two to three.

A counter petition was laid before the Council, signed by Walter Gordon and 197 other ratepayers, also one from the W.C.T.U., and one signed by Mrs. Levey and 64 other ladies. There was also a petition from the Royal Templars of Temperance signed by 55 of its members, as well as a petition from three resident clergymen.

After hearing the remarks for and against by the parties entereated, it was Moved by Dan McLellan, seconded by W. S. Galbraith, that no action be taken on the petition of R. F. Taylor and others, praying for an amendment of By-law 163 so as to admit a third license in East Luther. The mover, Mr. McLellan called for the yeas and nays. Yeas—A. C. Gaviller, Dan. McLellan and W. S. Galbraith; nays—none.

Moved by W. S. Galbraith, seconded by Dan. McLellan, that the auditors' report on the accounts for 1889 be adopted as read. Carried.

Moved by Dan. McLellan, seconded by W. S. Galbraith, that this Council take no action on the account of Geo. Johnston for allowing teams to go through his farm while the Council was repairing the bridge over the river, as the Council did not contract with him for any accommodation for the public. Carried.

Moved by W. S. Galbraith, seconded by Dan. McLellan, that all roads made or graded by this Council, or by the pathmasters, be a uniform width of at least 15 feet, and that the clerk attach a copy of this resolution to each pathmaster's list. Carried.

Moved by Dan McLellan, seconded by W. S. Galbraith, that all gravel bought by the Council and put on the road by the pathmasters must hereafter be properly boxed. Carried.

Moved by Dan McLellan, seconded by W. S. Galbraith, that John Barber and W. S. Galbraith be instructed to examine the road allowance between the 12th and 13th concessions, west of the Grand River, as to probable cost of cleaning it out, and report at next meeting of Council. Carried.

Moved by W. S. Galbraith, seconded by Dan McLellan, that John McPherson's tender of $60 for the printing of the current year be adopted, including the necessary number of voters' lists, auditors reports, copies of minutes, tax receipts, ballot papers, advertising court of revision, judge's court (if any), and first posting of voters lists, nomination notices and financial annual statement. Carried.

The Council then adjourned, to meet again on Monday, the 2nd day of June, at 10 o'clock A.M., as a court of revision and for the transaction of other business.

R. E. HAMILTON, Clerk.

The following picture of Dakota is drawn by the Chicago Herald, and it cannot be said that the artist is unduly prejudiced against the State:—"Dakota is the only absolutely bankrupt and pauper State on the map. Its very indigence would have been a sufficient reason for continuing its territorial status. But universal and shameless pauperism is a positive ornament and attraction compared with the social depravity of the North Dakota people. Within the first year of its existence, the new State has displayed all the moral recklessness and shamelessness that characterized the mining camps of California in the '49s." The Canadian North-west offers the reverse of this picture.

Now's The Time.

Never put off till to-morrow
That which needs doing to day.
If you do you may find to your sorrow,
Too late, that you've trifled away
the golden opportunity of a lifetime. If those who complain of weakness and debility, have hacking cough and pain in the side or chest, poor appetite, broken sleep and other symptoms of a general decay of vitality, would promptly procure Dr Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and take it as directed, they might throw off the disease which threatens them, and soon regain a hold on the health they are surely losing. Consumption may be averted, if prompt measures are taken, by the use of this standard remedy. Let those who have reason to feel that their general vitality is running low be wise and do something for themselves at once, for delays are dangerous. "Golden Medical Discovery" is warranted to benefit or cure in all cases of disease for which it is recommended, or money paid for it refunded.

Thomas Cranswick, of Whitchurch, has brought action against Ezra Clubine for $2,000 damages for injuries sustained by plaintiff by a bull owned by the defendant.

Dizziness Caused by Dyspepsia.

DIZZINESS is a symptom of dyspepsia. "I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for dizziness, which came over me in spells, so that I had to quit work for a while. The B. B. B. entirely cured me." JAMES WRIGHT, Chesterfield, Ont.

It is said that the Rev Sam Jones is going to try his hand at farming.

Across The Continent.

In thousands of households all over Canada the merits of Yellow Oil, the great family medicine, are well known. It is esteemed as one of the best cures for rheumatism, lumbago, neuralgia, sore throat, croup, quinsy, sprains, bruises, burns and all pain. Used externally.

Tilsonburg is troubled by female thieves.

A Life Record.

I HAD been troubled for about 35 years with biliousness and liver complaint, and after using about three bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters I feel entirely relieved, and have not had an attack for two years." JOSIAH GAMEY, Eazwell, Ont.

A steam flour mill was burnt in Meaford last Thursday morning. Loss is estimated at $25,000.

Remarkable Cure of an Ulcer.

SIRS,—Two years ago I had an ulcer on ankle. Knowing Burdock Blood Bitters to be a good blood purifier, I got a bottle and a box of Burdock Healing Ointment, and after using three bottles and three boxes I was completely cured, and recommend B. B. B. everywhere. MRS. W. V. BOYD, Brantford, Ont.

A new high school will be built in Meaford shortly.

Dr. Low's Worm Syrup has removed tape worms from 15 to 30 feet long. It also destroys all other kinds of worms.

The student who was charged with furnishing information regarding Johnston's body has been expelled from Kingston medical school.

WANTED AT ONCE.—A first class man, as agent for The Singer Sewing Machine, for Flesherton and surrounding country. A good situation for the right man. Apply to L. C. LAISHLEY, Agent, Barrie, Ont.

A Positive Danger.

MR. EDITOR,—It is a well-known fact that the majority of people are inclined to look on a cold in the head as a matter of little importance—involving at the worst only a temporary inconvenience. No more serious mistake was ever made. The neglected cold in the head in the course of catarrhal affections with which almost seventh-tenths of the people of this country are afflicted, and catarrh itself is too often the preliminary stages to consumption and death. The symptoms of catarrh are manifold, but among them may be mentioned, offensive breath; dull, oppressive headache; offensive droppings from the nostrils into the throat and bronchial tubes; deafness or partial deafness; constant hawking and spitting; weak and watery eyes; a hacking cough and feeling of general debility; ringing in the ears and frequent dizziness. These are but a few of the more general symptoms, and those who experience them should lose no time in applying a remedy—delays are proverbially dangerous and in the case of this too prevalent disease may lead to death. We offer Nasal Balm to the public as a POSITIVE CURE for cold in the head and for catarrh in all its forms and stages. Nasal Balm has been tested in thousands of cases, and the testimonials in our possession prove that it is all that we claim for it. It has cured other sufferers—it will cure you. It is easy to use, pleasant and agreeable and does not require a douche, or any lacturing instrument to apply it. Give it a trial and be convinced of its great efficacy. Sold by all dealers or sent post free on receipt of price—50c for small or $1 for large size bottles, by addressing FULFORD & Co., Brockville, Ont.

Poetry.

IT SEEMS BUT YESTERDAY.

It seems but yesterday that May
The joyous had passed to stay;
A moment longer then I could take
To set her vigorous peer and fair,
In cold and frost, the dower snare
To set the graves all aslake;
To kiss the world into a blush
Of lover roses, pink and flush,
For sunbeams wild.

It seems but yesterday that June
Came piping sweet a medley tune,
When to the robin and the thrush
Lout each his thrilling throat, the while
They lounged there beside the stile,
Deep hid in tangled weed and brush,
Spun out the season's skein of heat,
With not a "whir" of shuttle fleet,
And not a hush.

It seems but yesterday, and yet
To-day I found my garden set
In silver, and the roisterer wind
Made bold to pluck me by the gown
While time I wandered up and down
The path, to see if left behind
Was one last rose that I might press
Against my withered cheek, and less
Feel time unkind.

ACROSS THE YEARS.

A hand of love at strength appears,
A hand reached out across the years,
To bring me youthful treasure green.
Unmindful of the graves between,
Alas! it cannot be. The past
Its wrecks around our feet has cast,

Of those whose paths together led,
Ere youthful hopes and dreams were dead,
Some wander far in lands unknown,
Where they have learned to live alone,
Some lie at rest, with cold hand pressed
Above the quiet of their breast,

Is life the same? Can we forget?
Will south's sun rise when it has set?
Love's lesson then can we unlearn,
And to the eastern glory turn?
Will buried love arise at length,
Again rejoicing in his strength?

Ah me, my friend. Yet thee I greet
With pleasant memories and sweet.
We clasp our hands in peace at last
Across the gulf of sorrows past,
And looking upward through our tears,
We gain a glimpse of heavenly years.

PROVERBS IN ALPHABET ORDER.

A grain of produce is worth a pound of chaff.

Boasters are cousins to liars.

Confession of a fault makes half amends.

Denying a fault doubles it.

Every shooteth at others and woundeth himself.

Foolish fear doubles danger.

God reaches us good things by our hands.

He has hard work who has nothing to do.

It costs more to revenge wrongs than to put them.

Knavery is the worst trade.

Learning makes a man fit company for himself.

Modesty is a guard to virtue.

Not to hear conscience is the way to silence it.

Our sour to-day is worth two to morrow.

Proud looks make foul work in fair faces.

Quiet consciences give quiet sleep.

Rich est is he that wants least.

Small faults indulged are little thieves that let in greater.

The boughs that bear most hang lowest.

Upright walking is sure walking.

Virtue and happiness are mother and daughter.

Wise men make more opportunities than they find.

You never lose by doing a good act.

Zeal without knowledge is fire without light.

"The Jingling of the Guinea Helps the Hurt that Honor Feels."

But there are deeper hurts than those that honor feels. The seeds of disease are sometimes early sown, the system is secretly and insidiously giving away to some deep seated malady. Especially among females are many sufferings from inflammation, ulceration, prolapsus, and other displacements; weak back, sick headache, nervousness and kidney diseases. For all these affections peculiar to women no surer remedy than Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, prepared for the special benefit can be found. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee, from the manufacturers that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle wrapper and faithfully carried out for many years.

Hardense—I see you advertise a clerk today. Mr. Quick-sales—Yes, sir. Have you any fifty seventh applicants? Hardense—The position is still vacant. Yes, I will do. Miss Hardense—Oh, he doesn't want a position as saleslady. Mr. Quicksales—You don't? Miss Hardense—No; but I would like to get a job as saleswoman. Mr. Quicksales—Sit right down. James take the lady's name, and put her down for $25 a week.

Treat An Old Friend.

Old friends are best, and if ever sufferers have found an old friend, Hagyard's Yellow Oil can justly claim the distinction. Pain never stays long where it is used, while for croup it is specific. Parents should keep it in the house as a safeguard against accidents, frost bites, chilblains, sprains, bruises, burns, etc.

"Well mum, I must be a-fixin' livin' today," announced the cook. "What do you mean? Why are you going?" asked her astonished mistress. "I am going to be married next week," was the reply. "But surely, Bridget, you will not leave me so suddenly. You must ask him to wait for you a few days." "Oh, I couldn't mum." "Why not, Mary?" "Sure, mum, I'd loike to oblige you, but I don't feel enough acquainted with him to ask such a thing."

The great majority of so-called cough cures do little more than impair the digestive functions and create bile. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, on the contrary, while it cures the cough, does not interfere with the functions of either stomach or liver.

SUNBEAMS.

Our fiercest pain—the window pane.

A bend to the wise is one always easily eaten.

Spare the rod and let the child carry it home.

It's a wise fly that knows a bald head in spite of its wit.

Cold as it may be no man cares for a coat on his tongue.

Promising is as easy as forgetting that you promised.

Give a woman a scalskin, and she dreams of diamonds.

Never ask a woman what she is doing when she is trying to sing.

A few stiff horses will make many a timid man a pugnacious bull.

Talking about real estate, the dead man is always contented with his lot.

Will somebody please inform us if a skeleton key will open a deadlock.

A saloon is like a harbor—most of the wrecks are to be found outside the bar.

Nature has wisely arranged matters so a man can neither pat his own back nor kick himself.

Unsightly pimples, blotches, tan and all itching humors of the skin are removed by using Dr. Low's Sulphur Soap.

"Poets must suffer before they can write," says a philosopher. After that it is other people who suffer.

The horse car conductor is like the pugilist, because he punches a great deal and knocks down book readily.

Sweeping reduction in prices of watches, clocks, jewelery and silverware at Fox's.

"Does it pay to gamble?" asks an exchange. To a casual observer it might seem to depend on the hand you hold.

$500 is offered by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy for an incurable case. 50 cts.

A watch and clock company having failed, one of the creditors remarked that "they would have an awful time winding up their business."

A nice line of Gold Spectacles and Eye Glasses at Fox's.

A—I have just discovered what it is that destroys memory most completely. B—"Alcohol?" "No." "Tobacco?" "No." "Morphine?" "No. It's doing a man a favor."

"Papa, dear, why do those waterproof soles called "Gutta Percha?" "Because, my love they enable you to perch in the gutter without getting wet."

A lady writer asks—Why don't bachelors marry? That's it, why don't they? Come to think about it, we have never seen a bachelor who was married. It's lamentable, too.

Yabsley—"I would rather talk to a good, sensible girl any time than dance." Wickshire—"Well, why don't you do so?" Yabsley—(sorrowfully)—"They won't listen to me."

Thomo's agreeable, restorative tonic and mild stimulant is Milburn's Beef, Iron and Wine.

"Is that tall, fine-looking girl really engaged to that mean-looking little chap? He doesn't reach to her shoulder." "I believe so; but he's quite a brilliant fellow I hear from an intellectual point of view." "Ah! then it's his depth, not his height, she looks to."

The latest story concerning the precocity of children is to the following effect:—A new nurse was putting her little charge (a boy) to bed with the good old nursery rhyme: "Hush a-bye baby, on the tree top." The youngster opened his eyes and said: "I may as well tell you at once, nurse, that such stale old rubbish won't do for me."

CATARRH,

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS—HAY FEVER

A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N.B.—This treatment is not a snuff or an ointment; both have been discarded by reputable physicians as injurious. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 303 West King Street, Toronto, Canada.—Toronto Globe.

Sufferers from Catarrhal troubles should carefully read the above.

The horny handed workman calls it "pay," the skilled mechanic "wages," the city clerk "salary," the banker "income," the landowner "revenue," a lawyer "fees," the burglar "swag" but it all comes to the same thing at the end of the week.

The Teacher

Who advised her pupils to strengthen their minds by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, appreciated the truth that bodily health is essential to mental vigor. For persons of delicate and feeble constitution, whether young or old, this medicine is remarkably beneficial. Be sure you get Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring and fall I take a number of bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and am greatly benefited."—Mrs. James H. Eastman, Stoneham, Mass.

"I have taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla with great benefit to my general health."—Miss Thirza L. Crerar, Palmyra, Md.

"My daughter, twelve years of age, has suffered for the past year from

General Debility.

A few weeks since, we began to give her Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Her health has greatly improved."—Mrs. Harriet H. Battles, South Chelmsford, Mass.

"About a year ago I began using Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for debility and neuralgia resulting from malarial exposure in the army. I was in a very bad condition, but six bottles of the Sarsaparilla, with occasional doses of Ayer's Pills, have greatly improved my health. I am now able to work, and feel that I cannot say too much for your excellent remedies."—F. A. Pinkham, South Molunous, Me.

"My daughter, sixteen years old, is using Ayer's Sarsaparilla with good effect."—Rev. S. J. Graham, United Brethren Church, Buckhannon, W. Va.

"I suffered from

Nervous Prostration,

with lame back and headache, and have been much benefited by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I am now 40 years of age, and am satisfied that my present health and prolonged life are due to the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—Lucy Mullen, Killingly, Conn.

Mrs. Ann H. Farnsworth, a lady 70 years old, So. Woodstock, Vt., writes: "After several weeks' suffering from nervous prostration, I procured a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken half of it my usual health returned."

HOSPITAL REMEDIES

THE THREE STARS

HEALTH

No. I. CATARRH, Hay Fever or Catarrhal Deafness.

Will absolutely and permanently cure the most aggravated case of Catarrh. This is not a snuff or ointment, both of which are discarded by reputable physicians as wholly worthless and generally injurious. Ask for Hospital Remedy for Catarrh. N.B.—This is the only Catarrh Remedy on the market which remains from odoriferous material. PRICE $1.00.

HAPPINESS

No. IV will eradicate all troubles of the LIVER AND KIDNEYS, and permanently cure Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation, Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, Catarrh of the Stomach and Bladder. This is a marvellous medicine. It rapidly makes GOOD BLOOD AND LOTS OF IT. AND THEREIN IS LIFE. There is not a blood medicine in the market as good as this. It is positively the most powerful and purely vegetable blood purifier in the world. Suitable for old or young. ASK FOR HOSPITAL REMEDY FOR LIVER AND KIDNEYS. PRICE $1.00.

HOPE

No. VIII General & Nervous Debility. This is a most powerful and invigorating remedy for Nervous Debility, Want of Nerve Force and Energy, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Pain in the Back, Dizziness, Sexual Weakness, Impotency, Premature Decay, Wasting Diseases, Lassitude, Pain in the Spine, Kidneys, Nervous Prostration, Loss of Power, Wakefulness, Mental Anxiety, Lack of Confidence, Loss of Memory, Universal Lassitude, Pain in the Back, Dimness of Vision, Premature Old Age, Loss of Power in Either Sex, Involuntary Losses, Spermatorrhœa, Impotency, Syphilis, Hypochondria, Hysteria, Epilepsy, Fits, Convulsions, Nervous Neuralgia, Headache, Nervous Prostration caused by the excessive use of Opium, Tobacco or Stimulants, and other causes. Full particulars in our pamphlet, which we desire to send free by mail to everybody. The Hospital Remedy for General Debility. Price $1.00.

Read this extract from the scientific papers of Great Britain and Europe!

The four greatest medical centres of the world are London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna. These cities have immense hospitals teeming with suffering humanity. Crowds of students throng the wards studying under the Professors in charge. The most renowned physicians of the world teach and practise here, and the institutions are storehouses of medical knowledge and experience. With a view of making this experience available to the public the Hospital Remedy Co. at great expense secured the prescriptions of these hospitals, prepared the specifics, and although it would cost from $25 to $100 to secure the attention of their distinguished originators, yet in this way their prepared specifics are offered at the price of the quack patent medicines that flood the market and absurdly claim to cure every ill from a single bottle.

HOSPITAL REMEDIES

ONE DOLLAR EACH.

TO BE HAD OF ALL DRUGGISTS OR OF THE HOSPITAL REMEDY COMPANY, Sole Proprietors, TORONTO, CANADA.

CIRCULARS DESCRIBING THESE REMEDIES SENT ON APPLICATION.

An Irish soldier being asked if he met with much hospitality in Holland replied that he was in the hospital nearly all the time he was there.

Every man thinks he is about right himself. An old quaker said to his wife: "All the world is queer except thee and me, and thee is a little queer."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Though good health is preferable to high honour, how regardless people often are of the former—how covetous of the latter! Many suffer their strength to drain away ere maturity is reached, through ignorance of the facility afforded by these incomparable Pills of checking the first untoward symptoms of derangement, and reinstating order without interfering in the least with their pleasure or pursuits. To the young especially it is important to maintain the highest digestive efficiency, without which the growth is stunted, the muscles become lax, the frame feeble, and the mind sickly. The removal of indigestion by these Pills is so easy that none save the most thoughtless would permit it to sap the spring of life.

Stop that CHRONIC COUGH NOW!

For if you do not it may become permanent. For Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility and Wasting Diseases, there is nothing like

THE SUN

FOR

1890.

Some people agree with THE SUN's opinions about men and things, and some people don't; everybody likes to get hold of the newspaper which is never dull and never afraid to speak its mind.

Democrats know that for twenty years THE SUN has fought in the front line for Democratic principles, never swerving or weakening in its loyalty to the true interests of the party it serves with fearless intelligence and disinterested vigor. At times opinions have differed as to the best means of accomplishing the common purpose, but not THE SUN's fault if it has seen further into the millstone.

Eighteen hundred and ninety is the year that will probably determine the result of the Presidential election of 1892, and perhaps the fortunes of the Democracy for the rest of the century. Victory in 1890 is the best base to start out with THE SUN.

The Favorite

Medicine for Throat and Lung Diseases has long been, and still is, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It cures Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and Asthma; soothes irritation of the Larynx and Pharynx; strengthens the Vocal Organs; allays soreness of the Lungs; prevents Consumption, and even in advanced stages of that disease relieves Coughing and induces Sleep. There is no other preparation for the cases of the throat and lungs to be compared with this remedy.

"My wife had a distressing cough with pains in the side and breast. We tried various medicines, but none did her any good until I got a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which has cured her. A neighbor, Mrs. Olson, had been troubled with a severe cough for several years, and she speaks in the highest terms of the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have no hesitation in recommending it to every one afflicted."—Rob. A. Fisher, Foreman Monitight, Merrillan, Wis.

"I have been afflicted with asthma for forty years. Last spring I was taken with a violent cough, which threatened to terminate my days. Every one pronounced me in consumption. I was induced to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Its effects were magical. I was immediately relieved and continued to improve until entirely recovered."—Joel Goodrich, Guilford, Conn.

"Six months ago I had a severe cough, followed by soreness of the lungs, brought on by incessant cough which deprived me of sleep and rest. I tried various remedies, but obtained no relief until I began to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A few bottles of this medicine cured me."—Mrs. E. Coburn, 19 Second St., Lowell, Mass.

"For children afflicted with coughs, sore throat, or croup, I know of any remedy which gives more speedy relief than Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have found it invaluable in cases of Whooping Cough."—Mrs. Ann Lovejoy, 1257 Washington, Boston, Mass.

ODE TO MY LOST UMBRELLA

Dear departed shade, of thee I sing
My melancholy lay;
O, whither art thou wandering?
With whom went thou astray?
I stood thee by the wide porch-door
With unsuspecting mind,
And found but tear-drops on the floor,
Thy weeping left behind.

Perhaps a friend—some generous soul—
Of philanthropic ways,
To share with me a brief control,
Hath taken thee to raise.
But as good deeds are sometimes done
By mortals here below,
The hand that grasped thee for its own
The left hand ne'er may know.

But fare thee well, dear absent friend,
I'll ne'er thee can forget,
While droppings from above descend
My outer self to wet.
In every cloud, in every blow,
Thine image will arise,
To tell of fleeting things below
And point me to the skies.

O, generous friend, who'er thou art,
My "blessing" follow thee;
And though too modest to impart
Thy name or place to me,
Yet, sometime in the far-off land,
Someone from thee may tell
Why raindrops are in great demand,
And not our umbrella.

CHAPTER XXV.

THE FINAL BLOW

It was a deadly blow! a blow like that
Which swooping onwards from out the night,
Dashes a man from some high starlit peak
Into a void of cold and hurrying waves

THE distrust which I felt for Mrs. Pollard was so great that I was still uncertain as to whether she had given me the right address. I therefore proceeded to carry out my original design and went at once to the telegraph office. The message I sent was promptory and in the course of half an hour this answer was returned:

Person described, found. Condition critical. Come at once.

There was a train that left in fifteen minutes. Though I had just come from Boston, I did not hesitate to return at once. By six o'clock of that day I stood before the house to which I had been directed. My first sight of it struck me like death. God! what was I about to encounter! What sort of a spot was this, and what was the doom that had befallen the child committed to my care. Numb with horror, I rang the door-bell with difficulty, and when I was admitted by a man in the guise of an officer, I felt something like an instantaneous relief, though I saw by his countenance that he had anything but good news to give me.

"Are you the gentleman who telegraphed from S——?" he asked.

I bowed, not feeling able to speak.

"Relative or friend?" he went on.

"Friend," I managed to rally.

Do you guess what has happened?" he inquired.

"I dare not." I answered, with a fearful look about me on the walls that more than confirmed my suspicions.

"Miss Merriam is dead," he answered.

I drew a deep breath. It was almost a relief.

"Come in," he said, and opened the door of a room at our right. When we were seated and I had by careful observation made sure we were alone, I motioned for him to go on. He immediately complied. "When we received your telegram, we sent a man here at once. He had some difficulty in entering and still more in finding the young lady, who was hidden in the most remote part of the house. But by perseverance and some force he at last obtained entrance to her room where he found—pardon my abruptness, it will be a mercy to you for me to cut the story short—that he had been ordered here too late; the young lady had taken poison and was on the point of death.

The horror in my face reflected itself faintly in his.

"I do not know how she came to this house, he proceeded; "but she must have been a person of great purity and courage; for though she died almost immediately upon his entrance, she had time to say that she preferred death to the fate that threatened her, and that no one would mourn her for she had no friends in this country, and her father would never hear how she died."

I sprang wildly to my feet.

"Did she mention no names?" I asked. "Did she not say who brought her to this hell of hells, or murmur even with her dying breath, one word that would guide us in fixing this crime upon the head of her who is guilty of it?"

"No," answered the officer, "no; but you are right in thinking it was a woman but what woman, the creature below evidently does not know."

Feeling that the situation demanded thought, I composed myself to the best of my ability.

"I am the Rev. David Barrons of S——," said I, "and my interest in this young girl is purely that of a humanitarian. I have never seen her. I do not even know how long she has been in this country. But I learned that a girl by the name of Grace Merriam had been beguiled from her boarding-place here in this city, and fearing that some terrible evil had befallen her, I telegraphed to the police to look her up."

The officer bowed.

"The number of her boarding-place?" asked he.

I told him, and not waiting for any further questions demanded if I might not see the body of the young girl.

He led me at once to the room in which it lay, and stood respectfully at the door while I went in alone. The sight I saw has never left me. Go where I will, I see ever before me that pure young face, with its weary look hushed in the repose of death. It haunts me, it accuses me. It asks me where is the noble womanhood that might have blossomed from this sweet bud, had it not been for my pusillanimity and love of life? But when I try to answer, I am stopped by that image of death, with its sealed lips and closed eyes never to open again—never, never, whatever my longing, my anguish, or my despair."

But the worst shock was to come yet. As I left the room and went stumbling down the stairs, I was met by the officer and led again into the apartment I had first entered on the ground floor.

"There is someone here," he began, "whom you may like to question."

Thinking it to be the woman of the house I advanced, though somewhat reluctantly, when a sight met my eyes that made me fall back in astonishment and dread. It was the figure of a woman dressed all in gray, with a dark-blue veil drawn tightly over her features."

"Good God!" I murmured, "who is this?"

"The woman who brought her here," observed the officer. "Farrell, there, has just found her."

And then I perceived darkly looming in the now heavy dusk the form of an other man, whose unconscious and business like air proclaimed him to be a member of the force.

"Her name is Sophie Preston," the officer continued, motioning to the woman to throw up her veil. "She is a hard character, and some day will have to answer for her many crimes."

Meanwhile, I stood rooted to the ground; the name, the face, were strange and neither that of her whom I had inwardly accused of this wrong

"I should like to ask the woman——" I commenced, but here my eyes fell upon her form. It was tall and it was full but it was not by any means handsome. A fearful possibility crossed my mind. Approaching the woman closely, I modified my question.

"Are you the person who took this young lady from her boarding place?" I asked.

"Yes, sir," was the reply, uttered in smooth but by no means cultivated tones.

"And by what arts did you prevail upon this young and confiding creature to leave her comfortable home and go out into the streets with you?"

She did not speak, she smiled. O heaven! what depths of depravity opened before me in that smile!

"Answer!" the officer cried.

"Well, sir, I told her," she now replied; that, "that I was such and such a relative, grandmother. I think I said; and being a dutiful child——"

But I was now close up to her side, and, leaning to her very ear I interrupted her.

"Tell me on which side of the hall was the parlor into which you went."

"The right," she answered, without the least show of hesitation.

"Wrong," I returned; "you have never been there."

She looked frightened.

"O, sir," she whispered, "hush! hush! If you know——" And there she stopped; and instantly cried aloud, in a voice that warned me I should make nothing by pressing my suspicions at this time and in this place. "I lured the young lady from her home and I brought her here. If it is a criminal act I shall have to answer for it. We all run such risks now and then."

To me, with my superior knowledge of all the mysteries which lay behind this pitiful tragedy, her meaning was evident. Whether she had received payment sufficient for the punishment possibly awaiting her, or whether she had been frightened into assuming the responsibility of another, she was evidently resolved to sustain her role of abductress to the end.

The look she gave me at the completion of her words intensified this conviction; and not feeling sufficiently sure of my duty to dispute her at the present time, I took advantage of her determination, and outwardly, if not inwardly, accepted her confession as true.

I therefore retreated from her side, and being anxious to avoide the corner, who was likely to enter at any minute I confined myself to asking a few leading questions, which being answered in a manner seemingly frank, I professed myself satisfied with the result, and hastily withdrew.

CHAPTER XXVI.

A FELINE TOUCH.

Then hast half the power to do me harm,
as I have to be hurt. —Overbury.

The tumult in my mind and heart were great, but my task was not yet completed, and till it was I could neither stop to analyze my emotions nor measure the depths of darkness into which I had been plunged by so concurrence as threatening to my peace as it was pitiful to my heart. Mrs. Pollard was to be again interviewed, and to that formidable duty everything bowed, even my need of rest and the demand which my whole body made for refreshment.

It was eight o'clock when I stood for the second time that day at her door; and, contrary to my expectations, I found as little difficulty in entering as I had before. Indeed, the servant was even more affable and obliging than he had been in the afternoon, and persisted in showing me into a small room off the parlor, now empty of guests, and going at once for Mrs. Pollard.

"She will see you, sir, I am sure," was his last remark as he went out of the door, "for though she is very tired, she told me if you called to ask you to wait."

I looked around on the somewhat desolate scene that presented itself, and doubingly shook my head. This seeming submission on the part of the woman so indomitable as she, meant something. Either she was thoroughly frightened or else she meditated some treachery. In either case I needed all myself command. Happily, the scene I had just quitted vividly impressed upon my mind, and while it remained so, I felt as strong and unassailable as I had once felt weak and at the mercy of my fears.

I did not have to wait long. Almost immediately upon the servant's call, Mrs. Pollard entered the room and stood before me. Her first glance told me all. She was frightened.

"Well?" she said, in a hard whisper and with a covert look around as if she feared the very walls might hear us. "You have found the girl and you have come to ask for money. It is a reasonable request, and if you do not ask too much you shall have it. I think it will heal all wounds."

My indignation flared up through all my horror and dismay.

"Money?" I cried, "money? what good will money do the dead; you have killed her, madam."

"Killed her?" No wonder she grew pale, no wonder she half gasped. "Killed her?" she repeated.

"Yes," I returned, not giving her time to think much less speak. "Lured by you to a den of evil, she chose to die rather than live on in disgrace. The woman who lent you her clothes has been found, and,—I see I have reached you at last," I broke in. "I thought God's justice would work."

"I—I——" She had moistened her lips before she could speak. "I don't understand what you mean. You say I lured her, that is a lie. I never took her to this den of evil as you call it."

"But you knew the street and number of the house, and you gave her into the hand of the woman who did take her there."

"I knew the number but I did not know it was a den of evil. I thought it was a respectable place, cheaper than the one she was in. I am sorry——"

"Madam," I interrupted, "you will find it difficult to make the world believe you so destitute of good sense as not to know the character of the house to which such a woman as you entrusted her with would be likely to lead her. Besides, how will you account for the fact that you wore a dress precisely like that of this creature when you enticed Miss Merriam away from her home. Is there any jury who will believe it to be a coincidence, especially when they learn that you kept your veil down in the presence of every one there?"

"But what proof have you that it was I who went for Miss Merriam? The word of this woman whom you your self call a creature?"

"The word of the landlady, who described Miss Merriam's visitor as tall and of a handsome figure, and my own eyesight, which assured me that the woman who came with her to her place of death was not especially tall nor of a handsome figure. Besides, I talked to the latter, and found she could tell me nothing of the interior of the house where Miss Merriam boarded. She did not even know if the parlors were on the right or left side of the hall."

"Indeed!" came in Mrs. Pollard's hardest and most cutting tones. But the attempted sarcasm failed. She was shaken to the core, and there was no use in her trying to hide it. I did not, therefore, seek to break the silence which followed the utterance of this bitter exclamation; for the sooner she understand the serious position the sooner I should understand what my own duty was. Suddenly she spoke, but not in her former tones. The wily woman had sounded the depths of the gulf upon the brink of which she had inadvertently stumbled, and her voice which had been harsh and biting, now took on all the softness which hypocrisy could give it.

But her words were unmeasured as every

"I asked you a moment ago," said she, "what money you wanted. I do not ask that now, as the girl is dead and a sleuth-hound is not supposed to take much interest in filthy lucre. But you want something, or you would not be here. Is it revenge? It is a sentiment worthy of your cloth, and I can easily understand the desire you may have to indulge in it."

"Madame," I cried, "can you think of no other motive that a desire for vengeance or gain? Have you never heard of such a thing as justice?"

"And do you intend——" she whispered.

"There will be and inquest held," I continued. "I shall be called as a witness, and so doubtless will you. Are you prepared to answer all and every question that will be put to you?"

"An inquest?" Her face was quite ghastly now. And have you taken pains to publish abroad my connection with this girl?"

"Not yet."

"She is known, however, to be a grandchild of Mr. Pollard?"

"No," said I.

"What is known?" she inquired.

"That she was Mr Pollard's portegee."

"And you, you alone, hold the key to her real history?"

"Yes," I assented, "I."

She advanced upon me with all the venom of her evil nature sparkling in her eye. I met the glance unmoved. For a reason I will hereafter divulge, I no longer felt any fear of what either one or here might do.

"I alone know her history and what she owes to you," I repeated.

She instantly fell back. Whether she understood me or not, she saw that her hold upon me was gone, that the cowardice she had been witness to was dead, and that she, not I, must plead for mercy.

"Mr Barrows," said she; "what is this girl to you that you should sacrifice the living to her memory?"

"Mrs Pollard," I returned with equal intensity, "shall I tell you? She is the victim of my pusillanimity. That is what she is to me, and that is what makes her memory more to me than the peace or good name of her seemingly respectable murderers."

Was it the word I used or did some notion of the effect which a true remorse can have upon a conscientious soul, pierce her cold heart at last? I cannot tell; I only knew that she crouched for an instant as if a blow had fallen upon her haughty head, then rising erect again—she was a proud woman still and would to her death, whatever her fate or fortune—she gave me an indescribable look, and in smothered tones remarked:

The sight that met my eyes was like a dream of fairyland let into the gloom and terror of a nightmare. The window overlooked the conservatory, and the latter being lighted, a vision of tropical verdure and burning blossoms flashed before us. But it was not upon this wealth of light and color that the gaze rested in the fullest astonishment and delight. It was upon two figures seated in the midst of these palm trees and cacti, whose faces, turned one towards the other, made a picture of love and joy that the coldest heart must feel, and the most stolid view with delight. It was the bridegroom and his bride, Mr. Harrington and the beautiful Agnes Pollard.

I felt the hand that lay upon my arm tremble.

"Have you the heart to dash such happiness as that?" murmured a voice in my ear.

Was it Mrs. Pollard speaking? I had never heard such a tone as that from her before. Turning, I looked at her. Her face was as changed as her voice; there was not only softness in it but appeal. It was no longer Mrs. Pollard who stood beside me, but the mother.

"She has never made a mistake," continued this terrible being, all the more terrible to me now that I saw capabilities of feeling in her. "She is young and has her whole life before her. If you pursue the claims of justice as you call them, her future will be wrecked. It is no fool she has married but a proud man, the proudest of his race. If he had known she had for a brother one whom his own country had sentenced to perpetual imprisonment, he would not have married her had his love been ten times what it is. It was because her family was honored and could bestow a small fortune upon her in dowry that he braved his English prejudices at all. What then do you think would be the result if he knew that not only was her brother a convict, but her mother——" She did not finish, but broke in upon herself with a violence that partook of frenzy. "He would first ignore her, then hate her. I know these Englishmen well."

It was true. The happiness or misery of this young creature hung upon my decision. A glance at her husband's face made this evident. He would love her while he could be proud of her; he would hate her the moment her presence suggested shame or opprobrium.

My wily antagonist evidently saw I was impressed, for her face grew still softer and her tone more insinuating.

"She was her father's darling," she whispered. "He would never bear to see a frown upon her face or a tear in her eye. Could she know now what threatened her do you think he would wish you to drag disgrace upon her head for the sake of justice to a being who is dead?"

I did not reply. The truth was I felt staggered.

"See what an exquisite creature she is," the mother now murmured in my ear. "Look at her well—she can bear it—and tell me where in the world you will find beauty more entrancing or a nature lovelier and more enticing?"

"Madame," said I, turning upon her a severity the moment seemed to deserve, "in a den of contamination, amid surroundings such as it will not do for me to mention even before her who could make use of them to destroy the innocence that trusted in her, there lies the dead body of one as pure, as lovely, and as attractive as this; indeed her beauty is more winning for it has not the stamp of worldliness upon it."

The mother before me grew livid, her brows contracted and she advanced upon me with a menacing gesture almost as if she would strike me. In all my experience of the world and of her I had never seen such rage; it was all but appalling. Involuntarily I raised my hand in defence.

But she had already remembered her position and by a violent change now stood before me calm and collected as of old.

"You have been injured by me and have acquired the right to insult me," cried she. Then as I made no move, said: "It is not of the dead we were speaking. It was of her, Samuel Pollard's child. Do you intend to ruin her happiness or do you not? Speak, for it is a question I naturally desire to have settled."

"Madam," I now returned, edging away from that window with its seductive picture of youthful joy, "before I can settle it I must know certain facts. Not till I understand how you succeed in entering her from her home and by what means you transferred her into the care of the vile woman who took your place, will I undertake to consider the possibility of withholding the denunciation which it is in my power to make."

"And you expect me to tell——" she began.

"Every thing." I finished, firmly.

She smiled with a drawing in of her lips that was feline. Then she glared then she looked about her and approached nearer to me by another step.

"I wish I could kill you," her look said. "I wish by the lifting of my finger you would fall dead." But her lips made use of no such language. She was caught in the toils, and lioness as she was, found herself forced to obey the will that enmared her.

"You want facts; well, you shall have them. You want to know how I managed to induce Miss Merriam to leave the house where my husband had put her. It is a simple question. Was I not her grandfather's wife, and could I not be supposed to know what his desires were concerning her?"

"And the second fact?"

She looked at me darkly.

"You are very curious," said she.

"I am," said I.

"Her baleful smile repeated itself.

"You think by these confessions I will place myself in a position which will make it impossible for me to press my request. You do not understand me, sir. Had I committed ten times the evil I have done, that would not justify you in wantonly destroying the happiness of the innocent."

"I wish to know the facts," I said.

"She went with me to a respectable eating house," Mrs. Pollard at once explained. "Leaving her to eat her lunch I went to a place near by, where the woman you saw met me by appointment, and putting on the clothes I had worn, went back for the girl in my stead. As I had taken pains not to raise my veil except just at the moment when I wanted to convince her I was her natural guardian, the woman had only to hold her tongue to make the deception successful. That she did is evident from the result. Is there anything more you would like to know?"

"Yes," I replied, inwardly quaking before this revelation of as inconceivable wickedness, yet steadily resolved to probe it to the very depths: "What did you hope by this deliberate plan of destruction? The girl's death, or simply her degradation?"

The passion in this woman's soul found its vent at last.

"I hoped to lose her; to blot her out of my path—and here," she more gently added, pointing with a finger that trembled with more than one force emotion, at the daughter for whom she had sacrificed so much. "I did not think the girl would die; I am no murderess, whatever intimation you may make to that effect. I am simply a mother."

A mother! Horrible! I looked at her and recoiled. That such a one as this should have the right to lay claim to so holy a title and impose it then!

She viewed my emotion but made no sign of understanding it. Her words poured forth like a stream of burning liquid.

"Do you realize what this girl's living means? Is mere recognition, and consequently disgrace and a division of TWENTY-SIXTH SERIES NO. 414.

ORANGEVILLE, MARCH 6, 1890.

LORD Tennyson has been seriously ill.

WINNIPEG will hold an annual industrial exhibition.

The city council of Toronto has voted $50,000 to help rebuild the University.

TREASURER Flynn, of Carter County, Southern Dakota, is short in his accounts $12,000.

THE Manitoba Legislature has done away with tax exemptions. The vote on the bill stood 22 to 7.

POPE Leo XIII. celebrated his 80th birthday on Sunday and his twelfth year as Pope on Monday.

MR. Richard Tooley has been renominated for the Local Legislature by the East Middlesex Conservatives.

THE printers throughout Germany are arranging to hold a grand festival in honor of the 450th anniversary of the birth of Gutenberg.

EDITOR McInerny, of the Limerick Leader, has been sentenced to one month's imprisonment for publishing a report received by cable of a League meeting.

CHICAGO has the world's fair. Orangeville's aldermen decided that Chicago was the proper place. And doubtless this had a great deal to do with it.

NORTH Dakota is again in trouble The best parliamentarian in the Legislature has come forward to say that every measure passed by that body is illegal, inasmuch as the assembly was convened merely for the purpose of electing United States Senators. What will be done about it remains to be seen.

MAYOR Walsh took a step in the right direction when he made up his mind to enforce the rules at the council board For some time past the councillors were allowed to speak as many times as they pleased on any one subject, which always prolonged the session. It is unnecessary for the aldermen to wrangle over unimportant business for an hour when three minutes' time is sufficient. This reform was much needed.

No sooner do we get through with that epidemic imported from Russia known as "la grippe" than we are warned of a new malady discovered in Rome called "la nouna." It is described as a lethargic sleep, and the doctors have thus far met no success in awakening the patients who have been afflicted with it. No cases have yet been reported in this country, but it is said to be bedemic in Rome, and spreading with alarming rapidity.

DOWN SOUTH.

In the Sunny Land of Oranges and Peanuts.

WE have contracted with the Southern News Bureau to furnish us weekly letters treating of the agricultural, manufacturing, mining and industrial progress generally. Also, the political, social and general news during the year. We shall publish a series of letters treating on what they grow and how they grow, or crops successfully grown in the South.

We recognize the fact that a great many in this section are interested in the Souther States, either through curiosity or on account of some friends who have gone or are intending to make their homes down there. The news we shall publish will be reliable. The Bureau has at its head the Hon. John T Patrick, of North Carolina, who is not only a thorough newspaper man, having gone from the "paste pot to the editorial chair" of southern journalism, but was for eight years Commissioner of Immigration of his native state; and when resigning from that position it was to take a similar position for the entire Southern States, under a combination formed by the various State Governments. Mr. Patrick has the executive ability, and will make the "Bureau of Industrial News and Southern Correspondence" a success. As assistants, he has called to his aid men of northern birth of both political parties, who have made their homes in the Southern States.

Our paper will be the only one in this county receiving the southern letters—we having contracted for the exclusive privilege of this county. This new feature will be one among other improvements we shall add to THE SUN for the year 1890.

SAMUEL R. Lang, treasurer of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company, at New York, died suddenly yesterday in the office of the company. He was formerly cashier of the Delaware and Hudson Canal company.

SHORT AND SWELT.

Ketchum's Dog By-law Referred Again—The Firemen Will Save a Row—Still—Mayor Walsh Enforces the Rules.

There were only six of the town's representatives, three reporters and a few spectators at the council chamber when the hands of our watch indicated 7 30 o'clock on Monday evening. At a quarter to eight, however, Mayor Walsh, Reeve Lindsey and Ald Bailey, King, Upham, Youmans, Pinkney and Gillespie were commencing the night's business. Ald Ketchum called in a little later on. Deputy reeve Endecott and Ald. Green were the absentees.

The clerk read the minutes of the last meeting, and then the mayor attached his signature thereto.

ACCOUNTS.

from Joseph Carney, $4 50; H. Flesher, $4 77, were ordered to be paid, and two from D. McDonald, amounting to $8 82, were referred.

IN A DESTITUTE STATE.

John Hubbard, the man who was injured in Nell's livery stable last summer, wrote a pathetic appeal saying he was in very indigent circumstances, and asking the council to consider his case. The chairman of the Charity committee refused to act, as he said Hubbard spent his hard-earned money in liquor The mayor and the Charity committee will investigate and do what they think is right.

REPORTS.

The auditors' report was referred to the Finance committee.

The reeve read the treasurer's statement for February.

Ald. Bailey was suffering from the effects of a cold when he arose to present the R and B. report The report advised the payment of a snow shovelling account and was adopted.

Ald. Youmans read a brief report from the Printing committee, which was sanctioned without debate.

The Charity committee has expended $19.25, and Chairman Cobean requested that $25 be placed to the committee's credit. His request was complied with.

Ald. Gillespie brought in the F. and W. reports. The first recommended the payment of an account, and the second was strongly in favor of procuring more rubber goods for the use of the firemen. A list of the articles required appeared in THE SUN two weeks ago; but now the firemen think six complete rubber suits will fill the present requirements. The cost of each complete suit will be about $9.75. A little debate took place between the chairman and the reeve, but the mayor called "order" and asked if the report would pass. The members replied that it would.

THE DOG BY-LAW AGAIN.

The council resumed its sitting in committee of the whole on Ald. Ketchum's dog by law. Clause 1. provides that the price of a tag for a dog is 50 cents and for a bitch $1. The mayor believed that another by law would have to be prepared, and moved that the committee rise. The reeve thought that enough time was wasted on the by law, and wanted to go ahead and finish it. The former gentleman's suggestion was put into execution and the committee rose.

BRIEFS.

A by law to appoint a salaried wood measurer will be introduced by Ald. Ketchum at the next meeting.

Ald. Bailey moved that Messrs. Walsh, Green and Youmans be a committee to revise the rules of the council and have a number of copies printed. Reeve Lindsay jumped to his feet and said he thought some of the older members should be on that committee, and moved in amendment, that his and Deputy-reeve Endacott's names be added. Mr. Bailey said he thought if he proposed the reeve the latter might be offended. Mr. Lindsay replied in some what sarcastic terms. Mr B. did not object to the enlargement of the committee and his motion carried.

The dog by law special committee will consist of Messrs. Walsh, Lindsey and Ketchum.

The engineer at the waterworks and the captain of the fire brigade have been instructed to bring in monthly reports concerning the affairs of those departments.

The lease of the gravel pit, which the town controls for ninety nine years, has never been registered. The clerk was instructed to register it at once. Mr. Ketchum thought that corporation papers should be kept in better shape The T. P. committee will see about it.

Mayor Walsh, Reeve Lindsey and Deputy-reeve Endacott are a committee to revise the by-laws of the town His worship said the by laws in former years were not kept as they should have been. For instance: twenty three by laws cannot be found; three are of the same number, and a by-law to prevent public bathing within corporation limits was an amendment to a by law regarding the impounding of cattle. The startling announcement caused everyone in the chamber to smile.

It was 9 o'clock when the council adjourned. It would probably have been 11 if the mayor did not strictly enforce the rules. Hear! Hear!!

Interesting to Parents.

Mr. Robt Laidlaw, of the Ottawa Free Press, says: Our babe was so choked up she could hardly breathe. In fact at one time we feared that she would choke to death. Respiration became more difficult every minute, for which we could get no relief by the usual remedies formerly used. Having a bottle of Nasal Balm in the house my wife suggested trying it, and in twenty minutes from the first application the child was sleeping and breathing easily, and in twenty four hours not a sign of the trouble remained. It is an invaluable remedy for children as well as grown people.

R. W. Medley, Real Estate Agent, of this town, has sold two more farms this week. How Medley finds buyers these hard times we can't understand; he does it, all the same.

Forcible Facts.

THE testimony as to the merits of Burdock Blood Bitters is overwhelming and admits of no dispute. It is the best blood purifier extant. Its action on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels is perfect. It cures dyspepsia, constipation, bad blood, biliousness, sick headache, and all skin diseases.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Sleeplessness, flatulency, acidity, nausea, and all dyspeptic indications may be speedily relieved by these famous Pills, of which large quantities are shipped to all parts of the world. The constantly increasing demand for Holloway's medicine proves its power over disease, and its estimation by the public. In weakness of the stomach in diseases of the liver, and in disorders of the system caused by cold or a sluggish circulation, no medicine is so efficacious, no remedy so rapid, as these Pills, which are altogether incapable of doing mischief. By quickening digestion, they give refreshing sleep, sharpen the appetite, impart tone to the digestive organs, purify and enrich the blood, regulate the secretions, and strengthen the whole physical frame.

"Do you ever receive contributions written on both sides of a paper?" asked a gentleman entering a newspaper office. "No, sir; never." emphatically replied the editor. "All right; I was going to endorse this check to your order, but I don't want to break your rules." Then he went out, leaving the editor in a deep green study.

The appeal case of David Comely, hotelkeeper, against the conviction of the police magistrate for refusing to provide lodging to an insane woman, a vagrant, was postponded on Wednesday in consequence of the illness of Judge Lane. The case came up for hearing again on Monday. Judgment reserved.—O. S. Advertiser.

HIS SECOND SALE.—Mr. Robt. Beatty's second sale of horses, implements, etc., will take place at his warerooms, east Broadway, on Saturday, March 8 Twenty-five horses, heavy and light, will go without reserve.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH.—The new board of health held their first meeting on Monday evening, previous to the councillors' session. All the members were present; Messrs. Walsh, Hughson, Caesar, Hall and Decatur. Mr. Decatur was reappointed chairman, and Chief Shields inspector. No other business was transacted, and the board adjourned until the 17th inst.

WE HAVE SOME HERE.—An exchange remarks very truthfully: That it is only the men unaccustomed to business methods who get angry when a bill is presented for payment. An ignorant man is the hardest man in the world to do business with, because he continually carries the idea that somebody is trying to beat him A man who receives a bill, or statement, should walk up and pay it like a man, or if he has not the money, make some satisfactory adjustment.

A BUTTER FRAUD.—A most abominable case of dishonesty, on the part of a farmer frequenting the London market has just been brought under the notice of the inspectors. A citizen a day or two ago bought several rolls of butter, which were apparently first class both in color and quality. He "sampled" several of them and the taste was sweet and free from any objectionable taint. When he came to use the butter he found that the genuine article was only about one-eighth of an inch deep on three of the rolls and that the centre was composed of vile smelling fat of some kind. Should Mr. Farmer present himself on the market here again the authorities will endeavor to make it very interesting for him.—London Free Press.

A BIG BONANZA, for almost every household in the town and country. The immense sale of the Great Kent Backyard must have, and has been to thousands who have taken advantage of the great bargains that are daily given at this establishment. The balance of the stock they will continue specialty of ready made clothing, coats, boots and shoes, and gents' furnishing, which will be marked to sell regardless of cost. The house is crowded with purchasers every day. Go early and get a show.

WEDDING.—A very pleasing ceremony took place at 5 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. A. J. Gillespie, west Broadway, when her eldest daughter, Sophia, was united in sacred bonds of wedlock with Mr. L. W Piper, of East Luther. The ceremony, which was witnessed by a few intimate friends of the contracting parties, was performed by the Rev. C. E. McIntyre The bride was attended by her sister Miss Minnie Gillespie. Mr. McKee, of Orton, supported the groom. The young couple were handsomely remembered by their friends.

YOUNG BROWN AGAIN.—Young Brown, Shelburne's notorious fourteen-year-old boy thief, was liberated from jail on the 6th of last month, after serving a thirty days's sentence for some petty thieft he committed in that village. It seems that this foolish, young fellow is out out for a continual sojourn of the jail. He no sooner tasted the sweets of liberty than he took possession of a $5 bill that belonged to someone else For this offence he received a three months' sentence, and on Monday came down to occupy his old quarters in "Castle Sutherland."

A DUEL FOUGHT IN FUN.—Alex. Shields and Mr. Hindle, young farmers living near Edmonton, were fooling with revolvers on Sunday afternoon when Hindle said, playfully, "Let us fight a duel," and levelling his pistol at Shields—snapped the trigger, Shields doing likewise. Shields firearm proved to be loaded, however, and a bullet was lodged in Hindle's chest just above the heart. Dr. Hall, of Brampton, was hastily summoned, and Hindle, in his ante-mortem statement, said he was to blame in suggesting the foolish deed. Hindle is still living but it is feared he cannot survive.

ONLY A PAUPER'S BODY.—Another death occurred at the jail on Monday morning. This time the victim was Samuel Perry, who was shipped from Mulmur last October to end his days in that iron-barred combination known as the Orangeville jail, but which, more properly speaking, is the county's poor house. Poor Perry was sixty three years old. We are informed that Undertaker Halse had everything in readiness for burial and was about to start, when Ald. King, inspector of anatomy, came along and seized the body, which he consigned to a Toronto medical institution. It took two men nearly a day to dig the unused grave, and they are puzzled to know where their pay will come from.

Mrs Island, who has been visiting at Toronto for the past few weeks, arrived home on Saturday.

Mr. Orange Jull and family returned on Friday from a prolonged sojourn at Patterson, N.J. Mr. Jull left for Denver, Col., yesterday.

GRAND VALLEY.

A concert is announced for to-morrow night.

Four candidates have recently been initiated into the I.O.O.F. here.

J. G. Reith, who has been in business in Toronto, is about to start a paint shop in the village.

The council of East Luther has decided not to increase the present number of liquor licenses from two to three.

Mr. Thomas Bird, of Belwood, formerly of this village, has purchased the Dominion hotel. The residents are glad to get the genial Tom back again.

SHELBURNE.

ROBT. Caldwell, Grafton, of Primrose, is expected to remove to town.

Mrs. Mary Shaw, relict of the late Wm. Fletcher, of the township of Rosa, died at Rosemont on the 12th ulto., at the ripe age of 79 years. Deceased was one of the pioneers of Simcoe county.

Messrs. Richard Polley and Wm. Boyd, of Horning's Mills, have gone to Denver, Col.

Wm. Gray, of Stayner, has bought Mrs. Feed's confectionery and restaurant business.

Mayor J. T. Simpson, of Moose Jaw, N.W.T., and Secretary Chapman, of the Ontario Pump Co., Toronto, were in town lately inspecting the water works system. Both gentlemen were well pleased with the workings of the system.

MONO MILLS.

CURIOUS.—Many of our citizens are anxious to know the particulars about the doctor's tooth, but as yet their curiosity has not been satisfied.

Revival meetings are being held in Snell's church.

OUT AGAIN.—It is with pleasure that we state that Mr. Henry Allen has recovered from his recent illness and is out again.

PERSONAL.—Mrs. Kingsborough has been visiting friends here.

APOLOGY.—We forgot to mention last week that Mr. R. J. Potter was sporting a grand new cutter, but, "the jinks," he hasn't bought it yet.

WAS THREATENED.—One evening last week a war cloud arose in the head of a Mono Mills Kid, and it threatened to shoot Ducks and other fowl.

SLOWLY RECOVERING.—That party out east is a good one, but Peter is not altogether well yet from the effects of the kick of the gun.

HIS DELIGHT.—The enterprising Wes. is very fond of running horses coming home from church.

BAD ROADS.—Owing to the bad state of the roads Mr Micks is at a loss to know how to get giving his horses sufficient training.

CAMILLA.

Quite a number of our young men start this week for Manitoba and Dakota. We shall miss them; but how about the fair young ladies left behind?

Mrs. E J. Cobean has gone to the city to purchase her spring millinery supply. The ladies are in a furor of excitement awaiting her return. Ah! who can guess the shapes and fashions of the coming season?

Mr. Peter Cameron (one concession west of here) has rented his farm to Mr. May His sale last week was a success, netting in the neighborhood of $1,000. On Friday evening a goodly number of young people assembled to give him a farewell. They were most hospitably entertained by hostand hostess. Dancing and other amusements were indulged in till long past midnight A very enjoyable time was spent by all.

Mrs. Laidlaw, of Mono Centre, was made the recipient of a handsome clock and suitable address previous to her removal to your town. Mr. John Phœnix, in his able, pleasing and efficient manner, filled the chair. Mrs. Laidlaw is in every respect an estimable lady and will be greatly missed in all our social gatherings. She carries with her the best wishes of the community.

CARDWELL.

THAT WEDDING.—Your last week's correspondence about the fashionable wedding that took place at the residence of Mr. Joseph Leighton on Wednesday, the 26th ult., did not do quarter justice to the eclat of the affair. He (or she) did not mention the fact that eighty five couples were present, or that the Orangeville orchestra was in attendance and discoursed excellent music during the evening; or that the bride's father presented her with a check for $1,000 immediately after the ceremony; or that Joe made the speech of his life when the happy and blushing couple were made one. Mr. George Rennex, of East Garafraxa, supported the groom and Miss Martha Skelton, of Salem, waited upon the bride. The happy couple were made the recipients of a large number of handsome and valuable presents. After the chief event of the day the guests sat down en masse to a sumptuous supper, which received full justice, and then they danced till "wee sma' 'ours" Your Cardwell young man hopes their troubles may be little ones.

ECHOES.

The young ladies at the wedding greatly admired my dancing, particularly the young lady from Sand Hill.—Joe Jackson.

They missed a dandy present by not inviting me.—Tom Langford.

My new clothes didn't show to good advantage in the back kitchen.—Hughy Hewson.

Down the centre and hands across. I tell you, boys, I put them through.—Johnnie Bracken.

Joe thought he'd beat me on the Caledon girl, but, thank my stars, I'm one ahead yet.—Jack McMaster.

I thought the slurs on ox driving hard, but not getting a bid to the wedding is harder still.—Fred Hughson.

I thought I was a favorite with the Cardwell girls, but why I was missed at the wedding is something more than I can tell.—Tom Harshaw.

I've been choir leader for a number of years, and I've attended every wedding in this vicinity, but why friend Joe did not ask me this time is a puzzler to me.—Ike Nicholson.

Nicholson, after all my teasing this winter I've been treated just like you.—J. E. Jenkins.

CREDIT FORKS.

Tom Armstrong had a wood bee on Monday and a jubilee in the evening.

The Jew peddlars are again infesting this neighborhood. They are cordially invited to stay away.

Mr. G Smith and his wife were visiting the parental home last Sunday, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Marsden occupied their house until their return.

K. C. Chisholm's new quarry behind the saw mill is working in full blast, and is turning out well.

Mr. Claridge has a son, and the son has a girl, and the girl works at Hodgson's. From observation we should judge that this is Ed's first experience in a lover. We wish him success in his new enterprise.

The death of Mrs. George Cann on Friday morning brought sorrow to many hearts, both of relatives and friends, but of none more than the husband and father, who is left with four helpless children. The funeral left her home at o'clock on Sunday for Greenlawn Cemetery. Rev. Mr. Ball preached the funeral sermon in the evening in the schoolhouse, taking as his text the very appropriate words of St. Paul, Acts xiii. 36: "For David, after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep." From which he spoke at some length in touching language, thus closing the last scenes on earth of life's drama. Mr. Cann has the heartfelt sympathy of all in his sore bereavement, but we trust he may be given strength to bear it and say with the Saint of old, who said: "The Lord gave, the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." Mr. Cann has disposed of his children in the most satisfactory manner. His brother has taken one of them, a married niece another and their most intimate friends, Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox, the baby, while Mr Cann and his eldest child are to make their home for the future, in part at least.

MARSVILLE.

Wm. W. Warnock's sale, which took place on Friday, Feb 21st, was very largely attended.

Mrs. George Nodwell, of Grand Valley, sister of Deputy-Reeve Simpson, has been in poor health for some time past, but is now recovering.

Mr. Wm. Rogers, of "Rogerstown," is the happy father of seventeen children. The last one, which arrived a short time ago, makes the seventeenth. We hope Bill will continue to prosper.

WOOLNER VICTORIOUS.—The debate between Elder Woolner, of the Disciple church, and Elder Mortimer, of the Latter Day Saints, took place in the Disciple church on Thursday evening last. The latter gentleman took the floor first, and defended the L D.S. religion and attacked the former gentleman's style of worship. Each speaker had the floor for three-quarters of an hour at first, a half the second and a quarter at the third. About four hundred people were present. Dr. McKinnon, of Hillsburg, acted as chairman. The very best of order was kept, and when "time" was called the universal opinion was that Elder Woolner had the best of it.

A PIONEER GONE.—It is with sincere regret that we have the sad announcement to make of the death of Mr. John Simpson, which took place at his residence on Tuesday, Feb. 25th, caused by a relapse of la grippe. The deceased was a thorough gentleman, kind to the poor and much respected by all who knew him. He was born in the county of Armagh, Ireland, sixty five years ago, and came to Canada when he was twenty three years of age. He settled in East Garafraxa, where he lived until he passed over to the great majority. When the deceased came to East Garafraxa, over forty years ago, it was not like it is now. He had to take his axe and clear his road; travel miles to a market, and face all the drawbacks which were connected with pioneer life. Every person in this neighborhood regrets his death. The funeral took place the following Thursday, to Price's cemetry and was very largely attended. A wife Jas. H., Robert, John A., George, Thos., Albert of East Garafraxa and Mrs. Geo. Nodwell, Grand Valley, survive him. May he rest in peace!

SHE FEIGNED DEATH.

To Cheat a Lover Miss Newberger Lay in a Coffin Until Free for the Man she Wanted.

WILKESBARRE, March 1.—Alfred Nagle, a young Austrian of Nanticoke, was in love with Clara Newberger. She did not reciprocate his affections. She loved John Schwarz. Nagle was willing to do. He tried every means to win the girl's affections, but failed. Finally he gave Schwarz $1,000 and the latter left town. One night in October last Nagle fell and broke his leg. He was laid up many months. One night he received a message that his sweetheart was dead. He could not leave the house, but his only sister went. When the sister arrived at the Newberger home she found the girl lying apparently dead in a coffin. That night, it was supposed, Miss Newberger had been taken to another town for burial Nobody knew differently till yesterday, when a Nanticoke man saw the Newberger woman and Schwarz in Philadelphia. They are married. Miss Newberger says she feigned death, fixed the coffin up herself, lay in it and then sent for Nagle's sister. That night she left for Philadelphia, where she joined Schwarz.

FOUL MURDER AT NEW-MARKET.

NEWMARKET, February 27.—Robert A. Smith, merchant, and but recently married, was found lying dead in his cellar, shot through the heart. He was prepared to follow his wife to a social When his wife returned home she found all the doors locked, and after some time a neighbor got into the house through an upper window and searching the house found his dead body in the cellar. He was lying on his back with arms and legs outstretched. His pockets were turned inside out. Some loose silver was scattered on the floor. His watch chain was wrenched from his vest, but not removed. Some drawers upstairs were ransacked and Mrs. Smith's purse emptied of its contents. His keys were also lying beside the body, and close by was a small revolver. A small door leading to the cellar under an outside staircase was found removed. From all surroundings it appears a case of foul murder. He was in prosperous circumstances, and was newly-married and apparently happy and contented. He was a trusted member of the Church of England, an Oddfellow, and also belonged to the I. O. F. He had a life insurance of $3,000. The detective department in Toronto has been set in motion on the case.

Wilfred Sykes, a boss in the finishing department of the Waterloo Woollen Mills near Rochester, N. Y., was cleaning his gun Friday night, preparatory to his usual Saturday hunt. His only child, a little girl four years old, was playing about the room near her father, who playfully pointed the gun at the girl. She at once cried out, "Don't shoot me, papa He supposed the gun was empty and pulled the trigger, it was loaded, and the whole contents struck the little one, completely tearing out the left side of the head. Her death was instantaneous. The father is completely prostrated. His wife has been upon a sick bed with consumption for the past four months. It is doubtful now as to her recovery.

BENWELL'S MURDER.

BURCHELL BELIEVED TO BE GUILTY.

Government Detective Murray Confident that he is the Murderer—Young Pelley's Narrow Escape From Assassination—A deep and diabolical Scheme to Entice Wealthy Young Men from England to Murder Them.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., March 3.—Nothing new has transpired in connection with the arrest of Burchell in connection with the Princestown murder. The police have been waiting for the arrival of Government Detective Murray, who arrived here this evening, and has had a closeted consultation with Douglas S. Pelley, the young man who came over from England with the Burchells. The greatest excitement prevailed on the streets all day. Crowds of people stood around the police-court room door all day, waiting for the case to come up for a hearing. Wild rumors of all kinds were afloat.

Mr. I. F. Hellmuth, barrister, London, Ont., who was a passenger aboard the steamer with the party while crossing the Atlantic, arrived this morning to defend Burchell.

A cablegram was received this morning from the father of Benwell, dated at Cheltenham, asking if it were true his son had been murdered.

Police Magistrate Hill says the case will be ready to go on with at 10 a. m., to-morrow. The detectives are confident they have got at least strong circumstantial evidence of how Benwell met his death.

DETECTIVE MURRAY'S OPINION.

NIAGARA FALLS ONT., March 4, 1 30 a. m.—The Associated Press representatives have just had an interview with Government Detectiv Murray, who arrived here this evening from London, and has just got through with interviewing Douglas Pelley, who accompanied Burchell from England. The detective says the information he has received since here has not left the slightest doubt but Burchell is the murderer of Benwell. Murray interviewed Burchell to-night in the cell. The prisoner was very reticent, as a lawyer had by some means gained admission and told him to keep his mouth shut and say nothing. After all Chief Young and Detective Murray wormed out of him considerable information. The detective says young Pelley escaped very lucky, as Burchell evidently intended to kill him on two or three occasions. Burchell's wife has also been placed in the hands of the police as an accessory to the crime.

Murray has sent a cable to Cheltenham, Eng., to the father of the murdered man to come here at once. His father's name is Col. Benwell, Cheltenham, England. Murray considers it one of the deepest and diabolical schemes to entice young wealthy men away from England to murder them in this country for the money they bring with them.

LEFT TWO WIDOWS.

CHICAGO, February 27.—Two women who have been living within couple a miles of each other for several years, unaware of one another's existence, met in court yesterday, both believing themselves the widow of the dead man. Joseph Pulman married Susanna Pulman in England in the 50's, but deserted her and came to Illinois, causing a report to be spread in his old Lancashire home that he had died soon after arriving in this country. The fact was that he kept on living and soon in the guise of a bachelor married Ellen Hill, with whom he eventually came to reside in Chicago The first wife after some years emigrated to America, and though supposing her husband really dead came by some strange chance to Chicago also. With her were her three children. The two families resided in the same division of the city, but never met. Pulman died without informing wife No. 2 that she was not a No. 1. The newspaper death notice lead to inquiries by the English spouse who satisfied herself of the identity of the deceased without learning of his second marriage. The matter of Pulman's estate came up in the Probate Court to day and the women encountered for the first time. There was much bitterness. Wife No. 2 won in a contest for the property, amounting to $600, left by Pulman. No. 1 will appeal, and the litigation promises to leave both widows without a cent.

Wonderful Popularity.

The fact that the sale of Dr Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets exceeds that of any other pill in the market, be it great or small, is on account of the fact that they are tiny, little, sugar-coated granules, and that in most cases one little "Pellet" is sufficient for a dose; that they are purely vegetable and perfectly harmless; and for constipation, biliousness, sick headache, and all diseases arising from derangement of the liver, stomach or bowels, they are absolutely a specific A gentle laxative or active cathartic, according to size of dose.

IF A BODY MEET A BODY

The result is a collision, whether "coming thro' the rye," or not. Life is full of collisions. We are constantly colliding with somebody or something. If it isn't with our neighbors it is with some dread disease that knocks us off the track and perhaps disposes us for life. Women especially it seems have to bear the brunt of more collisions and afflictions than mankind. In all cases of nervousness, hearing-down sensations, irregularities, prostration, sick headache, constipation, inflammation, or ulceration and all "female troubles" and "weaknesses," Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription comes to the rescue of women as no other medicine does. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee. From the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money paid for it will be refunded. See guarantee on bottle wrapper.

CATARRH.

CATARRH REMEDIES—MAY FOREST A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membranes of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N.B.—This treatment is not a douche, nor an ointment; both have been discarded by reputable physicians as injurious. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 308 West King Street, Toronto, Canada.—Toronto Globe.

Sufferers from Catarrhal troubles should carefully read the above.

Remember that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has no equal as a specific for colds, coughs and all affections of the throat and lungs. For nearly half a century it has been in greater demand than any other remedy for pulmonary complaints. All druggists keep it for sale.

CATARRH AND COLD IN HEAD HOW CURED

NASAL BALM CURES COLD IN THE HEAD CATARRH

NASAL BALM.

A certain and speedy cure for Cold in the Head and Catarrh in all its stages.

SOOTHING, CLEANSING, HEALING.

Instant Relief, Permanent Cure, Failure Impossible.

Many so-called diseases are simply symptoms of Catarrh, such as headache, partial deafness, losing sense of smell, foul breath, hawking and spitting, nasal drop, general feeling of debility, etc. If you are troubled with any of these or kindred symptoms, you have Catarrh, and should lose no time in procuring a bottle of NASAL BALM. Be warned in time, neglected cold in head results in Catarrh, followed by consumption and death. NASAL BALM is sold by all druggists, or will be sent, post paid, on receipt of price (50 cents and $1.00) by addressing

FULFORD & CO., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

☞ Beware of imitations similar in name.

A Positive Danger.

MR. EDITOR,—It is a well-known fact that the majority of people are inclined to look on a cold in the head as a matter of little importance—involving at the most only a temporary inconvenience. No more serious mistake can be made. The neglected cold in the head is the source of catarrhal affections with which about seventh-tenths of the people of this country are afflicted, and catarrh itself is too often the preliminary stages to consumption and death. The symptoms of catarrh are manifold; but among them may be mentioned, offensive breath; dull, oppressive headache; offensive droppings from the nostrils into the throat and bronchial tubes; deafness or partial deafness; constant hawking and spitting; weak and watery eyes; a hacking cough and feeling of general debility; ringing in the ears and frequent dizziness. These are but a few of the more general symptoms, and those who experience them should lose no time in applying a remedy—delays are proverbially dangerous and in the case of this too prevalent disease may lead to death. We offer Nasal Balm to the public as a POSITIVE CURE for cold in the head and for catarrh in all its forms and stages. Nasal Balm has been tested in thousands of cases, and the testimonials in our possession prove that it is all that we claim for it—it has cured other sufferers—it will cure you. It is easy to use, pleasant and agreeable and does not require a douche, or any torturing instrument to apply it. Give it a trial and be convinced of its great efficacy. Sold by all dealers or sent post free on receipt of price—50c for small or $1 for large size bottles, by addressing FULFORD & Co., Brockville, Ont.

Long-Standing

Blood Diseases are cured by the persevering use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

This medicine is an Alterative, and causes a radical change in the system. The process, in some cases, may not be quite so rapid as in others, but, with persistence, the result is certain. Read these testimonials:—

"For two years I suffered from a severe pain in my right side, and had other troubles caused by a torpid liver and dyspepsia. After giving several medicines a fair trial without a cure, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was greatly benefited by the first bottle, and after taking five bottles I was completely cured.—John W. Benson, 70 Lawrence St., Lowell, Mass.

Last May a large carbuncle broke out on my arm. The usual remedies had no effect and I was confined to my bed for eight weeks. A friend induced me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Less than three bottles healed the sore. In all my experience with medicine, I never saw more

Wonderful Results.

Another marked effect of the use of this medicine was the strengthening of my sight."—Mrs. Carrie Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

"I had a dry scaly humor for years, and suffered terribly; and, as my brother and sister were similarly afflicted, I presume it is family inheritance. Last winter, Dr. Tyson, (of Fernandina, Fla.,) recommended me to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and continue it for a year. For five months I took it daily. I have not had a blemish upon my body for the last three months."—T. E. Wiley, 140 Chambers st., New York City.

"Last fall and winter I was troubled with a dull, heavy pain in my side. I did not notice it much at first, but it gradually grew worse until it became almost unbearable. During the latter part of this time, disorders of the stomach and liver increased my troubles. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after faithfully continuing the use of this medicine for some months, the pain disappeared and I was completely cured."—Mrs. Augusta A. Furbush, Haverhill, Mass.

out property, the loss of my daughter's dowry, and of all the hypocrite had built on it. What, who had given to Samuel Pollard the very money by means of which he had made his wealth: to stand this? Not if a hundred daughters of convicts must perish."

"And your sons?"

"What of them?"

"Had they no claim upon your consideration. When you plunged them into this abyss of greed and deceit did no phantom of their lost manhood rise and confront you with an unanswerable reproach?"

But she remained unmoved.

"My sons are men; they can take care of themselves."

"But Dwight——"

Her self possession vanished.

"Hush!" she whispered with a quick look around her. "Do not mention him. I have sent him away an hour ago but he may have come back. I do not trust him."

This last clause she uttered beneath her breath and with a spasmodic clutch of her hand which showed she spoke involuntarily. I was moved at this. I began to hope that Dwight at least, was not all that his mother would have him.

"And yet I must speak of him," said I, taking out the letter had written to Miss Merriam. "This letter addressed to one you have so successfully destroyed seems to show that he returns your mistrust."

She almost tore it out of my hands.

"When was this letter received?" she asked, reading it with burning eyes and writhing lips.

"The day after Miss Grace left her home."

"Then she never saw it?"

"No."

"Who has seen it?"

"Myself and you."

"No one else?"

"No one but the writer."

She laughed.

"We will destroy it," she said; and deliberately tore it up.

I stooped and picked up the fragments.

"You forget," said I, "this letter may be called for by the corner. It is known that I took it in charge."

"I might better have burnt it," she hissed.

"Not so, I should then have had to explain its loss."

Her old fear came back into her eyes.

"Now I have merely to give it up and leave it to Mr. Dwight Pollard to explain it. He doubtless can."

"My son will never betray his mother."

"Yet he could write this letter."

She frowned.

Dwight has his weakness," said she.

"It is a pity his weakness did not lead him to send this letter a few hours sooner."

"That is where his very weakness falls. He struggles because he knows his mother partly, and falls because he does not know her wholly."

"And Guy?"

"He knows me better."

The smile with which this was said was the culminating point in a display of depravity such as I had never beheld even in haunts of acknowledged vice. Feeling that I could not endure much more, I hastened to finish the interview.

"Madam," said I, "by your own acknowledgment your deserve neither consideration nor mercy. What leniency I then show will be for your daughter alone, who, in so far as I can see, is innocent and undeserving of the great retribution which I could so easily bring upon this family. But do not think because I suppress your name from the account I may be called upon to give the coroner, that your sin will be forgotten by Heaven, or this young girl's death go unavenged. As sure as you are the vilest woman I ever met, will suffering and despair overtake you. I do not know when, and I do not know by what means, but it will be bitter when it comes, and the hand of man will not be able to save you."

But it was as if he had not spoken. All she seemed to hear, all, at least, that she paid the least attention to, was the promise I had made.

"You are decided, then, upon secrecy?" she asked.

I am decided upon saying nothing that will bring your name into public not so."

Her proud manner immediately returned. You would have thought she had never suffered humiliation.

"But how will you account for your interest in this young person?"

"By telling a portion of the truth. I shall say that my attention was called to her by a letter from Mr Pollard requesting me to hunt her up and take care of her after he was dead. I shall not say he called her his grandchild unless I am positively forced to do so, nor will I mention the treatment I have received at your hands."

"And the woman you say?"

"Is your business. I have nothing to do with her."

The shadow which till this moment had rested upon her haughty brow, cleared away. With a quick gesture, from which she could not entirely exclude a betrayal of triumph, she dropped the curtain across that charming picture of bridal felicity by which she had won so much, and turning upon me with all the condescension of a conqueror, she exclaimed:

"I once did you an injustice Mr. Barrows, and called you a name that was but little complimentary to your cloth. Allow me to make such amends as I can and call you what you most surely are—the most generous and least vindictive of men."

This was intolerable. I made haste to leave the room.

"Mrs. Pollard," said I, "no amenities can take place between us. From this hour on we are strangers, till the time comes when we shall shall appear. In that of this, we and repent an awful tragedy of sin, if you can." And I turned away toward the door.

But just as I had was about to open it, it swung slowly aside, and in the frame work made by the hinges, I saw Guy Pollard standing with a quiet look of inquiry on his face.

"Mother" said he, in calmest and most courteous of tones, shall I let this gentleman pass?"

"Certainly, my son."

And Guy Pollard made me a deep bow, and drew softly aside from my path.

I had been within an hour of my death but it scarcely ruffled me.

THE SINGER'S ALMS.

In Lyons, on the mart of that French town,
If not alone, a woman landing a fair child,
Owned a small alms of one who walking down
Two thoroughfares, caught the child's glance and smiled.

To one, behind his eyes, a noble soul;
He pinched, but found he had no coin to dole.

His guardian angel warned him not to lose
This chance of pearl to do another good;
So, as he walked, sorry to refuse
The asked for penny, there aside he stood
And with his hat held, as by limb the next,
He covered his kind face and sang his best.

The sky was blue above, and all the lane
Of Commerce, where the singer stood, was filled,
And many passed, and, listening passed again
To hear the voice that through and through them thrilled.
I think the guardian angel helped along
That cry for pity, woven in a song.

* * * * * * *

The hat of its stamped brood was emptied soon
Into the woman's lap, who drenched with tears
Her kiss upon the hand of help; 'twas noon,
And noon in her glad heart drove forth her fears.
The singer, pleased, passed on and softly thought,
"Men will not know by whom this deed was wrought."

But when at night he came upon the stars,
Cheer after cheer went up from that wide throng.
And flowers rained on him; not cold assuage
The tumult of the welcome save the song
That he had awe-ly sung, with covered face,
For the two beggars in the market-place.

CHICAGO CHOSEN

As the Site for the World's Fair—Eight Ballots Necessary.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—In the House of Representatives to-day voting took place on the selection of the site for the location of the World's Fair, and Chicago was chosen on the eighth ballot. The galleries were packed with spectators, and great interest was manifested.

In the first ballot the vote stood:—Chicago 115, New York 72, St Louis 31 Washington 56, Cumberland Gap 1. New York and Chicago gained some strength from both St. Louis and Washington on the early ballots, but after the sixth ballot the New England strength, which had largely supported New York, began to break away to Chicago. A few of the members who are opposed to holding a World's Fair at all omitted to vote, the highest number of votes cast during the day being 317.

The eighth official ballot was:—Chicago 157, New York 107, St. Louis 23, Washington 18. Total vote 307; necessary to choice 154. Chicago thus had three more than necessary for the choice.

The scenes during the entire afternoon were intensely exciting. During roll call the leaders for the various cities were actively at work on the floor, keeping their forces in line and laboring with the doubtful ones. The galleries held out until the last vote was cast at six o'clock, and joined mildly in the wild applause which arose on the floor when the announcement was made that Chicago had received a majority.

Read this extract from the scientific papers of Great Britain and Europe!

The four greatest medical centres of the world are London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna. These cities have immense hospitals teeming with suffering humanity. Crowds of students throng the wards studying under the Professors in charge. The most renowned physicians of the world teach and practice here, and the institutions are storehouses of medical knowledge and experience. With a view of making this experience available to the public the Hospital Remedy Co. at great expense secured the prescriptions of these hospitals, prepared the specifics, and although it would cost from $25 to $100 to secure the attention of their distinguished originators, yet in this way their prepared specifics are offered at the price of the quack patent medicines that flood the market and absurdly claim to cure every ill from a single bottle.

THE SUN

1890.

Some people agree with THE SUN's opinions about men and things, and some people don't; everybody likes to get hold of the newspaper which is never dull and never afraid to speak its mind.

Democrats know that for twenty years THE SUN has fought in the front line for Democratic principles, never wavering or weakening in its loyalty to the true interests of the party it serves with fearless intelligence and disinterested vigor. At times opinions have differed as to the best means of accomplishing the common purpose, it is not THE SUN's fault if it has seen further into the millstone.

Eighteen hundred and and ninety is the year that will probably determine the result of the Presidental election of 1892, and perhaps the fortunes of the Democracy for the rest of the century. Victory in 1892 is a duty, and the beginning of 1890 is the best time to start out with THE SUN.

Newspaper Decisions.

1. Any person or persons who take a paper regularly from the post office, whether directed in his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment.
2. If a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken or not.
3. The courts have decided that refusing to take a newspaper or periodical from the post office or removing and leaving them uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intended fraud.

The Favorite

Medicine for Throat and Lung Diseases has long been and still is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It cures Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and Asthma; soothes irritation of the Larynx and Pharynx; strengthens the Vocal Organs; allays soreness of the Lungs; prevents Consumption, and, even in advanced stages of lung disease, relieves Coughing and induces Sleep. There is no other preparation for diseases of the throat and lungs to be compared with this remedy.

"My wife had a distressing cough, with pains in the side and breast. We tried various medicines, but none did her any good until I got a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which has cured her. A neighbor, Mrs. Glass, had the measles, and the cough was relieved by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have no hesitation in recommending this to every one afflicted."—Rob. Horton, Foreman Hemlight, Morrilton, Ark.

"I have been afflicted with asthma for forty years. Last spring I was taken with a violent cough, which threatened to terminate my days. Every one pronounced me in consumption. I determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Its effects were magical. I was immediately relieved and continue to improve uninterruptedly recovered."—Joel Bullard, Guilford, Conn.

"Six months ago I had a severe hemorrhage of the lungs, brought on by a incessant cough which deprived me of sleep and rest. I tried various remedies, but obtained no relief until I began to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A few bottles of this medicine cured me."—Mrs. E. Coburn, 19 Second st., Lowell, Mass.

"For children afflicted with colds, coughs, sore throat, or croup, I do not know of any remedy which will give more speedy relief than Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have found it, also, invaluable in cases of Whooping Cough."—Ann Lovejoy, 1257 Washington street, Boston, Mass.

Poetry.

THE EBB OF LOVE.

A love that comes in an ebbing tide
Which slowly, inch by inch, and pause perceived,
With many a wave that makes leave show in rise,
Falls from the shore. No sudden tempest farewell
The long accustomed loyalty to lose,
But years brings weariness for sweet content,
And feelings, daily sentinence of love,
Which one should make a tribute entire paid,
First grudged, and then withholders, starved the heart.
And though compassion, or remorseful thoughts
Of happy days departed, bring again
The ancient tenderness in passing hood,
Not rest it ebbs and ebbs till all is bare,
O happy shore, the flowing tide shall bear
The muddy pools, and spread dull, tangled weeds
In streamers many colored as the lights
Which flash in northern heavens, and revive
The galaxy blossoms of the rocky, but thou
O heart, whence love hath ebbed, art over bare!

The Story Teller.

JIM THE TRAMP.

He was a bad lot! Magistrates, jail chap lains, and police had all at various times told him so, knowing it to be pretty near the truth. An outcast from his very babyhood, what chance had he ever had? Left by an unfeeling mother to die in a roadside ditch, he had been taken from the nearest Union, to be brought up a workhouse foundling, until he was old enough to be bound prentice, and the guardians could wash their hands of him entirely. A drunken saddler covenanted to clothe, board, and teach him his trade; and at his hands poor Jim had a dog's life, until, goaded to madness by every species of ill treatment, he struck his master and fled. For a while he tried hard to get work in the villages through which he passed, but no one would take on the strange, friendless lad, and so he made up his mind to enlist for a soldier.

If only he had reached York an hour or two earlier, her Majesty's army had gained a useful recruit, and poor Jim would have a chance to rise and become credit to the service. But ill luck would not let him go. He was routed out of an old stable by a zealous member of the city police, and charged next day with sleeping out at night, or some equally heinous crime, the result being that he was committed to prison for seven days. This broke down his last shred of self-respect; and when that happens to man or boy, heaven help him, for his doom is sealed.

Jim came out of jail utterly reckless, with a wild hatred of everybody or everything. He thought no more of soldiering or getting work, but let him self drift resolutely to the bad. He soon got into vicious company, and before many weeks were over was again in the clutches of the law. The down hill road is an easy one, and the pace is always rapid, and so at thirty years of age he was widely known to the authorities as a confirmed rogue and thief, who would not stick at trifles when once he was roused.

Yes there was no doubting it, he was an out and out bad lot! And he looked it, too, as he slouched along the country lane with hands deep in his empty pockets and his head bent to meet the rain which the November wind drove in his face. But he was too much used to discomfort to heed the weather, and plodded sullenly on through the puddles to the deepening gloom, half asleep, and so utterly careless of everything around that he never heard the beat of hoofs until a cherry voice cried: "Now, my good fellow, if you do not want the whole road to yourself, perhaps you will let me pass.

Jim never looked round, but slunk closer to the dripping hedgerow, expecting the horseman to ride on without another word, but something quite unexpected happened, for the cherry voice said "thanks!"

It was the first time any one had ever thanked the good for-nothing, and he started up in blank amazement, and saw a man about his own age, in red coat and top-boots plentifully bespattered with mud, looking down at him from the back of a weight carrying hunter without the least gleam of aversion or suspicion on his pleasant fresh colored face.

"You look rather done up; been long on the road?"

"A week an' more!" The reply was surly enough—not that Jim resented the question, but simply because he was so used to insults and rough speaking that the idea of a "blooming swell" speaking civilly to such as he took him utterly by surprise

"Going home?"

Jim gave a contemptuous grunt. "Never ha yan, guv'nor!"

"Poor chap! But you live somewhere, I suppose?"

"Oh, yes"—with a grim chuckle—"I live somewheres—anywheres. I'se not like some folks, must have everything tip-top. No; that's not my style. Ye've a big house, in course, and lots of slaves to wait on ye. I lives just where I can, and has to fend for myself, and don't often get my meals regular."

And the cruel contrast between him and his companion filled the tramp's heart with bitter thoughts. Why have some folks all the good things of life and others none of them? Here was a man no older than himself with fine clothes on his back and a horse to carry him; while he, poor fellow, had to trudge along ankle deep in the mud with scarcely a whole thread to cover him. Why, the very horse was a long way better off and cared for; it at least had a warm, dry stable and plenty of food waiting for it, while he had never a resting place nor a crust of bread to eat. Again the cheery, kind tones startled him:—"But you have friends somewhere, I suppose?"

"No; not me! There's never a single soul, guv'nor, in this wide world as cares a rap for me; and when I lies down some day and dies in a ditch, there'll mean big rain, weather so chill he'll miss me. Howsever, I'm sorry, 'cause the parish fellows will have to pass me underground, and may'll grudge digging of that even."

Jim was about only lunch and slouched on his water spaniel, spatter, splashing out of the gaping rents of his old boots at every step. He quite expected the "good" to ride off now and leave him to the rapidly deepening gloom and the wild, cheerless night; but the horse was kept steadily alongside of him, and his rider spoke again.

"Look ye, my lad, I don't like work and lots of it, tramp, do ye?"

"Why, there wouldn't have the likes of me. I don't look respectable enough."

"Nonsense, man. Don't get down on your luck, but pick yourself up. Now, look here; I will give you a chance myself, if you will take it."

Jim could not believe his ears. Some one actually talking to him as if he was an honest man, and not even scowl or warning or contemptuous frown. A bad tip-top gentleman," too. He must be mistaken. But the brown eyes were looking coolly enough at him, and their owner was saying, "Well, what do you say?"

"Let's know what I bet I'm a fool! I've been in quod oft enough," blurted out Jim, feeling somehow he could not take his new found partner in.

"I dare say you have, and deserved it too. But I believe you can pull round yet if you like; and as I said I will give you the chance of regular work and pay. Will you take it?"

In the depth of Jim's warped nature there glimmered something like a spark of gratitude and a dim longing after a new life, for a moment; but old habits were too strong for him, but the clouds closed darker again as he shook his head and said in tones which tried to be civil; "No, guv'nor; yer mean well; but it's no go now. I'm no good for anything but cadging and tramping, an' I dean want to work for any master—an' work neither."

He expected an angry lecture and round abuse for refusing; but the other said quietly, stroking his boot with the handle of his hunting-crop: "That is a dangerous way of thinking, my friend and will get you into trouble again. You are a fool not to try and pull up a bit; but you know your own affairs best. Well, here is a supp and a bed anyway. Look out." He tossed a half-crown to Jim with careless, easy goodnature, and shaking up his horse trotted off with a nod and "good luck."

How careless a word or two of sympathy are, and yet how priceless they may become! We scatter kindly greetings here and there as we journey on life's roadway, and lo! they spring up like flowers to gladden some sad, weary wayfarer. We perform thoughtlessly now and again trivial services of courtesy and forget them; but they shine in lone loveless hearts as glittering stars to cheer the midnight sky.

Hugh Boynton, smoking his high-priced Havana after dinner that evening in the luxurious ease of his favorite lounging-chair, had utterly forgotten all about the few words of the silver coin which he had thrown to the tramp whom he had overtaken as he rode home from hounds. Jim, curled up under the lee of a clover stack, gained the half-crown—ever and over in his hand, and thought of how for once in his life he had been spoken kindly to by a real gentleman.

Five dreary years passed over Jim's luckless head, their monotony broken by police court, prison cell and vagrant ward experiences. He had wandered up and down some dozen countries, and seen the inside of most of their jails, and now as christmas drew near, had drifted towards York; not that he had any particular reason for getting there, but because it lay in his way north, and he happened to be making in that direction; why not even he himself knew, for north, south, east and west were alike to him. He had had a run of bad luck lately. Once or twice he had found a casual's welcome and slept under cover; but he had a rooted objection to its concomitants, and chose rather the cold and open air. He had scarcely tasted food for a week, and had forgotten the feel of a copper coin; for somehow the near approach of the festival of peace and good-will seemed to have shut up men's pockets, and sharp refusals and scornful silence were all he got from those of whom he asked help.

The afternoon was closing as he found himself in the long straggling village of Marston, footsore and done up. The lights at the grocer's shop threw a broad band of brightness across the road, and Jim could see a man in a white apron busily piling up a pyramid of loaves which a boy had just brought in crisp and hot from the bakehouse. The sight was too much or the tarnished fellow, and he pushed his way into the shop. "Now, then, what is it?" cried the shopman sharply, as he scanned Jim's tattered appearance.

"Will ye give me yan ov them little 'uns, guv'nor? I'm nigh demoned; and he nodded towards the bread pile.

"No, certainly not; I never give to beggars or tramps."

"I've not tasted bite nor sup this blessed day' God knows."

"Can't help that! Come get out of the shop, do you hear?—or I'll set the constable onto you. The likes of you ought not to be allowed to go about the country. Come, off with you!"

So the social outcast went forth into the night hungry and insulted, and the sleek tradesman rubbed his hands and stacked his loaves, congratulating himself the while on his refusal to countenance a worthless vagabond, who, regarded from the lofty standpoint of political economy, had no right to live on the earth. And yet Mr. Jonathan Binner was wont to pose on political platforms as the heaven sent champion of the masses. Then, indeed, his sympathy poured out in such a mighty torrent towards the universal brotherhood of man that there was not so much as a drop left to give a crust or even a civil word to a starving tramp at his door.

Three times did Jim try his luck down the length of the village street with no better success; and then he gave it up and bitterly left the houses of his fellow-creatures behind him and faced the bleak open country again. He dragged himself along for a few weary miles, then opening a gate crawled into a half ruined cow-shed and flung himself down upon some bracken and straw litter in the farthest corner, and dozed off. When he woke up the moon had risen, and was shining in through the chinks of the roof, and Jim could see the country side was white with snow. He shivered and hurled himself complete in the bracken and tried to sleep again. But forgot the cold and his hunger. He had almost succeeded, when the sound of voices came to him on the still night air, and a minute later three men entered the shed.

"Curse the cold!" growled one as he drew back just within the shadow.

"Come hither, you mean," said another, as he leaned a thick oak cudgel against the wall and began to blow upon his numbed fingers.

"I'll do more than warm him when the time comes," muttered the first speaker.

"Ay, he'll beat not to be in!" said Bayes he when with the rest of 'em! he mentioned Tim and Jeff: "The poacherie' varmin shall be stopped, if I have to do it single handed."

"Well, he'll be single-handed to night anyways, for he's no groom wi' him. So he can try what he's good for wi' three on us, eh, Jack?"

"He'll find it a tough job, I'm thinking."

"Is I wire right, Bob?"

"Sacrip! His mare carpe' lame, but I've fixed her it, and she'll mak' him tiffully. It's past twelve now, he oughtn't to be long."

"Hist! mate, there's wheels. Now for't. Come on.

The three men went out quickly, and Jim, following to the door, saw them leap into the road and hide in the hedge on the opposite side; then he stole down to the gate out of mere curiosity to watch what their game was. In a few minutes the ring of hoofs grew louder, and a high wheeled dog-cart spinning round the corner came rapidly down the lane. It was occupied by one figure only, the red glow of whose cigar gleamed in the frosty air, and just as the scent of it reached Jim he saw the horse suddenly plunge and stagger forward. The wire snare had done its work, the animal fell heavily, and the driver, thrown off his balance by the shock, shot out on to the snow. Before he could rise, the men were upon him; but somehow he managed to shake them clear and struggle to his feet. He faced them boldly, and met their rush with a right and left hander which sent one to the ground, but the other two closed in upon him.

Jim looked upon with languid interest. Evidently it was some magistrate waylaid by three men who had a score to settle against him. It was no business of his, anyway, and though three to one was hardly fair, he was not going to interfere. The gentleman fought well, whoever he was, and again sent an assailant backward with a well got in blow. But the odds were too heavy and the cudgels told. He began to stagger and give ground, and a blow on the head beat him down. "Give it him, lads, if we swing for't, cries the tallest of the three villains, jumping on him, mad and blind with rage.

A ray of moonlight fell upon the upturned face of the fallen man; it was that of the gentleman who five years ago had talked with Jim in the lane! In an instant he was over the gate and at the men like a tiger-cat, and so sudden was his onset that they gave ground; then seeing he was alone, they rushed at him with oaths and threats. Weak from want of food, and half dead with cold, poor Jim had never a chance. For a few seconds he held up doggedly against the shower of blows, then feeling he was done for, stooped suddenly, flung his arms around the squire, and with one last effort managed to roll into the deep ditch, keeping himself uppermost. The brutes jumped down and strove to make him loose his hold of their victim; but stunned and blinded with blood, he clung fiercely to Hugh Boynton, sheltering his body with his own.

The world began to spin round—another and another heavy blow—a chiming of far-off bells—a hollow buzzing—and then—black night forever!

Next morning they were found together in the trampled, blood smeared ditch—one living, the other dead.

Hugh Boynton often wonders, as he looks at the white cross which he put up over a nameless grave who his preserver was. But the recording angel will one day tell how Jim the Tramp, the "out-and-out bad lot," gave his life for the man who once spoke kindly to him.

Miss Liberty, who holds aloft the torch on Bedloe's Island, New York Harbor, rejoices in what is literally an iron constitution, and so we don't think it worth while to recommend to her the use of Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription. But this is the one great exception which proves the rule. For all the rest of womankind the "Favorite Prescription" is indispensible. The young girl needs its strengthening help at that critical period when she is blossoming into womanhood. The matron and the mother find in it invigoration and relief from the numerous ills which beset their existence. And ladies well advanced in years universally acknowledge the revivifying and restorative effects of this favorite and standard remedy. The only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

It appears some time ago a number of Indians belonging to the Caughnawaga Reserve were induced to join a circus company to go to California and Australia; but the circus company abandoned the Indians at San Francisco; and so they are now in a state of destitution. Mr. Dayon intends to enquire of the Government if the Indian Department has received a petition from the destitute Indians asking aid from the Indian Fund to enable them to return home; and if so, what was the nature of the answer given.

Running Sores Healed.

I had a pain in my left side, which broke out in running sores. Burdock Blood Bitters was the only medicine which gave me relief, although I tried many others. My side is all healed up now, and I am able to go around after being in bed for over a year without relief. I also use Burdock Pills, and find them the best I have ever used.

THE PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY OF THE SOUTH.

"The web of our life is of a mixed divine,—Constituents thereof, spun with kind design."

It has been said that "The audacious astronomer is mad;" that any person who could with a fair degree of intelligence study the wonders of the starry and planetary world without seeing the hand of God therein, must carry within himself an unbalanced and insane mind.

Come back with me, dear friends, from those fathomless and mighty wonders, and the extending and ever expanding thoughts which they engender, to one of the smallest of those planets. Come home to our own Earth. And, as in the realm of fiction, when we pass from the narrow statement of great plans and thoughts to world detail, we find our interest intensified, just so, as we pass from the study of the countless whole to the units and its parts, shall we find our wonder grow. In this brief letter we cannot discuss the physical structure of the whole Earth; only that portion of our own favored land called the South.

Let us place before us any ordinary map of the United States and examine the eastern coast of Virginia, North and South Carolina, and south eastern Georgia. Notice the sea indentations deep into Virginia and North Carolina. See the direction of the flow of the rivers of all the states above named, and how Florida, like the great index finger of a great hand, points to some of the richest isles upon the globe, and to our twin sister, South America. Pass Florida and why is the direction of the flow of the great rivers changed? Why, and how long has the "Father of Waters" been making his bed in air and pushing his voiceless mouths far out from the shores of the Gulf of Mexico? Why is it safe for the city of Galveston to stand upon an island of sand whose highest point is only five feet above the Gulf? Why is the Tennessee river, after coquetting for a while with the sunny South, turned back toward the cooler North? There are only a few of the questions which may be asked of this wonder land of the South, some of which we shall try to answer. Until the Civil War an almost bridgeless gulf existed in the difference between the social life and institutions of the North and South. A great difference still exists. These differences are made possible by the difference between soil and climate. And the soil and climate are in turn made possible by the difference in the agencies and forces which, in past ages, have been at work upon the face of the Earth. While the mountains of the North show abundant traces of volcanic forces and and volcanoes still active, the few mountains of the South show no well attested instance of volcanic work. While the rocks of the mountains of the North and a large part of its surface have been swept and marked by the mighty forces of oceanic currents, icebergs and glaciers a very large portion of Southern land has been formed by the gentler forces of rivers, creeks, and estuaries dropping rich alluvial deposits, and by the silver waves of a peaceful sea breaking upon a sandy South.

Some writers divide the surface of the Southern States into four divisions; viz, the low lands near the ocean, the sand belt, the piedmont region, and the mountains. We shall divide into three divisions; viz, the mountains, caused by the cooling and wrinkling of the crust of the Earth, the sand belt, which is only an immense sea beach, and the low country, which is the deposit of rivers, etc.

It is believed that once the Gulf of Mexico was so large as to reach as far north as the mouth of the Ohio River. Which would imply, not that there is now more water on the surface of the globe than then, but that the land lying between the Ohio River and the present Gulf of Mexico was once at a lower level and partially beneath the waters of the Gulf. It is equally certain that the Gulf Stream, then as now, swept around its rising shores. What changes have been wrought? The rich alluvial deposits have been pushed from their first line of separation from the bench farther and farther out, as the land slowly rose, until we now have the broad low country, the best cotton land in the known world. The sea beach of sand was also extended in the same degree and by the same agency until we have the sand lands, bearing the tallest and most valuable pines of the whole country. What has remained unchanged? The mountains and mountain region, unscathed by fire, undisturbed by water; and leaving our gold, and iron, and coal separate and unfused, ready for a wonderful development just began. What has the Gulf Stream done? It has tempered the climate of the whole region, and in its resistless flow, sweeping past the mouth of the Mississippi River, in its tendency to remove the waters of the Gulf, has made it possible for that great river to push its protruding mouth farther and farther south. And so the Father of Waters becomes the Former of Lands; and taking the matter poured into it by the rapid mountain streams, inch by inch he forms the State of Louisiana, the sugar lands of North America, and makes his bed upon her bosom. What is the Gulf Stream doing now? Tempering the climate of nearly all the South and sweeping away and barring out the waters of the Atlantic, it leaves the city of Galveston secure from tides and storms, safe on her sandy foundation. Still more, it places Florida between the heats of two bodies of warm water, an extended bar of sand and vegetable matter dropped upon sunken mountain tops, but the land of flowers and oranges.

What are the deep sea indications of North Carolina and Virginia doing for mankind? Furnishing a large supply of food to people on their own borders and full half of the fish supply of the city of New York.

If we have succeeded in impressing upon four readers the thought that the soil, climate and other conditions of the South differ from those of the North, not by accident but by a wise design, our first letter has not been a failure.

Our next letter will be about Cotton.

APPLES AS A MEDICINE.

Chemically, the apple is composed of vegetable fibre, albumen, sugar, gum, chlorophyll, malic acid, citric acid, lime, and much water. Furthermore, the German analysts say that the apple contains a larger percentage of phosphorus than any other fruit or vegetable. This phosphorus is admirably adapted for restoring the essential nervous matter, lecithin, of the brain and spinal cord. It is, perhaps, for the same reason, widely understood, that the old Scandinavian traditions represent the apple as the food of the gods, who, when they felt themselves to be growing feeble and infirm, resorted to this fruit for renewing their powers of mind and body. Also, the acids of the apple are of single use for most of sedentary habits, whose livers are sluggish in action; these acids serving to eliminate from the body noxious matters which, if retained, would make the brain heavy and dull, or bring about jaundice or skin eruptions and other allied troubles. Some such an experience must have led to our custom of taking apple sauce with roast pork, rich goose, and like dishes.

The malic acid of ripe apples, either raw or cooked, will neutralize any excess of chalky matter engendered by eating too much meat. It is also the fact that such fresh fruits as the apple, the pear and the plum, when taken ripe and without sugar, diminish acidity in the stomach rather than provoke it. Their vegetable salts and juices are converted into alkaline carbonates which tend to counteract acidity. A good ripe raw apple is one of the easiest vegetable substances for the stomach to deal with, the whole process of its digestion being completed in eighty-five minutes. Gerard found that the "pulp of roasted apples mixed in a wine quart of faire water, and labored together until it comes to be as apples and ale—which we call lambes-wool—never faileth in certain diseases of the braines, which myself oath often proved, and gained thereby crownes and credit." "The paring of an apple, cut somewhat thick, and the inside thereof is laid to hot, burning or running eyes at night, when the party goes to bed, and is tired or bound to the same, both help the trouble very speedily, and, contrary to expectation—an excellent secret."

A poultice made of rotten apples is of very common use in Lincolnshire for the cure of weak and urbematic eyes. Likewise, in the Hotel des Invalides, at Paris, an apple poultice is used commonly for inflamed eyes, the apple being roasted and its pulp applied over the eyes without any intervening substance. Long ago it was said that apples do easily and speedily pass through the belly; therefore they do mollify the belly; and, for the same reason, a modern maxim teaches that—To eat an apple going to bed, Two doctor then will urge his bread.

All in a Heap.

Malaria fever left me with my blood in a terrible state, with boils breaking out on my head and face. I was too weak to work or even walk, but after taking a quarter of a bottle of a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters I was able to work. The boils all went away in a heap, as it were, and my strength fully returned before the bottle was done.

MOTHER AND CHILDREN BURNT.

MONTREAL, March 9.—A terrible disaster occurred this morning at Cote St. Michel, a small village ten miles from here on the St. Lawrence, whereby a woman, the wife of a farmer named Collerette, and his seven children lost their lives.

At 5 o'clock the man lighted his fire, leaving beside the stove a can of coal oil, and went out to attend to his duties. On looking back he found his house in flames and from the fierceness of the fire he was unable to rescue his family, and his wife and

IT SHINES FOR ALL.

ORANGEVILLE, MARCH 20, 1890.

THE FLAG OF THE FREE.

It is very seldom we hear of loyal British subjects attempting to prohibit the Union Jack floating in the breeze. But such was the case in Orangeville on St. Patrick's Day.

On the morning of the 17th, Post-office Caretaker Wilkins hoisted "the flag that braved a thousand years the battle and the breeze." It had not been long up, however, when several excited citizens rushed to the building and demanded the caretaker to "pull down that flag!" It is almost needless to say that he did not do anything of the kind. The grand old banner was at the top of the flagstaff on St. George's and St. Andrew's days, and why should it not be there in honor of St. Patrick? Our good Government don't draw the line there. When we heard the names of several of the citizens we were surprised, and we were still further surprised to find among the number people who, a short time ago, clamored for Equal Rights.

St. Patrick's Day is not a party day: it is a day which all true-hearted Irishmen—be they Protestant or Catholic—celebrate. Both creeds kept the day in Toronto.

Truly, bigotry dies hard in some places.

If Yankee, Turk, or Russian hordes
Should ever Britain's power assail,
Let Grit and Tory draw their swords,
And Right o'er Wrong will then prevail.
The flag that we are living under,
Borne on many a bloody field,
With the motto—"No Surrender,"
Long may it wave—our Hope and Shield.

Rally round it, where'er unfurled—
It rules o'er land and sweeps the seas;
It waves in all parts of the world,
Braving the "Battle and the Breeze."
Long may it wave in our fair land,
With strong, stalwart men to bear it,
And sharp and pointed be the brand
Aimed at the knaves who'd tear it.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

It is generally understood that the Ontario elections will take place the 1st day of June.

The council of the town of Brampton presented an address of welcome to the L.O. Grand Lodge of Canada West, which met their on Tuesday, the 4th.

The Peel Conservatives will hold a convention at Brampton on the 5th of April to nominate their standard bearer for the Local House. Our Peel friends should chose a candidate who will stand a good chance of election.

The business of raising a superior class of horses by crossing European stallions into American and Canadian mares has attained such proportions in the North-west Territories that the Government has, through Dr. McEachren, Dominion Veterinary Surgeon, purchased fifty three acres of land just outside the Montreal city limits for the purpose of erecting an establishment, the object of which is to develop an outside market in Britain and other countries as well as the United States for the best quality of Canadian-bred horses. It is proposed to have experienced men to handle and train those requiring further training, to have a course, and every requirement for conducting a large horse exportation-importation business.

The Russian police officials do not favor the extension of the telephone system. It is stated that every hindrance is placed in the way of telephonic enterprise. Thus every subscriber has, in addition to the fee to the company, to pay a tax of $25 a year to the Government, while the promoters are charged upward of $5,000 for each installation a year, in fact, recently, in Reval, the organizer of a telephone exchange was glad to leave the city and his whole plant. Every telephone company in Russia had to submit a list of its subscribers to the police, and give notice of each new one, and the latter has the option of striking off any one. Moreover, the companies have to make such arrangements that any conversation can be overheard by the police, if desired.

Twelve thousand Nottinghamshire miners have joined in the strike for an advance of wages.

A post of the Grand Army of the Republic is being formed in Montreal of Canadians who served in the American war.

Chicago carpenters have issued a circular declaring they will demand, on April 7th, 40 cents per hour and eight hours a day's work. They expect to have to make a strike.

During the court examination of the New York bank swindle, one bank witness testified that Jan. 1, at the conception of the conspiracy, one of the persons used $48 32 to his credit. On Feb. 1 he was $15,000 overdrawn, which he covered, leaving his balance again at credit, this time $43,32, so that he spent $5 in the meantime—not an unreasonable amount at the present rate for refreshments in New York. Now, behold financial ability! The transactions of this young Napoleon in Finance footed up in those three weeks, $3,720,800! This sum went through the clearing, and followed its footings.

"LA GRIPPE."

Our Juvenile Sprite Has Lo Grippe on the Brain—Bear His Revisits.

Should you take a cough or wheeze,
Or a sudden fit of sneezing,
Attended by a thickish cough,
'Twixt your nasal duct and lip,
Or should your nose be deemed rheumatic,
Or your suffering be ecstatic,
Cured with shooting pains erratic,
From your nothing loes to attic,
Consult a doctor allopathic,
With pills and lotions nauseous,
Or a quenching hydropathic,
Where only practice is aquatic,
You'll both agree in terms emphatic,
With sentiments most dogmatic,
Plain as anything mathematic,
That you have caught the grip.

All joined with 'uigin old or new,
Or tortured with ric-dolly-roo,
Wrenching your nerves as with a screw,
From face to finger tip;
Call in a homeopathetic nater,
A lean and, gerthose decanter
On similia similibus curantur,
Who'll say reject that vile decanter,
And take my pellet quite instanter,
Or you'll be chased like Tam O'Shanter,
That tippling, rakish gallavanter
Who tried to poke his rustic banter
At Cutty Sark, the wild enchanter,
Le Grippe will seize you like a panther,
And off to bedes is a canter
You'll take your final trip.

If your brandy-blossomed nose is
Pink and red as summer roses,
Alas for you! O, Moley Hoses,
Grip has you by the hip.
Or if you are a tippling Joker,
Or a red-gilled whiskey soaker,
In vulgar parlance called a bloke, or
A bar-room scandal broker,
Or a foul tobacco saucer,
Whose grimy whiskers, vest and choker
Seems besmitched with sooty coke, or
Smeared with brown or yellow ochre,
Your filthy practices revoke, or
Your fate is sealed, great hokey poker,
You'll be handycapped by grip.

Whether fever, grip or rifle ball
To "Davy's Locker" sends us slip,
Or shattered by a sudden squall,
Our bark's frail cable's slip,
Whilst here our weary way we're wending,
The rugged path of life ascending,
To Jordan's stream our footsteps trending,
Where all shall have a common ending,
Let us be kind and commending,
To our neighbors' wants attending,
The child of poverty befriending,
And to his supplications bending,
The sacred cause of right defending,
And all our asperations tending
Toward this wretched world's mending,
Then, though the sword of death be pending,
And on your prostrate form descending,
Ripping the warp of life, and rending
All the doctor's patch-work mending,
Yet your safe—so let it rip.

Orangeville, March 19, 1890.

THE BROADAXE!

The Georgetown Herald says there were more "drunks than stock" at the last fair held in that town. Seeing that the number of cattle on the grounds was, in round numbers, one (1) head, with a "drove" of one hog crowding the procession, the drunks may not have been "too numerous to mention" notwithstanding the excitement. With such a rush of live stock, and whiskey only 5c., the wonder is that the whole town did not go on a bender.

It is sincerely to be hoped that the ratepayers of the province will not take advantage of the amended liquor law and attempt to introduce "prohibition by municipalities." The Scott Act was bad enough in all conscience, but Mowat's latest attempt to befool the temperance people is an insult to the intelligence of the most illiterate voter. You might as well go fishing with a hand-organ as try to do away with the drink traffic by "municipal prohibition" So long as the neighbors raise watermelons the darkey will have his "fill of the fruit" The only man who would gain by such an arrangement would be the unlicensed whiskey vendor. It would be an all-the-year-'round "fourth of July" for him. But perhaps that is the "intent of the law."

If the temperance people of this town really wish to score a point, they should look after the granting of licenses for the coming year. Here is an excellent opportunity for the enthusiastic friends of temperance to utilize their super-abundant supply of zeal. A gentleman who is seldom mistaken offers to stake a handsome horse against a homesick mule that not more than four (4) hotel licenses can be legally granted in Orangeville at the present time. The Broadaxe does not cut things quite so fine, but certain it is that, under the Crooks' Act, eleven licenses cannot be granted in this town—half that number would be much nearer the limit. Temperance people should stop chasing rainbows and hoe corn.

Now that the council has decided to purchase a number of new rubber suits, the chairman of the F. & W. committee should see that the members of the company are held personally responsible for the goods placed in their hands. The rules and regulations governing the brigade probably contain a clause to that effect, but if such is the case it has heretofore been more honored in the breach than in the observance. A record of every article used by the firemen should be kept, and the officer in charge should be able to show at any time in just what condition his equipment is. He should also be able to state the why and wherefore of any damaged or missing property. The desired end can only be attained by holding the men strictly accountable for all material in their charge.

It is always an in-spirit-ing sight to see an officer of Her Majesty's loyal volunteers in full-dress uniform. M r Thomas Munroe is, or was, drum-major of a battalion band, and on state occasions, that is, when indulging in a bottle of wine, he dons the livery of his queen and country, and it is quite a common thing to see red headed Tom in a red tunic painting the town red so long as he has a solitary "red" in his "dip" with which to purchase the red-eye. It is against military rules to wear the scarlet while off duty, but, as Tom says, "of what earthly use is a sodjer's coat if it can't be worn at a wine party? All our high-toned, tin-horn soldiers wear the suit in their contests with champagne, and I am only following suit when I battle with beer or go to war with whiskey." And Thomas is about right. The rusty Enfield rifle, the pot-metal bagnet, the undrilled volunteer and the inexperienced officer are of about as much service to the country as Gibson's amendments to the Crooks' Act are to the cause of temperance.

The flag that for several years has braved the battle and the breeze, raised a spanking breeze when it was seen proudly flying from the flagstaff of the portoffice building on St. Patrick's Day. For a time it looked as though red revolution was about to burst forth on our streets, and visions of "blood to the bridle reins" floated through the dizzy brains of a few dizzy dudes who imagined that the country had been handed over bodily to the French Grits, the Jesuit fathers or some equally dangerous combination, and all because the Union Jack was gracefully shimmering in the crisp morning air in honor of Ireland's patron saint. "Haul down the flag!" was the cry which greeted Caretaker Wilkins on all sides, and poor John came in for more than even a Connaughtman's share of abuse. At last the clamoring cranks were made to understand that the hoisting of the colors was a time-honored regulation of the department at Ottawa, but not until an over-zealous equal-righter had communicated with headquarters with reference to the "dastardly outrage." Verily, 'tis a glorious sight to see Victoria's subjects clamoring for the lowering of the British flag.

Mr. Joseph Riddell has secured the contract to fit up the building lately occupied by Mr. Acheson, jeweller, which is to be used by the Bank of Hamilton.

BAZAAR.—The ladies of the First avenue Methodist church will hold a bazaar on Wednesday, April 6th.

STILL COMING TO TOWN.—Mr. Jas. Crozier and family, of Erin township, removed to Orangeville this week. Mr. C. will go into the pop manufacturing business in Dufferin's county town.—Erin Advocate.

DEATH OF MRS. CARSON.—The death took place on Monday in Mono, of Mrs. Carson, wife of Mr. Henry Carson, who had been ailing for some time past. Deceased was 37 years of age, and had suffered poor health for years. The funeral took place yesterday and was largely attended.

JUDGE MCCARTHY'S DECISION UPHELD.—The appeal against Judge McCarthy's decision, changing the venue from Brampton to Orangeville in the Scott-Atkinson civil suit, came up before the Master-in Chambers at Toronto on Saturday. The master dismissed the appeal, with costs pending.

DEATH OF ISAAC MARSHALL.—One of East Garafraxa's most respected residents, in the person of Mr. Isaac Marshall, died on Monday last. A singular incident is that he was born, married, and died on the 17th March. Deceased was 57 years of age. The funeral to the town cemetery on Tuesday was very largely attended.

A FORMER RESIDENT DEAD.—The death is announced of Mrs. Jeanett Sampson, of Dixie, formerly a resident of Orangeville, and wife of the late Jas Sampson, who occupied the position of master-mechanic at the C. P. R. shops here. The remains were interred in Mount Pleasant cemetery, Toronto, on Wednesday week.

DRIVEN TO THE WALL.—The Alton Dramatic Club played "Driven to the Wall" before a full house in the town hall on Friday evening. The piece was rendered fairly well, and, with a little more practice, the company would make a good amateur combination. The Canadian Order of Foresters, under whose auspices they came, realized quite a snug sum by the entertainment.

THIRTY DAYS FOR RINGER.—Wm. Ringer, the shoemaker who was arrested some time ago for stealing an overcoat from Green & Bowles' store, appeared before his Honor, Judge McCarthy, at the court house on Saturday. County Crown Attorney MacMillan conducted the prosecution; the prisoner had no legal representative. Several more witnesses were examined, and the guilt of the prisoner was clearly proven. Ringer will "do time" for thirty days at the "castle."

AN INTERESTING SUIT.—A certain well known gentleman of the town has entered a suit in the county court against an equally well known resident for the recovery of $120, which the former won in several poker games played by them a short time ago. Gentleman No. 1 says he will not withdraw the charge; while gent No. 2 says he will be crucified before he'll "posey up." If this case comes to a trial, and very likely it will, pulpit and press will have a very sensational topic. THE SUN will keep its readers posted.

MASON & MORGAN COMBINED.—The famous Mason & Morgan Comedy Co. will commence a six nights' engagement in the town hall on Monday, March 24. This is one of the high-class troupes that change a small admission fee. Wherever they have played, crowded houses have greeted them. They carry a large stock of opulent scenery, fifteen performances, and everything else that constitutes a first-class show. All new plays and a complete change of program each night. Popular prices, 10, 20, and 30 cents. Seats on sale at Gillespie's bookstore.

GRAND JURY LIST.—The following gentlemen will compose the Grand Jury at the Dufferin spring Assizes, which commence on the 22nd of April: Thos. Hinton, John Hartley, Wm. Rightell, Hugh Ritchie, Sam. Hamilton, Wm. Pickering, Geo. Hudson, Francis Carson, Hulmer; Thos. Coulin, Wm. Boyle, Thos. Goodall, East Garafraxa; Wm. Avison, W. J. Dodds, J. J. Grozier, Jno. Armstrong, Joseph Cotton, Mono; Jas. Hurtable, Geo. E. Bailey, T. J. Atkinson, Melanchton; Geo. Henderson, East Luther; Jno. Bookless, C. B. Dorland, Geo. Harkins, Wm. Still, Orangeville.

NIGHTLY ROWDIES.—It is a notorious fact that for the past couple of weeks drunken an noisy hoodlums are allowed undisputed full sway of our public streets. On Monday and Tuesday evenings the climax of these disgraceful proceedings were reached. Chief Shields was at the town hall—but where was nightwatchman Parkin during the disturbance? The drunks swore, fought, and whooped without any outside interruption whatever. The authorities should take steps to stop this work immediately, otherwise we will imagine the Scott act is still in force.

ORANGEVILLE PRESBYTERY.—At a meeting of the Presbytery of Orangeville, which met in St. Andrew's church on Tuesday week, a petition was presented by Mrs. J. J. Dobbin (wife of the deposed Rev. J. J. Dobbin), and some twenty or thirty others, asking the Presbytery to investigate the charges made against Mrs. Dobbin by some members of the Presbyterian church at Caledon East. The petitioners state that the session of Caledon East refuses to investigate the case, and, therefore, they are forced to carry it immediately to the Presbytery. We understand that the Presbytery has the matter under consideration, and that all unprejudiced people believe that Mrs. Dobbin is a thoroughly devoted Christian woman, and that the charges have not an iota of truth in them. This has nothing whatever to do with the famous Dobbin case which was tried some time ago.

A SHARPER.—A big, tall, rawboned, skinny-looking, consumptive individual, accompanied by a large onion, put up at the Queen's Hotel about two months ago. His reputed name was Chris. Ferguson, and said to have hailed from London, and purporting to be an agent for some extensive onion seed firm, the large onion on exhibition being the products of the same. He commenced business soon after his arrival in the village by selling small packages of his seeds for 25 cents. He would tell his victim that the large sample was grown down near London, and guarantee that the seeds would produce equally as large an onion, thereby gulling a large number people in this vicinity. It is reported that Mr. London purchased the wonderful seeds in some of the local stores for about two cents a package. Tuesday of last week Ferguson hired a horse and buggy from M. Overland, saying he was going to do a little business out in the country. Whether he did it we have not yet learned, as Mat. had the pleasure of sending to Acton for his rig, after hearing of the whereabouts of his property, at considerable expense. We presume the onion man is now selling his seeds in some other part of the world. He left his large onion at the Queen's to pay for a small board bill.—Erin Advocate. He called at Orangeville, but his "fake" didn't take worth a cent.

PERSONAL.

Mr. John Paisley, of Toronto, was in town on Friday.

Mr. W. J. Middleton, of Toronto, is in town.

A number of the teachers and scholars of St. James' Sunday school, Primrose, recently presented Mrs. J. Brett with a handsome cruetstand and a silver butter-cooler.

The wind was gay and dashing
As in careless mood it flew,
And it set the sign boards clashing
All along the avenue.
But it tarried at the crossing
Where there stood a dainty miss,
And revealed midst reckless tossing,
Something just like this.—

They had frost down in Florida Tuesday that nipped vegetables and oranges

ALDERMEN'S "AT HOME."

Big Turn Output Present—Reeve's Address Still Found—Water Legislation, etc.

It was a quarter to eight when the members of the temp. council prepared themselves for business at their regular and monthly meeting on Monday night. All of them were present except Mr. Klein, who arrived about 8.05.

The auditorium was pretty well filled with interested ratepayers, one of whom set munching peanuts, much to the discomfort of his immediate neighbors.

Clerk Hughson commenced proceedings by reading the minutes of a previous meeting, which were found correct and were adopted. The mayor presented the following

ACCOUNTS:

R. Lawson, $3; Wm. Harding, $2.03½; George Gray, $4.88; J. J. Robinson, $21; John Kearns, $4; ordered to be passed. An account from A. & W. Johnston, amounting to $7.88, was referred.

John Wiley, a well-known resident of the town, communicated to the effect that he would take charge of the water works department for a salary of $200 a year. The F. & W. committee will consider his case.

IS THIS ANOTHER SUIT?

Mr. T. T. King asked the council to contribute $50 to help defray the expenses which resulted from the accident that happened to his wife last June. It will be remembered that Mrs. King was walking along Mill street, and when crossing the trap-doors opposite the Gordon house, the doors gave way and the lady fell a considerable distance, breaking two ribs in the fall. As a result of the accident Mrs King was laid up for some time, and during that period she required medical and nurse attendance which cost her husband $65. Mr. King says he doesn't think he will bring an action against the town, but, at the same time, he thinks he shouldn't lose anything by somebody's neglect. The communication was referred to the Finance committee.

A destitute citizen's communication asking charity was not read. The reeve thought it did not look well to have a shipwrecked brother's misfortunes published. Referred to Charity committee.

The auditors' report was presented and handed over to the Finance committee.

A batch of correspondence from a number of manufacturers who are desirous of starting here was placed in charge of a special committee consisting of the mayor, reeve, deputy-reeve and Ald. Bailey.

REPORTS.

Reeve Lindsay brought in a report from the Finance committee, which recommended that the salaries of officials should be paid on the first of every month; that the auditors' report was found correct; that steps be taken to collect fines imposed by the police magistrate during the past eighteen months, and that the floating debt of the town was growing less. The report was adopted.

A report from the R. & B. committee, recommending the payment of an account, was read by Ald. Bailey and adopted.

Deputy-reeve Endacott presented the T. P. committee's report, which showed the amount of insurances on corporation property. It was confirmed.

Mr. Ketchum read the report of the special committee regarding the C.V.R. bonus fraud. The mayor was authorized to correspond with the president of the C.P.R., and if a non conceding reply is received the committee will sit again.

Reeve Lindsay read a report on the consolidation of the by-laws. A book will be procured and all the by-laws now in force will be kept therein.

BY LAWS.

Reeve Lindsay introduced by laws to regulate the running at large of animals; to regulate the height of fences; to regulate the monthly fair; defining the duties of the constable; to regulate the billiard licenses; to govern the town hall, which cannot hereafter be rented by patent medicine vendors. The council went into committee of the whole, and the by-laws were read a third time and passed.

Deputy-reeve Endacott introduced a by law which contained a revision of the rules of the council, and which went through the necessary stages and became law.

Ald. King introduced a by law to govern the town cemetery. It was left over until next meeting.

Ald. Ketchum's new dog by law, which had been considerably amended, was read a third time. The fee is one dollar for a dog and two for a bitch.

NOTES.

Ald. Bailey's report on the new waterworks scheme will be presented at the next meeting.

The mayor ruled two or three speakers out of order during the meeting.

It was nearly 11 o'clock when the council adjourned.

Ald. Ketchum moved for a special committee to report on a scheme to improve the roads. After a short discussion the motion was withdrawn.

GRAND VALLEY.

Mr Thomas Bird has taken possession of the Dominion hotel.

Rev. Mr. Orr, of Mono Mills, preached in the Presbyterian church here on Sunday.

Mr. R. Baxendale has purchased Mr. Wm. Howes's farm for $4,400.

W. & A. Park recently sold four heavy draught horses to a Manitoba buyer for $550.

The concert given by Miss Gray, music teacher, on Friday week, was a gigantic success. Among the performers Mr. J. H. H. Hoffman, the rapidly rising elocutionist, ranked first. We hope he will come up this way again.

Twenty-four Odd Fellows had their "likenesses tak" on Friday, the 7th inst.

The Dufferin Farmers' Institute will hold a meeting here on Saturday next, the 22nd inst. Everybody around this neighborhood should attend it, as there is business of importance to transact.

R. Boyle, the builder, took a contract some time ago to build a bridge over one of Luther's swamps. In order to get a foundation it was necessary to drive piles, and this was done on the ice. Last week all was ready and Boyle took his machine and gang out. One pile was started but soon went out of sight, but he kept on until he found bottom, which was from 20 to 30 feet below the surface. The wonderful looking pile-driver attracted the attention of the natives of Luther, and a large number turned out to see it do its work.

BENWELL'S BODY EXHUMED.

Has Lockhart Positively Identified It—Woodstock Jail Yard—Somerset '88 and '89—Inquest, etc.

WOODSTOCK, ONT., March 17.—Rev. Burchell is still as happy as ever. He calls freely wherever he has a friend, and a vein of humor and lightness runs through his whole conversation. He appears to be intensely interested in the Flethell mystery. Several times he has reiterated the statement that he had seen Flethell in New York. Not only that, but he takes up Mr. Flethell's story, to show that it would be impossible for him to have seen Flethell as reported. He got a parcel of papers and magazines to-day from some unknown sympathizer, and is promised all the literature he cares about reading. He has written several letters to the Old Country, but, strange to say, the burden of them all is horse-racing or some kindred subject. Indeed, he remarked not long ago that it would be a good idea for the reporters to tell them that he had made two circuits of the track in Saratoga, meaning that he had a couple of walks around the jail yard. His meals are supplied by the Commercial Hotel, and his cigarettes by occasional visitors. Mr. Cameron, the jailer, says that in all his experience with criminals he never came across a man who remotely resembled Burchell. He takes his confinement and his altered conditions with the most perfect grace. He is always jocular, never despondent, and indeed there is no difference apparent on the surface between J. R. Burchell, of Woodstock jail, and the "Lord" Somerset of '88 and '89.

BENWELL'S BODY EXHUMED AND IDENTIFIED.

Detective Murray and Miss Lockhart left town this afternoon for Princetown cemetery, where the body of young Benwell was exhumed for identification by Miss Lockhart. It will be remembered that Miss Lockhart was on the train which conveyed Burchell and Benwell to Eastwood on Monday, Feb. 17th. Miss Lockhart sat two seats behind, and noticed them particularly. Her description of the two parties coincides exactly with that of the deceased and Burchell. This afternoon she was shown the body of Benwell, and positively identified it as being the man whom she saw with Burchell on the train between Hamilton and Eastwood. This is considered a very important piece of evidence by the detective. The body was well preserved.

Mr. Wm. Davis, C. E., has been engaged to make a survey of the neighborhood of the scene of the murder and prepare the necessary maps, diagrams, etc.

It is stated that Nicholas Murphy, Q. C., of Toronto, has been retained for defense of the prisoner.

SALEM.

NOT THE RIGHT MAN.

To the Editor of The Sun.

DEAR SIR,—I want to correct an erroneous impression that has got abroad in the vicinity of Salem, accusing me of being your correspondent from this village. You, sir, know as well as I, that I have never written a line for THE SUN in my life. By inserting the above you will do me a great favor.

A DANGER SIGNAL!

A Cold in the Head may be aptly termed a danger signal warning you that if neglected that dangerous and disagreeable disease, Catarrh, is sure to follow, perhaps leading to Consumption and the grave. At no season of the year is Cold in the Head more prevalent than during the Spring months and at no other season do the people of this country suffer more generally from Catarrh, with all its disagreeable and annoying effects. Do not be an instant neglect either of those troubles, but apply NASAL BALM, the only remedy that will give instant relief and effect a thorough cure. The following testimonials from among thousands in our possession bear witness to its sterling merit.

Alex. Burns, Sudbury, Ont., says: I may state that I have been affected with Catarrh seven or eight years, and it was attended by consequent symptoms such as foul breath, constant dropping into the throat, hawking and spitting, partial deafness, ringing in the ears and sickening pains in the head directly over either eye. I have used powders and douches, but all to no effect, the only result arising from the use of such was temporary relief, followed by the usual symtoms in a more aggravated form. The results arising from the use of Nasal Balm: Sweet breath, stopping of the droppings into the throat, (consequently less hawking and spitting), clearness of hearing, and not once since I began its use have I had pain in the head. In fact, it is my opinion that a careful and persistent use of the Balm will effect a cure in the worst case of catarrh.

T. D. D. Loyd, 8 Clarence street, Toronto says: I wish here to testify to the unequalled healing powers of your Nasal Balm. I have been troubled for three years by what the doctors call post nasal catarrh, and have tried everything in the city that could be obtained, in the shape of catarrh cures, and found no permanent relief from any of them, till a friend one day advised me to try your Nasal Balm, and I find that even one bottle has done me more good than all the medicines put together that I have persecuted myself with before. I was very much troubled with spitting and hawking, especially in the morning, so much so that my throat was continually in a raw condition, but I am now beginning to know what it is to be able to speak freely. I shall not fail to recommend it to any of my friends suffering from the like disease.

NASAL BALM
INSTANTLY RELIEVES
Cold in Head.

A. W. Mallory, Mallorytown, Ont., says: My daughter suffered for years from a most distressing and annoying Catarrh. Her case was under the treatment of eminent physicians in the United States and Canada. Two months use of Nasal Balm has had more beneficial effects than all former treatment combined.

L. D. Dion, Dept. Railways and Canals, Ottawa, says: I am very glad to give you to-day the testimony that Nasal Balm has completely cured my catarrh, from which I suffered for nearly three years.

NASAL BALM
POSITIVELY CURES
CATARRH.

D. Derbyshire, Mayor of Brockville and President of the Ontario Creamery Association, says: Nasal Balm beats the world for Catarrh and Cold in the Head. In my own case it effected relief from the first application.

Isaac Waterman, Imperial Oil Coy, Petrolia, Ont., says: Nasal Balm gave me the most perfect satisfaction of any medicine I ever used for Cold in the Head. I found it easy to use, quick in giving relief and effect a complete cure in a couple of hours.

If Nasal Balm is not kept in stock by your dealer it will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 Cent for small and $1 for large size bottles) by addressing

UPERS' BODIES!

Explains his Position in the Matter.

[illegible] brought so her [illegible] public by the to[illegible] me to make a [illegible] columns [illegible] the bodies of those who have [illegible] I don't act on my own [illegible] under the direct control [illegible] Government, as the [illegible] show;

Sec. 2 — In all legal[illegible] the provisions of this Act [illegible] found dead, publicly [illegible] a public morgue, or who [illegible] death has been support[illegible] institution shall [illegible] notified as herein[illegible] such body be within [illegible] days after claimed by relatives or [illegible] friends.

Sec. 3 — Every coroner whether he does or not hold an inquest on any body found publicly exposed to which his attention has been called and which is not claimed in accordance with Sec. 2 of this Act, shall give notice to the Inspector of Anatomy of the locality in which he may be, failing which he shall cause to be as has been customary.

Sec. 10 — The master of any city or town coming under the provisions of this Act shall direct notice to be given to the Inspector of Anatomy of any adult body that is brought under his notice which is unclaimed by relatives or friends as set forth in Sec. 2 of this Act.

From this it will appear that it is not only my privilege but my bounden duty to secure on behalf of the Government for scientific purposes all unclaimed bodies which by that act become the Government property, and that any want of feeling hinted at in the Post, is not chargeable to myself, but to the Government, whose servant I am.

It would therefore seem absurd to insinuate that I have adopted any unfair or secret methods of securing those bodies when the Government not only protects me in taking them but also compels me to do so.

As to the number of bodies taken, the reference to the record will show that during my term of office there have been shipped only two bodies, namely, that of John Crocket, who died Feb 5, 1888, and Samuel Perry, who died March 3, 1889.

The reference to sham burials, in which the coffins are alleged to be filled with stones, is of course a groundless insinuation, as I could have no object in resorting to this means of securing bodies having, as I have above stated, full authority from the Government to secure them openly and above board.

In the case of Thomas Hackett, I sent a message inviting his brother, James Hackett of Orangeville, to be present at the funeral and his statement may be had at any time as to whether it was done or not.

In order that full particulars may be given to all parties interested in any of those bodies thus shipped the Government requires that the jail authorities keep a record of the name, birth place, age and one and cause of death of each individual dying under their care, and these authorities are also ordered to make an entry stating whether the body was interfered or claimed by the Inspector.

It would, therefore, be a simple matter to refer to the jail authorities to verify the above statement. As a still further check the Inspector of Toronto is compelled to keep a record of all bodies received by him and enter in the exact place (giving the number of the grave) in which the remains are ordered after they have been disposed of by the sanitary authorities.

By Further the Inspector of Anatomy in Toronto assures me that in every respect his regulations are carried out.

Allow me to state, at this point, that any one having a relation at present in the jail and anxious to know his fate may be notified immediately of the death by leaving with me the name of the telegraph office nearest you.

The Sun makes frequent reference to the number of bodies received by me for the Medical Schools. In reply I would wish to state that what I do receive is supply and that in no case have I gone outside of my legal rights to secure bodies and to send an account for payment for the bodies which are received. Bodies which were never claimed by relatives or friends I merely handle and ship for the Government, which claims them. For this the Government allows me $2 per day for two days for the trouble and time in the work and $5 for shipping.

We are now in a position to deal with the case of the two bodies in question. The first was that of John Crockett, who died Feb. 5, 1888. For this body was received a full coffin, trimmed and with handles for which I was charged $12 from Toronto. The coffin the body was shipped in to Toronto.

In the Post it is alleged that my bill stated that I had buried John Crockett. This is false as a reference to the account itself will show, that I charged a fairly staid, that I charged only for a coffin while in other accounts it states that the body was taken to the grave.

This may be a very important point to refer to the insinuation in reference to Dr Lewis's knowledge of damaging evidence. In personal conversation with the coroner he states that he knows nothing further than that I am Inspector of Anatomy for the county of Dufferin. I received a premium from the Government which entitled the body of Samuel Perry, which I expressed to Toronto.

The second body, which has become a matter of notoriety, was that of Samuel Perry, who died in the jail. I received a full coffin for this body, which I buried in the Jail Grounds. I made no entry in my books of this, as I was in the habit of burying in the jail yard. It was my return to the Government, which I forwarded to the Government, that I buried the body. I received no money for this statement of mine. I made an ordinary shell to fit the body and buried it decently. In this case I did not receive any other remuneration than the $2 per day for two days. I did not receive any other remuneration than the $2 per day for two days. I did not receive any other remuneration than the $2 per day for two days.

Poetry.

THE BROOK AND THE BOY.

Out of the village there comes this boy;
Dark and tall and lithe is he;
And he whistles his dog and he rebuoyeth his Beech,
And he taketh a pause, as there he stands,
With the brook that babbleth free!

"Now tell me, water so cold and clear,
And whence thou hast come so far?"
"From the further side
Of the hill we flow,
Where the snow is bride
Of the last year's snow—
Children thereof we are!"

And whither dost thou pursue thy way,
Oh, waters cold and clear and fair?"
"Where the sun is gay
In the love of spring
We hurry away
Our songs to sing
To the lambkins bleating there."

"Oh, I straight stay where the roses bloom, Thou waters sweet and good and true!"
"We shall journey on
Through the meadows fair
Till we come anon
To the vineyard where
Drippeth the vine with dew."

"Long should I linger to press those pines, Oh, honest water, sweet and cool!"
"Nay, speed we fast
Through the balmy shade
Till we come at last
Where the mulberry maid
Swings by the crystal pool!"

Up from the waters that babble on
All silently fareth the dark, lithe blade,
And he giveth nor rose nor vine a look,
But panting the goes to beat the brook,
Wooing that mulberry maid.

A FATHER'S WRATH.

LINDSAY, March 9.—Recently there have been two young girls assaulted by a ruffian who is said to be recognized as a married man by the name of Raymond. A short time ago a little daughter of Mr. J. A. Barron, M. P., was returning home from the skating rink, when it is said this man attacked the child, but her screams frightened him and he ran. Mr. Barron returned from Ottawa last night and on hearing this morning of the occurrence sent for the chief constable with the object of frightening the man, whom they went to see, so that he would leave the town, but so soon as Mr. Barron saw him, and before the chief constable could interfere the M. P. jumped upon the ruffian and gave him a severe beating with a stick which he had in his hand. By reason of Raymond starting to run, Mr. Barron, who followed him, was able to repeat the dose before the chief constable could interfere.

TRIED TO CREMATE HIMSELF.

PARDEE, Ont., March 1.—Yesterday a man with bare feet, with very little clothing and armed with a block of wood, approached the railway station. Arriving there the unknown commenced smashing the windows, after which he retreated to a tank close at hand, fastened the doors on the inside, and setting fire to his clothes, commenced cremating himself, chanting at the same time some religious verses. Six men were detailed to dislodge him. The man was seen through the window, with his clothes on him. Bidding defiance to his besiegers, he demolished the north window and leaping through commenced an attack on them. Rushing upon one man he desperately attacked him, and would have seriously injured him but for the timely aid of other men. The maniac was secured and brought to the station where he was clothed and bound. He is badly burned, and in rescuing their pomrade several of the men also sustained severe burns. There is nothing to show who he is or where he came from, as all traces have been lost.

Labor Items.

Sudden accidents often befall artizans, farmers and all who work in the open air, besides the exposure to cold and damp, producing rheumatism, lame back, stiff joints, lameness, etc. Yellow Oil is a ready remedy for all such troubles. It is handy and reliable, and can be used internally or externally.

AN ARTIST'S SUICIDE.

Arthur Alexander, aged 26, for several years a stained glass artist in the employ of N. T. Lyon, Church street, Toronto, complained that his head troubled him at 4 o'clock on Monday afternoon and asked to go home. Tuesday he remained in bed and on Wednesday morning left his mother's house, 261 Euclid avenue, to go for a walk. This was the last heard of him until Friday morning, when a dead body found hanging on a tree near Concord, out in Vaughan, by some school children was recognized as that of Alexander. He had evidently walked out there Wednesday and committed suicide while temporarily insane. Five or six years ago he visited England to perfect himself in his trade and after his return showed symptoms of insanity and was confined in a lunatic asylum for a time. He was 27 years of age very ambitious and subject to fits of melancholy.

Mrs. Jos. Wilson, of Bright, committed suicide by drowning in her cistern Monday morning at five o'clock. Her husband missed her for a few minutes, and upon searching he found her as stated. She tried suicide by poisoning about two months ago. She has suffered from melancholia for some months past. The husband and family of nine children have the sympathy of this locality at their severe loss.

When you hear a man sneering at his local papers you may know at once that he does not spend any time or money in making them better. A man who cannot see any benefit arising to his town from the influence of his local paper is of as little value to the town as a year old delinquent list.

At Evansville, Ind., an explosion occurred in the shaving or dust room of the Armstrong furniture factory which wrecked it and then fire completed the work. Three boys Fred Shasbe, Willie Cheatham and George Crawford, were in the dust room eating their dinner and were burned to death. Charles Shelby, the engineer, was blown 20 feet and had both legs broken and his head badly crushed.

HE WAS A "SLICK UN."

MERIDEN, Kansas, March 3.—"I'm a slick 'un," Telegraph Operator Tay has heard these words addressed to him by a stranger last night while he was receiving a message at the railway station. He paid no attention to the remark until he completed the message which read as follows:—To the Sheriff,—Hicks & Gephart's Bank, Valley Falls, robbed this morning of $3,000; robber unknown. Description as follows:—Blonde, hair and moustache light, blue eyes, five feet nineteen, medium weight." The operator looked up and nearly lost his breath when he saw standing before him the man described in the despatch. He did not reveal the fact of the recognition, but merely agreed with the stranger that he was a "slick 'un." The stranger asked where he could put up for the night. The operator directed him to a hotel, where the "slick 'un" took a room, requesting to be called in the morning in time for the train. Police officers were notified by the operator of stranger's arrival. They went to the hotel, and the stranger was called out of his room and arrested. He attempted to get at his weapons, but the officers were too quick, and he was shot dead. The coroner's jury returned a verdict exonerating the officers. The outlaw was searched and the stolen money recovered.

Ephraim Page, a young farmer about two miles west of Holland Centre, lost a pair of young horses recently. It appears they were both stabled in one stall and one of them took sick during the night and in rolling and floundering about kicked its mate so badly that it died. The sick one also died shortly afterwards.

CATARRH,

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS—HAY FEVER

A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N.B.—This treatment is not a snuff or an ointment; both have been discarded by reputable physicians as injurious. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 303 West King Street, Toronto, Canada.—Toronto Globe.

Sufferers from Catarrhal troubles should carefully read the above.

Then he clasped her with emotion,
Drew the maiden to his breast,
Whispered vows of true devotion,
The old, old tale,—you know the rest.
From his circled arms upspringing,
With a tear she turned away,
And her voice with sorrow ringing,
"I shall not see my bridal day."

This dramatic speech broke him up badly; but when she explained that her apprehensions were founded on the fact of an inherited predisposition to consumption in her family, he calmed her fears, bought a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for her, and she is now the incarnation of health. Consumption fastens its hold upon its victims while they are unconscious of its approach. The "Golden Medical Discovery" has cured thousands of cases of this most fatal of maladies. But it must be taken before the disease is too far advanced in order to be effective. If taken in time, and given a fair trial, it will cure, or money paid for it will be refunded.

For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Asthma, Severe Coughs, and kindred affections, it is an efficient remedy.

Long-Standing

Blood Diseases are cured by the persevering use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

This medicine is an Alterative, and causes a radical change in the system. The process, in some cases, may not be quite so rapid as in others; but, with persistence, the result is certain. Read these testimonials:—

"For two years I suffered from a severe pain in my right side, and had other troubles caused by a torpid liver and dyspepsia. After giving several medicines a fair trial without a cure, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was greatly benefited by the first bottle, and after taking five bottles I was completely cured."—John W. Benson, 70 Lawrence st., Lowell, Mass.

Last May a large carbuncle broke out on my arm. The usual remedies had no effect and I was confined to my bed for eight weeks. A friend induced me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Less than three bottles healed the sore. In all my experience with medicine, I never saw more

Wonderful Results.

Another marked effect of the use of this medicine was the strengthening of my sight."—Mrs. Carrie Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

"I had a dry scaly humor for years, and suffered terribly; and, as my brother and sister were similarly afflicted, I presume the malady is hereditary. Last winter, Dr. Tyron, (of Fernandina, Fla.,) recommended me to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and continue it for a year. For five months I took it daily. I have not had a blemish upon my body for the last three months."—T. E. Wiley, 146 Chambers st., New York City.

"Last fall and winter I was troubled with a dull, heavy pain in my side. I did not notice it much at first, but it gradually grew worse until it became almost unbearable. During the latter part of this time, disorders of the stomach and liver increased my troubles. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after faithfully continuing the use of this medicine for some months, the pain disappeared and I was completely cured."—Mrs. Augusta A. Furbush, Haverhill, Mass.

Read this extract from the scientific papers of Great Britain and Europe:

The four grandest medical centres of the world are London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna. These cities have immense hospitals teeming with suffering humanity. Crowds of students throng the wards studying under the Professors in charge. The most renowned physicians of the world teach and practice here, and the institutions are storehouses of medical knowledge and experience. With a view of making this experience available to the public the Hospital Remedy Co. at great expense secured the prescriptions of these hospitals, prepared the specifics, and although it would cost from $25 to $100 to secure the attention of their distinguished originators, yet in this way their prepared specifics are offered at the price of the quack patent medicines that flood the market and absurdly claim to cure every ill from a single bottle.

Newspaper Decisions.

1. Any person or persons who take a paper regularly from the post office, whether directed in his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment.
2. If a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken or not.
3. The courts have decided that refusing to take a newspaper or periodical from the post office or removing and leaving them uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intended fraud.

THE OLD MUSIC BOOK.

I turned with silent reverence
Its unknown pages o'er,
The dusty lids (maybe a sound
Of sighing) lifted for the first
In days long past in other hands,
Of ancient melodies
Old tunes that to the soul gentle hands
That touched the ivory keys.

The book a hundred fancies wears
On every yellow page,
Some warmly, fervently, other
The notes all dim with age.
And variables, long worn out,
And faded songs and odd,
With trill and tremolo all sleepy,
And grown musty-fold.

Perchance in those old bygone days
My lady sat and played
In hoddered elsewhere of moon,
And furrowed blue brocade.
Her lissome fingers dancing ran
Through many a fanciful strain,
Until Miss Bell behind her fan
Begged "that sweet piece again."

Perchance, when summer nights were long
And soft winds swept the meadows,
Some chosen youth poured out his song
To Chloe through the shadows,
Or wooing with both of higher mode,
In manner well-bit pavilion,
Trod graceful through this minuet,
Or figured this cotillion.

So vagrant fancies through the mind
Play fitful now and then,
As, with a sigh and smile combined,
I close the book again.
I dare not touch its music old
In this rude modern day;
Hallowed by fingers long since cold,
And voices passed away.

The Story Teller.

PUMPER JIM.

There were mobs of angry men in the Tuna valley. They had collected at various points with the intention of marching to the head office of the Combined Pipe Lines company in a body that represented the oil producers of the entire Harford region and demanding that their oil tanks be relieved. Failing to obtain this concession, the producers meant to take possession of the lines and run them for their self protection or destroy them.

It was a beautiful May day, soft and warm, and Jim Croffut felt indolent as he sat outside of the pump station listening to monotonous strokes of the big engine sending the petroleum with a musical clink into the main line. He had smoked his pipe so lazily that it had gone out, but he still held the stem between his teeth.

A cheerful laugh aroused him from his reverie, and he swung forward, dropping the chair on its four feet.

"Well, I declair, Jim, you are the sleepiest man on the Tuna. You never can keep your pipe going."

"How d'ye do, Mrs. Stearns? Will you sit?"

"No, thank you; I'm on my way to the store."

"Will you 'blige by bringin' me a plug of smokin' tobacey? I'm about out of that consolation."

"Certainly, Jim; but I do think your about the most easily consoled man I ever saw. Good morning."

"Good mornin."

He watched her tripping lightly over the ground for a few moments, and then resuming his seat, muttered: "Perhaps not so easily consoled as you think, Widdow Sterns, when none but you can do it; and yet I can't tell you, for it would seem like forgettin' Bill Stearns, and me and him was pards too long for that."

Knowing that he would soon have a new supply of tobacco he knocked the ashes out of his pipe and filled the bowl, packing it well with the crumbs, which he picked from his coat pocket with thumb and forefinger. The coat was still lying over his knees, but he unwittingly forgot to fumble in it for a match while he rested his elbow on it. Again his preoccupation was broken by a voice, likewise familiar to him. This time the shed was between him and the speaker, who exclaimed, "Whoa, boys! don't kick, or we'll all be in kingdom come in two shakes of a cat's tail."

Jim jumped to his feet and ran around the shed. Before him lay a torpedo man, thrown from his box by the breaking of an axle and holding to the lines that guided his team. The horses instinctively stood still, and Jim hastened to unhitch them lest they should become restless and kick the wagon, which the torpedo man grimly told him was loaded. When the horses were tied to a tree at a short distance from the wreck Jim went to the torpedo man and helped him to his feet.

"I got a bad twist, Pumper Jim; but I'm thankful that was all."

"Well, you are under obligashuns to be glad, for you come mighty near bein' a passenger on the sky high route. How did you get tied up that way anyhow?"

"Makin' a short cut. I was goin' gentle enough but the wheel got twisted somehow on the big pipe and the axle snapped. I dropped on the pipe and hurt somethin'."

"You torpedo men are all durn fool anyhow, Jake Bardin, and it's a wonder there ain't more of you knocked into the tree tops."

By that time Jake was as comfortable as he could be made on the rude lounge Jim constructed with a plank and two chairs.

"I'll look for somebody to send Rogers word," said Jim, and he went out to the main road, where he met a detachment of producers on their way to Harford.

"Say," he called, "there's a man hurt down to the pump station—Jake Bardin. Will one of you men be kind enough to tell Rogers?"

Very much like a string of oaths poured out of producers man the customer looked back at him by the man nearest him.

"Metropolitan ain't got nothing to do with a man being human; have they? You tell Rogers to send a doctor out here, and then you can mill yourself a man."

Jim caused the crowd of the men, for he had heard the mutterings of the storm that was that day, but he made no allusion to the discontent which had at last developed into violence.

"We're comin' back to see you, mebbe, and we'll fetch a doctor with us."

"You'll find me at home when you come, but if there's a man in the crowd he'll go straight to Rogers' office when he goes to Harford, and let 'em know that one of their men's laid up here with a bad hurt."

"That being the case, we'll all call on Rogers right off, for we're all men and demand a man's rights."

"Much obliged," Jim call and then hastened to Jake.

"Take it as easy as you can, Bardin' Rogers will send for you soon."

He was right, for in a short time one of Rogers' teams dashed up to the pump station and the driver leaped to the ground. Jake was lifted into the buggy and the driver took up the lines to go, when Jim asked what was going on in Harford.

"Nothin' but the producers. They're going on big, and there's likely to be somethin' smashed 'fore night."

"Likely," Jim commented, and then nodded good-bye to Jake.

An extra man who had come with the buggy mounted one of the horses Jake had driven, and, leading the other, was soon out of sight. The broken wagon, with its load of explosives, lay on its side.

Jim contemplated it a few moments and then remarked: "If there's to be any smashin goin' on, that stuff in there might be useful. I'll just confiscate it, as they used to say in the army."

He lifted the lid off the box and looked at the cans. They were all small, each containing a quart of glycerine.

"Good," he muttered. "They'll make good bombs. I could throw one of them one hundred feet, I reckon, on a pinch."

He took them carefully out of the box and carried them into the shed, as he called the little house that covered the pumping engines. When done with that he looked around for his pipe and finally found it, half full of tobacco. Lighting it, he sat down to resume the meditation that had been twice interrupted that day. Finding that his thoughts were inclined to wander he rose and gave the fire a shaking up. When he threw the poker down he said to himself as if to another person:

"If they get to howlin' around here I guess I'll have to let the fires out, but there's no use in borrowin' trouble."

The sun was on the slant to the west, when he heard again the Widow Sterns' voice, but this time it was full of alarm.

"They're comin', Jim—the producers. They're just at my beats, but they stopped down there in the hollow to smash the pipe. I saw them breaking it with crowbars."

She was very much excited, and exhausted and breathless from running.

"Sit down, Mrs. Sterns, and rest up a bit while I stop the pump. There ain't no use squirtin' the grease on the ground."

He looked at her flushed cheeks and knew that had it not been for the unusual bodily exertion she had undergone they would have been pale, for he saw her fright in her eyes and felt it in her tone.

"But you must run, Jim. They're comin' to smash the pump, and if they find you here they might hurt you."

"Did you bring the tobacey, Mrs. Sterns?"

"Certainly I did, but you must hurry out of here."

"No; I must stay here, but you must run soon as you give me the tobacey."

"Oh, Jim, run, for they will kill you!" She got up and put her hands on his shoulders pleadingly.

"No they won't. I'll just keep them away till they cool off, and then I'll come home to supper, for they'll go away."

"If you don't go, I won't, for if they see a woman here they won't do any damage for fear of hurtin' her."

"You mustn't stay for that reason. They would my Jim Croffut had got a woman to protect him. You give me the tobacey and run."

"I'll take care of myself, and you must go now, but don't forget the tobacey."

"Here it is. Good-by, for I'd rather go than have them think you a coward; but it isn't easy, Jim."

He had snatched the tobacco with a quick "thank you," and was climbing to the roof of the station on a ladder. In one hand he carried a can of glycerine. When he reached the platform that he had built, that was put on the roof. He waved the hand to her and ran down the ladder. In a few minutes he had four cans on the platform and then sat down to light his pipe.

"My! That woman hangin' on to my arm frightened me most. I'd rather face the whole mob of producers than have her hangin'. For I don't get so shook up."

He had not long to wait until he saw the producers coming. When he saw how many there were of them he ran down the ladder and locked the doors of the station; then he went back to the platform. At the head of the crowd of angry men he recognized the man whom he had requested to inform Rodgers of the torpedo man's accident.

"Hello, Ben Harbaugh, what's up?"

"You, and we want you to come down and open the doors. We want to examine the engine. It isn't workin'."

"Oh, the pump's all right! a-goin' busy and shut her down. Too hot today for even a pump to work."

"Well, you can suit your pleasure about letin' us in; we'll get in ourselves. Come on, boys!"

Harbaugh held a light crowbar as a sort of signal to the others to follow him and turned in from the road.

"Just wait a minute, Harbaugh, and take a look at this." He rose to his feet and held up a can. "That's a bomb. It's glycerine, and if you fellers get too close to them doors I'll drop it on your heads."

Harbaugh came to a halt, and the others crowded around him, peering at Jim, whose tall, strong figure was in position for immediate action. They were angry and very determined, those men, and would have laughed at a gun leveled at them, but the mention of glycerine made them pause. It has no aim, but scatters death in radii from the point of its explosion.

Harbaugh picked up courage and called:

"You can't fool us with an empty can, Jim, and we give you just one more chance to git down and out of the way, for we are going to smash that pump."

For reply Jim swung the can around his head and let it go at a tangent. It struck the ground 200 feet from the men and exploded, hurling stones and dirt in every direction.

The producers fell back, for they had seen the other cans and knew well the folly of risking their lives in the attempt to dislodge a man who was determined to use such ammunition in defence of the property he was guarding. A consultation was held, and it was decided to parley with the pumper. Harbaugh was selected as spokesman, and he approached, with two or three others, to within easy talking distance of the station.

"Say, Croffut, we want to talk to you," Harbaugh said.

"Go ahead; I can hear you from there," Jim replied.

"Why don't you get down and out and give us a chance to get square with the Lines? They've never done anything particular for you, and they have done us a mighty sort of harm."

"How?"

"By letting our tanks overflow and the oil from our wells run to waste. We can always get our oil run if we will sell it to them at a lower price than the regular market."

"So I've heard," Jim commented; "but how's smashin' the pump goin' to help you?"

"It will bring the Lines to terms, and when they get a new pump up, they will be afraid to let our oil run to waste."

"What'll become of your oil when the pump's layin' idle."

"We can afford the loss if we get satisfaction afterward in having our oil taken care of."

"Well, I ain't got nothin' to do with that; I'm here to pump, and to take care of the Lines' property."

"You're pumpin' water, that's what you're doin'," one of the other producers blurted.

"What come out of the ground when you broke the line down in the boiler—grease or water?"

The producers looked at each other in amazement, as if to ask how he knew of the broken line, and then Harbaugh remarked: "It was the widow Stearns. Come, Jim," he said, in a louder voice, "surrender and we will make it right with you."

"It's right with me now," Jim answered; "I'm here to protect this pump and I'm going to do it."

"Well you can't say that we haven't given you ample notice and if you get hurt it will be your own fault."

"Yes, I guess it will," Jim observed, with provoking calmness.

The producers retired to the main body and another consultation was held. Propositions were made to surround the pump station and boldly attack it, but the cooler heads promptly decided against such measures.

"I've got an idea," said Harbaugh. "Let us lay quiet until supper time and the widow Stearns will come with some thing for Jim to eat. When she goes up to the station we'll just follow her. Jim won't dare to fire a glycerine can then for fear of killing her."

"Good" exclaimed a number of the producers, and all gave assent to the plan.

A short time after sunset Mrs. Stearns came up the road and turned to go to the station. Harbaugh and two others immediately joined her, and behind them followed other producers armed with gunshot and hammers. Of the presence of the mob of men, who had been concealed in the woods, she was ignorant, and with regard to the others she took no thought until Jim called to her:

"I don't want any supper to-night, Mrs. Stearns, and you will tell the other pumper I'll stay on for the night turn."

"All right, Mr. Croffut; I'll tell him," Mrs. Stearns answered, and turned to go home. Then discovered the number of men who had been behind her. Her way was blocked, and she had to step back to avoid being trod upon. The men in the rear were advancing and pushing those in front, who forced Mrs. Stearns nearer to the station, she wondering what it meant.

Jim made it plain to her when, in cold, deliberate tones, he said: "Ben Harbaugh and you other men, you needn't think that you can find protection behind a woman, for as sure as I live, if you come ten steps further, I'll throw a can at you."

"Why, Jim, you wouldn't kill a woman," Harbaugh exclaimed.

"Not intentionally, but I'm here to take care of this pump, as I told you and don' you men come ten steps closer, that' all."

Mrs. Stearns had faced about, and was looking at Jim. She realized her danger if he meant what he said, and when her eyes rested on his resolute face her cheeks blanched and a shiver passed over her. The men behind seemed to disbelieve Jim, for they were steadily advancing, while Jim was counting their steps: one, two, three, four, five, six, seven'—then he stooped and lifted a can—'eight, nine'—

"Stop, or he will kill us!" shrieked the widow, seeing Jim swing the can, and her words called a halt. Jim lowered the can and awaited the next movement of the producers.

"He's crazy," said Harbaugh, "and he will throw those cans at us sure. Let us fall back and wait till after dark."

In a minute the widow was left standing alone, her knees shaking and her breath coming in short convulsive gasps. Tears filled her eyes, and through the mist before them she gave Jim a reproachful look; then she turned and walked slowly away.

"He would have thrown that bomb whether it killed me or not," she murmured, "and all for that old pump that could be replaced in three weeks."

She began to sob, not caring that many men were looking at her. Suddenly the growing darkness against the western hillside reflected to her eyes a yellowish tint. She looked back. The big gas jet at the station was ablaze. Jim had taken advantage of the momentary discomfiture of the producers to light it, and the wide circle of its light made the ground within a hundred yards of him almost as plain to his vision as it was in the daylight. And in spite of her grief she was glad he had the protection that the gas jet gave him.

As the darkness settled, the silence in the valley was broken only by the crickets, and from toward Harford came the faint sound of the whistle of a locomotive. Jim moved restlessly on the small platform, wishing the officers of the Lines would send a rescuing party. Again the whistle sounded, nearer this time, and Jim hoped that the approaching train bore to him relief from the trying position. While he looked down the valley and listened for the rumble of the freight cars, a flash illumined the darkness of the woods and he fell prone upon the platform. He was shot through the side. There was a shout from the mob as they charged on the pump station.

Jim heard the cry of onslaught and staggered to his feet. By great effort he was able to appear strong in spite of the stream of warm blood on his leg.

"Stop, you devils, or I'll kill every one of you!" and he threw a can of glycerine right in the path of the producers. It burst, and the explosion covered them with dust and pelted them with pebbles. "Stop!" he yelled again as he swung another can into the air.

The producers huddled together and then fell back to await until Jim was exhausted from the flow of blood from his wound. The swoon came sooner than they expected. As he sank on the platform the short, sharp whistle that to railroaders means "Down brakes!" sounded in his ears. Immediately the producers charged on the station; but Harbaugh called a halt before they reached it, for he saw the sheriff and his armed deputies (many of them were clerks and employes of the lines) advancing from the train, just come to a standstill. Seeing the number of the sheriff's posse, the producers fled and scattered under cover of the woods.

There was a surgeon with the sheriff's force, who dressed Jim's wounds, and then, on a stretcher, the pumper was carried to his room at Mrs. Stearns's house. His recovery was very slow, and the widow was unfailing in her attention to him. She was kind and gentle, but there was a change in her manner that distressed him. He could not account for it, and spent many an hour in silent meditation upon it. One day a light broke in upon him, and he turned a question to the widow.

"Do you think I would have thrown that can if you that day when the producers was pushin' you to'rd the station?"

When he launched the query at her the widow was confused, and answered disconnectedly that she thought he would have thrown it.

"You are mistaken, for I would have let 'em smash the old pump rather than run the risk of takin' any innocent life, much less yours, or even hurtin' you, for I've had a hankerin' after you this many a day."

The widow's cheeks flushed a deeper red and her eyes sparkled with the light of joy, but she would not resist the temptation to say: "You looked a good deal more in earnest when you threatened to throw that can at me than you do now, and if I was mistaken then mebbe I ought not to be quick in believin' now."

"I had to look mighty much in earnest then, for looks had to do the business, but now I am trusting most to words."

"Well, if you can trust them, I guess I can too."

After that declaration there was nothing in the widow's manner that distressed Jim.—Harper's Weekly.

MRS. BURCHELL'S FATHER ARRIVES.

J. Rex as Happy as a King.

NEW YORK, March 22.—Among the passengers on the White Star steamship Germanic which arrived to-day was David Stevenson, the father of Mrs. Burchell whose husband is under arrest for murdering Frederick Benwell at Woodstock, Canada, on Feb. 17. Mr. Stevenson, who is district traffic manager of the London & Northwestern railway company, was accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. West Jones, and Mr. C. W. C. Fulton, late high sheriff of London. When Mr. Stevenson was asked what he would do toward the defense of his son-in-law, he said he came to this country solely to look after the interests of his daughter. Now that his daughter was practically free he did not see why he should remain long in this country. However, if his daughter had to remain until the trial of Burchell came off he would see that her interests were properly looked after. He intended taking her back to England as soon as he could. Mr. Stevenson said that his daughter was deceived by Burchell with regard to the farm at Woodstock, and that she knew no more about it than did either Benwell or Polly. He added that he was opposed to the marriage of his daughter to Burchell. He had looked up the latter's record as a young man at college, and was greatly shocked when his daughter ran away with him. From the manner in which Mr. Stevenson spoke of Burchell it does not look as if he would do much toward the defense of his son-in-law. Mr. Stevenson leaves for Canada to-morrow.

THE PRISONER BURCHELL.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., March 22.—Burchell continues to enjoy life in the gaol and eats three good square meals a day. This morning he received a box of cigars from John Bampfield, of the International hotel, Niagara Falls. Burchell also received a book, entitled "The Way to God," by D. L. Moody. The address was written in a woman's hand, and on the fly leaf was written the inscription, "From one who loves sinners." On the fly leaves also were written a large number of Scriptural texts, to which the prisoner was referred. A special guard was appointed to-day. The guard will sleep in the corridor in front of Burchell's sleeping cell and keep constant watch over him. He expects Mrs Burchell and her father to visit him on Monday.

A Tremendous Sensation
would have been created one hundred years ago by the sight of one of our modern express trains whizzing along at the rate of sixty miles an hour. Just think how our grandfathers would have stared at such a spectacle! It takes a good deal to astonish people now-a-days, but some of the marvelous cures of consumption, wrought by Dr Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, have created widespread amazement. Consumption is at last acknowledged curable. The "Golden Medical Discovery" is the only known remedy for it. If taken at the right time—which bear in mind, is not when the lungs are nearly gone—it works as nothing else in the world can. It is the only medicine of its class, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee that it will benefit or cure in all cases of disease for which it is recommended, or money paid for it will be promptly rendered.

A new and strange story is sent out regarding the case of Jessie White, of Joliet, Ill., who killed herself because of the persecutions of an anonymous letter-writer. It is now hinted that Miss White herself wrote the letters which drove her to self destruction. If this turns out to be true it will furnish an amazing illustration of the freaks to which the human mind is subject. The probable fact, however, is that an attempt is being made to throw confusion about the case in order to divert attention from the person who is really guilty. Perhaps Somebody has some uncomfortably near being found out. One theory is that a brother of the girl, who had been estranged from home, wrote the letters to gratify his spite. Nothing has been proven, however, and the affair is still enveloped in mystery.

If your cough keeps you awake and restless by night, take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and obtain immediate relief. This remedy allays inflammation, heals the pulmonary organs, induces sleep, and restores health. The sooner you begin the better.

One hundred years ago the aggregate population of the four largest cities on this Continent—Philadelphia, New York, Boston and Baltimore—was barely over 100,000. To-day the aggregate population of the four largest—New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Brooklyn—is estimated at 5,000,000. Such are changes of a century.

A BARLEY BOOMERANG.

(London Free Press.)

By this time the powers at Washington should know that any attack upon Canada, either in its tariff arrangements or carrying facilities, is just as likely to rebound on themselves as to inflict harm upon this country. We saw a fine example of this after the "retaliation" message of President Cleveland—of which every respectable American is now heartily ashamed—when many thousands of tons of traffic passing over their lines in and out of New York on Canadian account were diverted to Halifax, constituting a veritable "boom" for our maritime interest, without any great disadvantage to the commercial public. A similar result is likely to take place in regard to the American barley interest if the new duty goes into effect. Oswego will be ruined. There is in that city a large amount of capital invested in the Canadian barely trade. The barely from the Bay of Quinte region is famous the world over, and Oswego is the main port of entry for that product into the United States. There are several large malting firms in the city, a number of firms of barley buyers and commission men, and a large fleet of vessels engaged in its transportation. Hundreds upon hundreds of laboring men depend upon this trade for employment. To increase the duty on this grain from 10 to 30 cents a bushel will utterly wipe out the only grain trade of the port and leave Oswego, now the seventh port of entry in the United States, a deserted village, so says a recent despatch.

BLUSTER INSTEAD OF ARGUMENT.

(From the Empire.)

It was a very indecent exhibition when the Commissioner of Crown Lands thundered from his place in the House at Mr. Marter, because the member for Muskoka ventilated a grievance felt by his constituents and asked for redress, the only thing besides mere noise and personalities in Mr. Hardy's harangue being an accusation that Mr. Marter was making political capital for the coming election. The bullying tone of the speech was in itself very indecorous in a Minister of the Crown, and the unfairness of the charge is proved by the record of Mr. Marter as a zealous advocate of the interests of his constituents, by the fact that the Grit candidate for the seat has publicly advocated the same policy, and that one of the supporters of the Ministry backed up the member for Muskoka in this very debate. Attempts at browbeating and personalities have been too common from the Ministerial side of the House this session in place of argument and fair discussion; but in this instance the Commissioner of Crown Lands surpassed the record of himself and his friends. The animus influencing him was, however, shown in a second speech, in which Mr. Hardy excused his vituperation by the plea that Mr. Marter had "slandered" Government officials. That was the offence of the member for Muskoka, that he had exposed the Ministerial system of inflicting upon his constituency incapable and partisan officials to reward party services, and had proved by facts and documents the correctness of his criticisms in the minds of reasonable men. The fairness of Mr. Hardy's scolding of a brother member for this public service may be imagined from his statement that Mr. Marter had quoted from a Tory editor who was not on the spot; the correction that the quotation was from a Grit editor who was on the spot as a party man, causing, as a Ministerial organ reports, that "the matter was allowed to drop." An expression of regret for this and other misrepresentations would have been more befitting than "dropping" the matter. Mr. Hardy must not hope that loud talking, rude manners and personal vituperation can be made to do duty for argument and accuracy of statement.

DESTITUTE DAKOTA.

A Warning to Canadian Settlers.

The governor of South Dakota accompanied a deputation from that state which visited St. Paul last Wednesday, for the purpose of securing aid for the destitute farmers of the state. The deputation met the St. Paul joint relief committee, and among its speakers was Judge Holdridge, of Miner county, who said:

"Those who represented there was abundance in his section of the country were certainly egregiously mistaken. He had lived in Minor county nine years and now every man in it, and spoke with perfect knowledge of the situation. The county commissioners had devoted nearly all of their time gratuitously to this matter. Statistics showed that last year wheat raised in that county averaged only one bushel to the acre, corn one bushel, and flax one bushel. There were practically no oats at all, and potatoes averaged only ten bushels. Grass, which was depended upon for fuel by many, was almost a total failure also. The people are poor. * * * It was owing to contributions from the outside that the people lived through the winter, and in the teeth of all statements to the contrary he declared that if it had not been for the generosity of the outside people and the railroads, and if they had an ordinary cold winter, hundreds would have perished by starvation and cold. Not one farmer out of five has seed and they don't know where to get it."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Another effort is being made by the Montreal Board of Trade and Corn Exchange to obtain a rebate on the canal tolls on oats.

Some of the Oka Indians who still remain on the old reserve have announced their final decision not to accept the offers of compensation made to them by the Seminary.

At a meeting of the Lincoln Conservatives held at St. Catharines on Saturday, Major James Hiscott, of Niagara, was selected to succeed the constituency for the Local Legislature.

The effort to expel Mr. Leblanc from the Quebec Legislature for bringing the Table Rock charges as creating such indignation among the Montreal Conservatives, who intended tendering Mr. Leblanc a banquet on his return to that city.

The Philadelphia Press and New York Evening Post argue that the United States protectionists are trying to bring Canada into the union by the aid of an adverse tariff on eggs and other articles. And the Grits of this country argue as if our nationality was based on the price of eggs.

It is estimated that fully 2,000 souls have been added to Manitoba's population already this season, and that of that number over 700 were heads of families and adult males, the balance being their wives and children. And the season's operations will not open yet for two or three weeks.

Now that spring has certainly come, the council should lose no time in having Broadway thoroughly cleaned. Two years ago Reeve Lindsey moved a resolution to that effect, and, after the completion of the work, the street dried up wonderfully fast. Who will make himself famous by moving a similar resolution?

After many weeks of figuring fifty-two Decatur, Ill., families have united in a novel manner of living. They have joined together to maintain a co-operative boarding house, the expense to each person for the best of food and cooking being not more than $2 50 a week, or 11c a meal. The ladies take charge a week about in turn and buy all the food, while a paid housekeeper attends to the details and serving. Another similar establishment is projected.

It is now stated, says the Montreal Gazette, that the Ontario Legislature will follow the Manitoba example and pass a resolution in favor of unrestricted reciprocity with the United States. This course is more noisy than profitable. The interprovincial conference of Liberal ministers put itself on record as favoring this Liberal campaign idea, and three out of every four elections to the Dominion Parliament held since have resulted in the defeat of the Liberal candidate. The fad needs votes, not resolutions, to make it respectable.

It is suggested that the following days be observed by hoisting the British flag on our public houses: April 5th, being the generally accepted date of the discovery of America by Sebastian Cabot in 1499; May 24st, being the date on which the proclamation of Confederation was issued in 1867 (this date was suggested in view of the fact that Dominion Day, July 1st, comes during the holidays); May 24th, Queen's birthday; June 5th, being the date of the Battle of Stony Creek, 1813; July 1st, Dominion Day, where practicable; August 16th, the date of the capture of Detroit, 1812, occurs during the holidays, and therefore could not be conveniently celebrated; September 17th, being the date on which the first Upper Canada Parliament was 1792; October 13th, being the date of the Battle of Queenstown Heights, 1812; October 25th, being the date of the Battle of Chateauguay, 1813; November 11th, being the date of the Battle of Chrysler's Farm. Mr. Ross when lately appealed to expressed his sympathy with the proposal, and it is highly probable that he will take the necessary steps to secure the carrying out of the suggestion.

G. D. Swanton, the forger, was on Saturday at Belleville sentenced to two years in the penitentiary.

The writ of Dan, the Peterboro' saloon keeper, against Joe Hess for alleged slander, was served on the lecturer on Saturday. At a meeting of the Canadian Temperance League held last night, the members unanimously decided to support him in his defence against Dan. Mr. Hess is laboring in this Province under the auspices of the League.

P. W. Bell, merchant, Orillia, was tried Thursday afternoon at the Orillia Police Court for fraudulently selling the salvage of his stock after the fire of January 22nd. After a lengthy hearing the J. P.'s Messrs. Miller and Quinn reserved decision until to morrow afternoon at 5 p. m. Messrs. Gunn and Eddis, of Orillia, prosecuted; and Mr. J. H. Hammond defended Mr. Bell.

The professional vocalist is in peril in climbing to the high C. Sir Morell Mackenzie, in a recent lecture upon the human voice, told a sad story of an accident that once befell Signor Rubini. One evening, after he had performed unusual prodigies in the upper register, the Signor was observed to be unwell, and—so fast on horror's head did horrors accumulate—"the cause of his illness was found to be fracture of the collar bone resulting from a too great exertion of clavicular respiration"—whatever that may be.

A. J. Cassatt, the Philadelphia millionaire, and a party of Philadelphians will visit Toronto for the May meeting of the Ontario Jockey Club. Mr. Cassatt is a friend of T. C. Patterson, Postmaster at Toronto and Vice President of the Jockey Club, who has chosen many of the names for Cassatt's horses, among them The Bard. This meeting will be the biggest running meeting ever held in Canada, and a number of American horses will compete. The Philadelphia party will travel the entire distance to Toronto in a four-in-hand. The meeting will open on May 23.

On Thursday night last W. P. Armstrong, manager of the Harriston skating rink, London, was going home at about 12 o'clock, smoking a pipe; the lights were out and the night was very dark. A man had brought in a load of wood during the afternoon and piled it up at the foot of an outside stairs unknown to Armstrong, which he ran against with such force as to drive the pipe stem into the roof of his mouth with such force as to require all his strength to pull it out. He suffered considerable pain, but no serious results are anticipated.

Mr. J. C. Browne, C.P.R. station agent, has leased the large house on Mill street lately occupied by Mr. Acheson.

Dog-owners should read the dog by law notices which have been posted up. The by-law comes into force on the 1st of May.

Mr. B. J. Collins is very busy these fine days making crocks, etc. Barney intends to boom business greater than ever this year.

The "staff of life" took a drop from twelve to ten cents last week. One baker sold it for nine cents but raised it back to ten.

James Smith, of Elba, was up last Friday to answer to a charge of keeping liquor for sale. P. M. Pattullo reserved judgment.

The Elder farm in the township of Mono was sold by auction on Saturday. Mr. W. A. Cæsar, of this town, was the purchaser, paying $1,700 for it.

The teachers and scholars of St. Mark's church are going to visit the jail on Easter Sunday. Each teacher will bring a present for the inmates.

Born, Bound, Buried. — There were ten births, four marriages and four deaths registered at Clerk Hughson's office during the month of March.

Operations have been commenced at the building which is to be occupied by the Bank of Hamilton. A complete new front will be put in the structure.

Wait for It — The grand millinery opening at the Right House, Wednesday and Thursday, April 9th and 10th and following days.
ESTATE OF H. E. REID & Co.

The Nottawa quarries, three about miles from Orangeville, have been bought by firms from Owen Sound and Credit Forks. About two hundred hands will be employed.

The Oddfellows of Orangeville entertained Mr. Richard Mortimer to an oyster supper at Joe Hughes' restaurant on Monday night. Mr M. has been a member of the order for twenty years.

Millinery Opening.—We extend a cordial invitation to all the ladies of the town and surrounding country to attend our grand millinary opening on Wednesday and Thursday, April 9th and 10th and following days.
ESTATE OF H. E. REID & Co.

That newsy and reliable sheet, the Brampton Times, entered upon its thirty-sixth year of publication last week. It has been a weekly caller at our office for the past twenty nine years. Continued prosperity, Bro. Tye, is THE SUN's worst wish.

The Independent is the name of a new journal published at Cannington. The initial number, which came to hand on Monday, is a neatly printed eight-page sheet. Mr. Fisher Munro, formerly of this town, is the proprietor. THE SUN wishes its new contemporary every success.

P. S. B.—The public school trustees held their regular monthly conclave in the council chamber on Tuesday evening. A number of accounts were passed, and a new ash house will be erected at the school building. Another new teacher will have to be engaged, as they contemplate making a new room.

Dr. Mack's Funeral. — Services will be held in the Congregational church this day at 3 and 7 p. m. [illegible] service at 7 p. m.

The Chief's Attractive Window. —"Lady" writes to THE SUN: I want to ask you if Constable Shields is paid for looking after Broadway sheep. If he is not I wish he would take a walk down Mill street and disperse the gang of ruffians who congregate opposite the Salvation Army barracks every night and insult ladies as they pass.

Death of an Early Settler. — Mr. Robert Lundy, a well known and highly respected resident of Mono, died at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Robert McCutcheon, on Tuesday last at the advanced age of 89 years. Deceased was one of the pioneer settlers of the township. His death was caused by an attack of la grippe. The funeral took place to the Mono Centre cemetery on Wednesday and was largely attended.

A Caution.—Drink nothing without seeing it. Sign nothing without reading it, and be sure that it means nothing more than it says. Don't go to law unless you are forced to and have something to lose. In any business never wade in unless you can see the bottom. Put no confidence in the label on a bag, and count money before you receive it. See the bag open before you buy what is in it, for he who trades in the dark asks to be cheated.

Withdrawn.—The great gambling case, to which we referred in a former issue, has been settled, and the sensational press of this town will have to worry along without an elaborate report of what would have been an extremely interesting suit. On Thursday afternoon the plaintiff withdrew the charge, and, in a few minutes afterwards, the defendant placed a cheque for $120 in his hands. We think it unnecessary to disclose the names of the persons concerned, as they are pretty well known and have received sufficient free advertising.

Fact Stranger Than Fiction.—Husband to wife (who is ready to start for the great bankrupt sale at Orangeville of the Gilchrist & Kent stock)—I declare, my dear, it is raining hard. Wife (buttoning on her gloves)—Well, what about a little rain, anyhow? One would think by the excuses you make we were going to church. I am ready now, and we are going to get there. You never heard such yarns as our neighbors tell about the big bargains that are got at that store. You get right onto that wagon now, we have no time to lose. I have got your big leather pocketbook with me, too. $8,000 worth of stock to be closed out in thirty days, if possible. Customers receive every attention, and no hesitation in showing goods. Come right along and bring your family with you.

The Bazaar on the Ninth.—The ladies of the First avenue Methodist church will hold their annual bazaar in THE SUN building, east Broadway, on Wednesday next, April 9. All the articles offered for sale are of the most useful kind and will be sold cheaply. A first-class lunch will be served from 12 until 2, and supper from 6 until 8. The lunch counter will remain open during the afternoon. Admission to supper, 25c. The ladies in charge of the affair have been working very hard for the past two months, and when they say it will be the best ever held, our readers may rely upon spending a pleasant and profitable time.

Called Home.—The death of another resident of the township of Mono is chronicled, in the person of Margaret A., wife of James J. Robinson, who died on Friday morning last, after a short illness. The esteem in which she was held was shown by the large number of friends who attended the funeral, which took place on Sunday afternoon to the town cemetery. The pallbearers were: B. A. Fleming, Trafalgar; James A. Fleming, Mono; Jos. H. Fleming, St. George; T. B. Fleming, St. George; W. J. Fleming, Montreal, brothers of the deceased, and T. R. Robinson, London. Mrs. Robinson's infant son died on Tuesday, and was buried yesterday. Mr. Robinson has the sympathy of the community in his sad bereavement.

The Late Jos. Vogan's Will.—On Monday morning Robert Vogan, baker, and Esther Vogan, widow, filed the will of Joseph Vogan, late of the Revere house, in the surrogate court, Toronto, for probate. The trustees are instructed to wind up his partnership interest in the Revere house. To his son Samuel George, he leaves all the real estate owned by him in the township of Caledon, in the county of Peel. The sum of $2,000 is bequeathed to each of his four daughters, and a smaller sum to his widow, together with all his household furniture, and the residue of the estate in lieu of dower or any share in the money secured by life insurance. Mrs. Vogan is allowed to expend the interest accruing on the legacies to the children, in their support and education. The will is dated March 6th, three days before Mr. Vogan's death.

Dufferin Farmers.—A large number of farmers attended a meeting of the Dufferin Farmers' Institute at Grand Valley on Saturday, the 22nd ult. President W. J. Sproul, of Amaranth, presided, and in a few well chosen remarks opened the meeting, after which Mr. James Reith gave a pithy and appropriate address. Mr. A. Boyle gave an able and lengthy address on the preparation of manure and surface manuring. Mr. W. W. Thompson agreed with the last speaker, and said his experience with surface manuring exactly corresponded with Mr Boyle's. Messrs. [illegible] Grand Valley, and Messrs. [illegible] were appointed a committee to select a member from each township represented to act as local lecturer for the ensuing year. The feeling of the meeting seemed to be in favor of selecting a candidate from among the agricultural clubs to represent them as the local lecturer. A pleasant feature of the meeting was the presence of the Rev. H. E. Bowers, pastor of St. Alban's church, who endorsed the opinions of the other speakers, and thought it a benefit to the farmers to have an institute. After the transaction of other business the meeting adjourned.

Ben Carter in the Toils.—Early on Sunday morning Chief of Police Shields discovered Ben Carter, the notorious tramp shoemaker, lying sleeping in one of the hotel yards. The large hearted and generous chief thought it a pity to see a fellow-creature slumbering on such a hard bed, so he awakened Ben to the fact and gently asked him to come to a more suitable boudoir. Ben wouldn't embrace the opportunity, but embraced the "peeler" instead. The result was that a convey-ance had to be procured from Scott's livery, and Carter was hustled off to limbo. As soon as he was safely behind the bars he kicked his custodian in the stomach, and threatened to drive a knife into the cop's liver. For this offence he spent several hours in the dark cell. He came before P. M. Pattullo on Tuesday and was given the choice of leaving town or doing six months' time in the Central. He chose the former and skipped.

THE BROADAXE!

The approaching Provincial elections occupy the attention of Dufferin electors to a greater extent than any other topic. Knowing that a Grit has no more chance for election in this constituency than he will have in the world to come, our people have rested content so long as their representative was a gentleman and gave a straight Conservative vote when called upon. But a change is coming over the face of the moon. The course of events in the Local House during the present session has been more closely watched and the conduct of individual members subjected to a keener scrutiny than has heretofore been the custom in this Tory stronghold, and ratepayers who have been suffering for the last nineteen years under Mowat's maladministration of Provincial affairs are beginning to realize that something more than a jolly good fellow must be sent to Toronto if W. R. Meredith, or any other leader, is to succeed in the struggle with the professional politicians who run the machine in Ontario. With this object in view many solid men throughout the county openly declare that they will hereafter stoutly oppose the election of such representatives as Dufferin has been blest with in the past. They intend no reflection upon the present member nor upon the men who have represented the constituency in days gone by, for they have been and are all gentlemen of the first water—no spirits, so to speak—and they have been true to their allegiance, but as yet we have not been represented by an athlete, a hustler, a heavy hitter or even a light-weight with plenty of "stay" in him; and what the country needs is a fighter from 'way back, a man who can wake the echo in legislative halls and Mulmur hills at one and the same time. As things stand, Meredith must not only "boss the job," but he must do work that could be done just as well by the hired men—the boys on the back benches. Just think of it, among all the men who are sent there to support him only Wood, Marter, H. E. Clark, Creighton and Clancey are of any real assistance to the old man in his battles with the bulldozers. No wonder he thinks of accepting a judgeship and of retiring in disgust from the unequal combat.

It is nonsense to say that, because in a minority, it is useless to struggle for good government. Our present member apparently looks at the matter in that light, but he should remember that "nipping the bow's heels saved the hunter's life," and so pitch in and by worrying the Government "bears" give his leader a breathing spell. A horny-handed son of the soil, in language more forcible than elegant, wanted to know, the other day, "why in —— Dufferin was not heard from in the Separate school discussion, the liquor license question, the secret ballot debate, or, at anyrate, in the matter of foisting irresponsible country officials upon a suffering public." And many others are asking similar questions. If Dufferin county cannot do better than that, they say, then, for the sake of our overworked leader, let us bring in an "outsider."

The indications are that an able-bodied cyclone will strike Dufferin county about the time the nominating convention meets.

As for candidates, the woods are full of them. Let's see, there is McCin—no, McGee, Barr, Jelly (two or three of him), Notton, Rolston, Stewart, Donaldson, Gaviller, Hunter, Walsh, Gillespie, Golden, Allen, Bailey, W. T.—hold up, he's a Grit; Island, Gallagher but that's enough for a mess. These are all honest men, so far as we know, and any one of them is capable of casting a vote, and, in case of necessity, a shadow. Barr, with his blue tie and his hair parted in the middle, would create a sensation and furnish food for the funny men on the evening papers. Gaviller would be strong enough to draw his allowance, but would not strengthen the party. Walsh, as mayor of Orangeville, would attract attention and, perhaps, overawe the Attorney-General; Whispering Jonnie Gillespie could make the rafters jingle, but that "dofloit" might tumble on top of him. But there is no occasion for anxiety as to who will be the candidate. Who will not be a candidate is the greater question. In the meantime there is a dark horse just over the divide.

Some of the business houses in Tottenham are numbered, but the Sentinel office is not one of them. If you want to find Bro. Hughes, just turn to the thumb-hand side at the cross roads, follow the town line to 5 side road, jump a stake and ryder fence, look out for the dog, sneak into the alley-way when you sight the hemlock stub that shades his front door, and there you are.

PERSONAL.

Mr. J. Kelly, of Toronto, is spending a few days in town.

Mr. James E. Booth, of the Revere house, Toronto, is in town.

Mr. George C. Edgar, a Detroit type, called on us on Monday.

Miss Pedlow is spending her Easter vacation at Hamilton and Toronto.

Mrs. Jas. Robinson is recovering from an attack of inflamation of the lungs.

Mr. James Hewitt, of Toronto, favored THE SUN with a call on Monday.

Mr. W. A. Hillhouse, of Shelburne, formerly of this town, dropped into our sanctum Monday.

Mr. Earnest Jordan, of Epping, has secured a position in Judge, Chapman & Co.'s store here.

Mrs. Thomas Wilkins has returned to town after a two weeks' visit to Toronto and Hamilton.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

A very pleasing event took place at the residence of Mr. Joseph Haddock, Relessey, on Friday evening, March 18, on the eve of their removal to Orangeville. Two hundred friends and neighbors assembled there and presented Mr. Haddock with a gold watch and chain worth $75. Mrs. Haddock, sr., and Mrs. Haddock, jr., were made the recipients of two easy chairs, valued at $25. Mr. Haddock replied to the following address in a neat speech:

To Joseph Haddock, Esq.:

Dear Sir and Brother,—Your brethren and friends of this vicinity have learned with regret that it is your intention soon to remove from amongst us. And when we look back over the many years of your residence in our midst, and remember the zeal you have always manifested for the welfare of the various interests of the Church, the L O A. and other work, by your earnestness, liberality and love, and when we remember that at all times and on all occasions, when and where it appeared to you that you could in any way assist a brother, how cheerfully it was done. We are reminded of the great loss we are about to sustain, and cannot, therefore, allow you to leave us without assuring you of the great respect in which you are held by us as a man, and as a citizen generally; in order that you may carry with you something whereby you may remember your friends of this locality we ask that you will accept this gold watch and chain, and also Mrs. Haddock, jr., and Mrs. Haddock, sr., those two easy chairs, and the other members of the family those other articles, as a slight token of the respect in which you are held by us. We ask that you accept them not on account of their intrinsic worth, but for the pleasant memories they will recall. We also beg to assure you of our great respect for Mrs Haddock and the other members of the family, to whom we all join in wishing long life, health and happiness in this world, and when it may please God to call you and them from this earthly sphere, may it be yours to be guided to that heavenly home where sickness never comes and sorrow does not dwell.

Signed on behalf of the committee,
A. C. Mechanic,
A. C. Wilson.

SHELBURNE.

Another new tailor shop has opened up in town.

The village council has instructed the constable to enforce the dog by-law.

Fred Dunbar has gone to Billings, Montana, and W. L. Stonehouse, of Mulmur, has started for Great Falls, in the same state.

The dog-poisoning fiend has again appeared amongst us. Last week Mr Wm. McCutcheon suffered the loss of two valuable hounds, and Harry Gallaugher, Walter Broth and Tom Donkin one apiece. If the wretch or wretches are caught it will be pretty bad for them.

Mr. Giles Bowler, recently of Salt Lake City, but whose home is near Dundalk, called at the Economist office the other day to show us a new patent fish plate, chair and nut lock, invented by him and designed for use in railroad construction. Practical men pronounce it a good thing, and say that it is, no doubt, the fish plate of the future. In addition to the increased safety which this plate provides, Mr. Bowler claims that the jolting of the cars, which is caused by the unevenness of the rails at the joints under the present system, would be effectually overcome.

COULTERVILLE.

Wood-bees are all the go just now.

Mr. R. Penalton is able to be around again.

The farmers of this vicinity are preparing for their spring work.

Messrs. Hall & Armstrong are going to do a rushing business this season. They are getting in a large stock of logs.

All the timber is on the ground and everything is in readiness for Councillor Still to proceed with the erection of his big barn. It will be the whopper of the Huckley.

Wood bee and Ball.—A big wood-bee was held at Mr. Thos. White's, Hockley road, last Thursday, and sixty cords of wood were cut. A dance took place in the evening, in which forty couples participated. The dandy musicians, Messrs. Bagnell, Perry and Babe, furnished the enchanting strains. Messrs. T. Moffatt, Glen Cross, and J. S. Armstrong and J. C. McMaster, of Cardwell, figured in the capacity of floor managers. The merriment did not cease until after daylight, and the dance eclipsed anything ever held around here.

ECHOES.

I will never leave a girl home from a dance again. The storm was fearful and the walking was something awful.—G. Woolner.

It serves you just right, Woolner.—Wm. White.

The Hockley boys are fond of the stuff that Woolner had. Where did you get it?—D. Still, jr.

Things were well fixed to leave the fair ones home that morning.—T. Moffet.

Cardwell boys can attend our dances, but they can't have our girls.—S. Bonney.

I don't say much, but I think you are right, Sam.—W. Perry.

You deserve great credit, George, for what you did on the morning of the dance.—Atchie

"Had Been Worried Eighteen Years."

It should have read "married," but the proof-reader observed that it amounted to about the same thing, and so did not draw his blue pencil through the error. Unfortunately there was considerable truth in his observation. Thousands of husbands are worried almost to despair by the ill health that afflicts their wives, and often robs life of comfort and happiness. There is but one sure way to change all this for the better. The ladies should use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

THE WEATHER.

Mr. John Lemon, who has been visiting at Toronto returned to Orangeville the last of the month.

All the sugar-makers around here were greatly surprised the other morning to see a terrible blizzard blowing. But I guess C. W. Simpson would so leave see the snow in the sugar-bush as those highwaymen who live too near to the bush to be safe. This family are all well known to the neighbors around here, and if the farmers don't know them the bees house do. The family (that is, the children) are to be pitied, on the grounds that they were not taught anything better, and therefore it isn't the children that should be punished, but those that have brought them up to make a livelihood in such a manner. They have moved into another house of their own accord—they drew the staple and walked in. We don't know whether Mr. Shepherd is aware of them being in the house or not. At anyrate we guess that Mr. Shepherd won't bother them till he gets that $112 of honest-made money. But he had better see after them, for it is hard to say what they will do. They might run away with the house. Now, we warn this family to keep their fingers in their pockets, and if not they will be transferred to Mr. Sutherland's care.

GRAND VALLEY.

Mr. W. R Scott is recovering from an attack of pleurisy.

The Dufferin Farmers' Institute met here on Saturday week.

Seven dollars were realized at a Methodist social held here lately.

An entertainment and tea will be held in R. E. Hamilton's hall on Friday, the 11th inst.

The spring show of horses will be held on the driving park, Grand Valley, on April 25th.

Rev. Mr. Bowers has concluded his Lenten addresses, which he delivered in St. Alban's church.

The East Garafraxa council has purchased a road through the property of Mrs. Johnson, on the 12th line.

The other day the infant son of Mr. John Robinson died after a few hours' illness. Heart disease is supposed to have been the cause.

Mr. H. J. Speirs, V. S, has taken up his bed and walked out from our midst. We understand that he is now following his profession in Coldwater, Michigan.

The Scarlet Chapter of the Orange Order, Eldon district, will meet on Monday, April 14th, in the Orange hall, Grand Valley, by command of H. Bowey W. C. in C. All brethren wishing to receive this degree are requested to attend.

CREDIT FORKS.

Mrs. Puckering has been very ill for the past few days.

Mr. Frank Murphy, of Silvercreek, is lying dangerously ill from inflammation of the lungs.

Mr. P. MacKenney is at present engaged in the maple-sugar business on an extensive scale.

Willie Davis, son of Mr. T. Davis, slipped on some ice yesterday and sprained his ankle.

Four wild ducks lit on Chisholm's pond and rested themselves for a short time on Thursday last.

Brimstone Point is about to have another butcher-shop, but if the party starting it don't do better than the last one, I pity the poor farmers.

Our old and esteemed friend, Mr. D. Campbell, is about to leave here, and is going into the farming business near Cardwell Junction. Success to you, Dunk.

The blackbirds and robins put in an appearance last week, but Thursday's snow storm put an end to their merry songs, and they, like Jimmy Todd, returned to their winter quarters.

Mr. John Harper, an employee in Brock's quarry, near Bellountain, met with a very painful accident on Monday. He was running a horse-power for hoisting stone up the hill from the quarry, and in letting the empty car down the pole of the power flew out and struck him on the leg, breaking it at the thigh.

HE NEVER TOLD HIS LOVE.

Charles C. Kolle, a seaman 45 years shot himself at 5 o'clock Thursday evening in the ramble in Central Park, New York. A policeman found him dead on a bench with a bullet hole in his forehead and a revolver at his side. In Kolle's pockets were found a letter of eight pages, addressed to Miss Etty Gilbert, 338 Pearl street, a mate's certificate for any ocean steamship, several letters of recommendation from employers, a silver watch, a locket containing a dark lock of of woman's hair and a two cent piece. The letter to Miss Gilbert was an incoherent confession of love which, on account of his poverty and years, he had regarded as hopeless, and had never declared it to her.

"When I first came to board with Mr. Rode," he wrote, "I commenced to like you. I guess the first was when you took away from me a cup of tea sweetened and with milk which I did not like." The letters concludes with these words:

I will say the men who disappointed me about the shipping in bark Thomas L. Gray are to blame for this. * * * When I left the house this morning I intended to shoot Capt. Carter and Bill Hughes, but later on, after I had been talking with them, I thought it might be wrong so I let it pass.

The other papers found on Kolle showed that he was first mate of the schooner Lillian, Capt. G. W. Rambell, in 1884; Captain of the schooner Clara, owned by Louis Munjos, Jr, & Co., in 1887, and at various times mate on the vessels of Daniel Trowbridge in the West India trade.

Number 338 Pearl street, where Miss Etty Gilbert lives, is the New Sailors' Home, kept by Edward Rode. Mr. Rode's niece, Etty Gilbert, is a pretty little girl of 18. She says that she has seldom spoken to Kolle, and then only to pass the time of day with him. Mr. Rode says that Kolle expected to be engaged as mate of a vessel. About 5 o'clock he heard that another man had been engaged as mate. He seemed to be much disappointed, and Mr. Rode thinks that was the cause of his suicide. Kolle has a sister employed by W. W. Astor. Kolle was a Mason and was he was a man of remarkable physical development, tall, broad shouldered, and deep chested. His body was taken to the Bellevue Morgue.

Prof. Loisette's Memory System is creating greater interest than ever in all parts of the country, and persons wishing to improve their memory should send for his prospectus free as advertised in another column.

"ROLLY" AT KINGSTON.

Kingston, March 31.—"Rolly" Moffatt, who embezzled money from the Ontario Bank at Toronto and was sentenced to three years' imprisonment in the penitentiary, arrived in the city on Saturday in charge of two specials. The party dined at the Windsor Hotel. While there the prisoner seemed unusually frisky, and by his actions gave spectators the impression he had been drinking. His punishment did not seem to worry him. When he arrived at the prison his hair was cut, he was given a bathand presented with a new suit. What labor "Rolly" will be put at rests with the warden to decide, but it is safe to say it will not be as agreeable as clerking in a bank and being a "high roller." At the Windsor Hotel he and the constables could not be told from ordinary travellers, and "Rolly" paid for the dinner and bar treats for all. He told the proprietor that the bill was a reasonable one. He said that he would call back in three years.

TRAGEDY AT MIMICO.

A Young Man Fatally Stabbed by a Fellow Workman

Mimico, Ont., March 23.—A young man named John Wade, whose parents reside at Hamilton, was fatally stabbed last night by John Byron, who resides at Merriton. Both men were employed by the contractors of the new asylum building in course of construction, a mile and a half west of this place. Wade, who is only twenty three years of age, was a carpenter by trade, and worked with Dilickenson Bros. Byron is an elderly man, about 50 years old, and is employed by Miles, Hunting & Co. The two men had an altercation on the express for Hamilton that leaves Toronto at eleven o'clock, when Byron, who was drunk, struck young Wade, Wade, not wishing to have any trouble on the train, did not strike, but told Byron he would have satisfaction when they arrived here. When the train stopped Wade walked away with some friends, followed by Byron. All the parties went toward home along the railroad track, and just after passing Church street Byron staggered against Wade, who at once struck him, knocking him down. Byron rose and rushed at Wade with a large knife, burying it in the young man's neck, severing the jugular vein, and making a wound two inches long and very deep. The poor young man then called to a friend who was nearby, and said:—"Scotty, I'm stabbed," and, when asked where, replied, "In the neck." These were the last words he spoke. His friend then took out his handkerchief to bind up the wound, while another of the dying man's companions ran for the doctor, who was soon in attendance on the poor fellow, who in the meantime had been carried to the waiting room of the Grand Trunk station. The doctor, after feeling Wade's pulse and examining the wound, pronounced it fatal. He breathed his last in a few minutes afterwards. The murderer was arrested this morning at his boarding house on Lake Shore Road, near here. An inquest was held the following day, and a verdict of manslaughter returned by the coroner's jury.

To the Reeve and Council of the Township of East Garafraxa:

GENTLEMEN,—We hereby certify that the foregoing accounts are correctly compiled from the documents submitted to us, and that they form a correct statement of the accounts of the Township of East Garafraxa, for the year 1889, to December 31, to the best of our knowledge and belief.

A DANGER SIGNAL!

A Cold in the Head may be aptly termed a danger signal warning you that if neglected that dangerous and disagreeable disease, Catarrh, is sure to follow, perhaps leading to Consumption and the grave. At no season of the year is Cold in the Head more prevalent than during the Spring months and at no other season do the people of this country suffer more generally from Catarrh, with all its disagreeable and annoying effects. Do not for an instant neglect either of these troubles, but apply NASAL BALM, the only remedy that will give instant relief and effect a thorough cure. The following testimonials from among thousands in our possession bear witness to its sterling merit.

Alex Burns, Sudbury, Ont., says: I may state that I have been affected with Catarrh seven or eight years, and it was attended by consequent symptoms such as foul breath, constant dropping into the throat, hawking and spitting, partial deafness, ringing in the ears and sickening pains in the head directly over either eye. I have used powders and douches, but all to no effect, the only result arising from the use of such was temporary relief, followed by the usual symptoms in a more aggravated form. The results arising from the use of Nasal Balm: Sweet breath, stopping of the drowping into the throat, (consequently less hawking and spitting), clearness of hearing, and not once since I began its use have I had pain in the head. In fact, it is my opinion that a careful and persistent use of the Balm will effect a cure in the worst case of catarrh.

NASAL BALM INSTANTLY RELIEVES

Cold in Head.

A. W. Mallory, Mallorytown, Ont., says: My daughter suffered for years from a most disdressing and annoying Catarrh. Her case was under the treatment of eminent physicians in the United States and Canada. Two months use of Nasal Balm has had more beneficial effects than all former treatment combined.

L. D. Dion, Dept. Railways and Canals, Ottawa, says: I am very glad to give you to-day the testimony that Nasal Balm has completely cured my catarrh, from which I suffered for nearly three years.

T. D. D. Loyd, 8 Clarence street, Toronto says: I wish here to testify to the unequalled healing powers of your Nasal Balm. I have been troubled for three years by what the doctors call post nasal catarrh, and have tried everything in the city that could be obtained, in the shape of catarrh cures, and found no permanent relief from any of them, till a friend one day advised me to try your Nasal Balm, and I find that even one bottle has done me more good than all the medicines put together that I have persecuted myself with before. I was very much troubled with spitting and hawking, especially in the morning, so much so that my throat was continually in a raw condition, but I am now beginning to know what it is to be able to speak freely. I shall not fail to recommend it to any of my friends suffering from the like disease.

NASAL BALM POSITIVELY CURES

CATARRH.

D. Derbyshire, Mayor of Brockville and President of the Ontario Creamery Association, says: Nasal Balm beats the world for Catarrh and Cold in the Head. In my own case it effected relief from the first application.

Isaac Waterman, Imperial Oil Co'y, Petrolia, Ont., says: Nasal Balm gave me the most perfect satisfaction of any medicine I ever used for Cold in the Head. I found it easy to use, quick in giving relief and effect a complete cure in a couple of hours.

If Nasal Balm is not kept in stock by your dealer it will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 Cent for small and $1 for large size bottles) by addressing

FULFORD & Co. Brockville, Ont.

FRIENDSHIPS WRITTEN

Such a little thing—a letter,
Yet so much it may contain!
Written thoughts and words expressive,
Full of pleasure, fraught with pain.

When our hearts are sad at parting,
Comes a gleam of comfort bright
In the mutual promise given,
"We'll not forget to write."

Plans and doings of the absent,
Scraps of news we like to hear;
All round us, e'en though absent,
Kind remembrance keeps us near.

Yet sometimes a single letter
Turns the sunshine into shade;
Chills our efforts, clouds our prospects,
Blights our hopes and makes them fade.

Messengers of joy or sorrow,
Life or death, success, despair;
Bearers of affection's wishes,
Greeting kind or loving prayer.

Prayer or greeting, were we present,
Would be felt, but half unsaid;
We can write, because our letters—
Not our faces, will be read.

Who has not some treasured letters,
Fragments choice of other's lives;
Relics, some, of friends departed,
Friends whose memory still survives?

Touched by neither time nor distance,
Will their words unspoken last;
Voiceless whispers of the present
Silent echoes of the past.

MARCH.

Oh, winds of March, what pranks you play!
Clarissa wears a veil of gray
That shrouds her face, her eyes divine;
What wonder then that I malign
Your breezy arts and long for May?

Her dimple-dented cheeks you flay
Till rosy currents upward stray.
You touch her lips! The right is mine,
Oh, winds of March!

Blow swiftly on! Ill brooks delay
This heart of mine, to love a prey.
Ere long Clarissa's eyes shall shine
Beneath a veil where flowers entwine.
Blow quickly hence that orange spray,
Oh, winds of March!

Popular People are invariably pleasant people. Popular remedies are also so invariably pleasant to use and certain in their results. Mr. John McDonnell, of Chesley, Ont., says—Nasal Balm is a good medicine for cold in the head. It is a popular remedy.

BUYING A DUSKY BRIDE.

One afternoon, when the skies were black and the [illegible] with steady stream, Rev. Charles Dobson, then pastor of the First Baptist Church at East New York, arose from his desk and went over to his study window, where he stood looking out at the rivulets, forming in the street and glancing occasionally over the brown, recently plowed fields of the Schenck farm, which lay in front of his residence and which the rain seemed anxious to wash away. "I hope," murmured the good divine to himself, "that there will be no sick calls or funerals this afternoon." He had a double motive in the remark—first concerned the well being of others and his own personal comfort. Hardly had the reflection begun to pass from his mind when, from the grey mists and vertical mazes of the rain, he caught sight of a dark object coming along the road that lay on the southern boundary of the farm. As it approached it exhaled clouds of steam and puffed ponderously. It was a strange ambling, rickety figure, which, when it reached Mr. Colman's door, materialized into a colored man, black as ebony and clothed in that hue. Mr. Colman, who had watched him curiously as he came along the road, felt assured that the funeral visitor who had braved the elements on such a day must have a sad strand. He stepped to the door and opened it.

"Boss, is yo de dominie?" said the steaming and apparently exhausted stranger.

"I sometimes go by that name," was the reply.

"Wall, boss, I'se come here on a mighty 'ticular errand, I has."

"Somebody dead?" inquired Mr. Colman.

"Oomph!" exclaimed the darkey, bounding to one side as if he had been hit in the kidneys. "D'r bress you, no, no! Nobody dead as I knows on. You doan tink I come 'long in dis storm t' 'bilge dead folks? Is'e got moah sense dan dat, dominie. Is'e dun gwine get ma'ied, dat's what's the matter, an' dat's what brought me hyar. Yo' marry me?"

"When?" inquired the clergyman.

"Now? Right 'way? Soon's evah yo' ken. Is'e tickler to get ma'ied 'fo she goes 'way to Brooklyn."

"Can't you bring the person you are to marry here?" asked the clergyman, whose face as he looked at the weather, wore an expression of reluctance.

"No, sah! She say dat sin't perlite. She sin't no common nigger; 'f she war I loan mar y her, you bet."

"Well, well, where do you live?" impatiently asked the clergyman.

"Out yondah—'bout a mile," said the negro, pointing into the mists and rain that veiled the landscape.

With the best grace he could command Mr. Colman attired himself in his rubber suit, and, remarking to the darkey that he should have brought a ferry-boat with him, he and the sable bridegroom boldly set out. After wading to the knees in mud a great part of the distance they came at length to a dilapidated shanty. Entering they found a number of colored folks, among whom was the ebony damsel who was to be made a bride. Her countenance was as solid and motionless as a mask. To the inquiry if she wished to be married she "'sposed so." But while the others made expectant movements she sat in a corner her hands crossed like a lofty Vishnu. Finally the bridegroom led her aside, and after a whispered conversation with him it was remarked that she became suddenly enlivened. The ceremony was performed. The marriage register was signed and the dominie was about to leave. As he neared the door joyful Benedict followed him and nonchalantly whispered in his ear: "Boss, I'se got no money, but if you want a job of whitewashing done you call 'n me'n I do it. I'se do boss calciminer."

The clergyman on his way home reflected on the great boon of the Fifteenth Amendment, and dreamed that night that he was bathing in the Black Sea, and that the water was full of colored men, each of whom was dragging a black maiden after him to whom he wanted to be married gratis. Hardly had he awoke from his troubled sleep when the door bell rang and a colored woman was shown into his study. On coming down stairs he found the new made bride. She was in great distress. Her marriage had been a purely commercial transaction, and it had turned out disastrously. She was to have received, as a consideration for her hand and heart, the sum of $50. She had been sold. She wanted the minister to tell her how she could break the bargain.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are the medicine most in repute for curing the multitudinous maladies which attack humanity, when wet and cold weather gives place to more genial temperatures. In short, these Pills afford relief, if they fail of being an absolute remedy in all the disturbances of the circulation, digestion, and nervous energy, which at times oppress a vast portion of the population. Under the wholesome, purifying and strengthening powers exerted by these excellent Pills, the tongue becomes clean, the appetite improves, digestion is quickened, and assimilation rendered perfect. Holloway's medicines possess the highly estimable properties of cleansing the whole mass of blood, which, in its renovated condition, carries purity, strength and vigor to every tissue of the body.

The theme of the Japanese national anthem as recently rendered into English is: "Oh, that the reign of our Emperor might continue for thousands and thousands of years—until oyster shells become rocks."

PEOPLE FRET TOO MUCH ABOUT TRIFLES.

Women had some of greatest troubles they endure—[illegible] as much worry and anxiety [illegible] to a loaf of bread, a pie, a cake, into the weekly washing and ironing as would suffice for much weightier matters. Suppose these things go wrong to day; then to-morrow are coming in which to try again, and the thing is not worth clouding your own spirits and those around you, injuring yourself and them physically—for the sake of such a trifle—and for such a trifle. When a thing is beyond repair, waste no useless regrets over it and do no idle fretting. Strive for that serenity of spirit that will enable you to make the best of all things. That means contentment in its best sense.

BOSTON, March 25.—A special from New York to night details a severe hardship forced upon an aged resident of Toronto by the United States emigrant authorities of Castle Garden. It says:—There arrived yesterday from Queenstown on the Germanic, Henry Becket, a benevolent looking gentleman, whose age is in the neighbourhood of 60. He had with him a charming English girl, aged 17, whom he says is his wife. He was stopped because he had no visible means of support. He says that he came originally from Ireland to this country 29 years ago, and after four years' roaming settled down in Toronto, where for 16 years he has supported himself as a market gardener in the suburbs. Last fall, feeling he was getting old, he decided to take a trip for pleasure to the Old Country to get a look at Erin land before he died. He started and reached Doublin in safety. While there he visited an old friend, a small farmer, near Belfast, named John Hewitt, and here met the girl, who was stopping with them. Old as he was he was greatly taken with her, and so eager was she to see America that when he offered to take her over if she would marry she immediately consented. They were married in Armagh by a Methodist clergyman, and after a brief honeymoon started for home. Getting married had swamped his finances, so he determined to come to New York, where some friends were, and from them procure means of getting back to Toronto. He and his bride reached here to day. He had 75 in money left, and between them a tin trunk containing one change of clothing. The girl wears a wealth of light brown hair wound into a diadem on a shapely head. Her jacket was cheap and her gown of black still cheaper, but she was neat, clean, and wholesome, and she declared she loved her "dear old man dearly." Her shoes were brogans and her hat was a 15 cent black chip, with an impossible yelow crown impaled upon it. Becket says his property in Toronto consists of three acres of valuable land, improved by a small farmhouse, and offered to expend his last 75 cents in telegraphing to Toronto for identification, but the officers would not take his word, so unless some of his Canadian friends will come forward and endorse him—for his relatives have removed to parts unknown—the pair will be returned to England as paupers. The young wife is terribly disappointed at not being allowed to land, and Becket is in despair, as all his money is gone and he will be landed a pauper in England. He is anxious to get to Toronto as he says his property will be going to ruin if he stays away.

CATARRH,

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS—HAY FEVER

A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N.B.—This treatment is not a snuff or an ointment; both have been discarded by reputable physicians as injurious. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 West King Street, Toronto, Canada.—Toronto Globe.

Sufferers from Catarrhal troubles should carefully read the above.

HEALTHFUL EXERCISE.

Only a few months ago these romping, rosy-cheeked lasses were puny, delicate, pale, sickly girls. By the aid of Dr. Pierce's world-famed Favorite Prescription, they have blossomed out into beautiful, plump, hale, hearty, strong young women.

"Favorite Prescription" is an invigorating, restorative tonic and as a regulator and promoter of functional action at that critical period of change from girlhood to womanhood, it is a perfectly safe remedial agent, and can produce only good results. It is carefully compounded, by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate organization. It is purely vegetable in its composition and perfectly harmless in any condition of the system. It imparts strength to the whole system. For overworked, "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," housekeepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been faithfully carried out for many years.

The four greatest medical centres of the world are London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna. These cities have immense hospitals teeming with suffering humanity. Crowds of students throng the wards studying under the Professors in attendance. The most learned physicians of the world teach and practice here, and the institutions are storehouses of medical knowledge and experience. With a view of making this experience available to the public the Hospital Remedy Co. at great expense secured the prescriptions of these hospitals, prepared the specifics, and although it would cost from $25 to $100 to secure the attention of their distinguished originators, yet in this way their prepared specifics are offered at the price of the quack patent medicines that flood the market and absurdly claim to cure every ill from a single bottle.

DISTRESS IN DAKOTA.

Sir,—A few days ago there appeared in your columns a copy of a communication which the writer received from the relief committee, Willowtown, South Dakota, appealing to the Board of Trade for help. This letter was submitted to the council, and I was instructed to satisfy myself as to the correctness of the statements made therein. This I have done and thanks to the kindness of Mr. W. G. Matthews, manager for Messrs. Dunn, Wiman & Co., city, and others, I find that the destitution in the section above referred to is all that has been represented, the people not only suffering from the failure of their crops, but also from prairie fires, having lost nearly everything by this latter cause. Their affliction has certainly been very severe, and their case is a deserving one, meriting our fullest sympathy and assistance, and more especially as most of the settlers are Canadians from the Province of Ontario. Will you permit me, through your valuable columns, to say to the members of the board, and the public generally, that by order of the council, I will be pleased to receive and forward subscriptions for the relief of the sufferers.

I am advised that if relief is to be given it should be without delay. All subscriptions will be duly acknowledged by,

Yours, etc.,
EDGAR A. WELLS,
Secretary, Board of Trade.

Toronto, April 9.

It is understood also that subscriptions are to be secured where possible by the Board of Trade in other Canadian cities.

In view of these facts we feel it to be a duty to warn our readers who propose looking westward for a home, that our Canadian Northwest, the glorious heritage that will make Canada the foremost country of the Americas, is the only place to emigrate to if prosperity and comfort are desired. Stay in Canada and prosper. Go to Dakota and Minnesota and starve.

THE VALUE OF FARM LANDS.

(London Free Press.)

Sir Richard Cartwright recently asserted in Parliament that he believed the farm lands in Ontario had depreciated ten dollars per acre, and as a consequence suggested that a Government inquiry be made into the actual sales which have taken place during the last few years from those officials whose duty it is to keep record of such transactions, and especially from the several registrars, county judges, sheriffs, masters in chancery and assessors throughout the country. Sir Richard seems to forget that in several of the older states of the American Union farm lands have not only depreciated this much, but some to the extent of 30 to 50 per cent., and in parts of New Hampshire whole sections of farm lands are abandoned altogether, and the homesteads turned into commons. In England, too, the price of arable land has gone down 20 to 30 per cent. In some counties landlords can get no tenants at all. So that Ontario is not different to other countries on the score of depreciation of land values. The price of farm lands depends on their fertility and the price of productions, and with the present competition the world over in nearly all farm products prices must necessarily be depressed, and with low prices comes a corresponding depreciation in land values. Then as railway facilities increase new areas of virgin soil are opened up, and this is put into competition with our older lands and reduces the price. The farmers and farms in Ontario are in as good a position as, and even better, any other in the world, and no Government nor Government commission can find other explanation of this condition of things. If farmers are to compete successfully in the race for production and keep up the value of their land their aim must be to increase its fertility and vary their crops. There is no doubt that a great quantity of land has decreased in value in the older sections of Ontario owing to the land being worn out and becoming unproductive, but this is the fault of the individual and not of the country or the Government.

RAISING CABBAGE AND OTHER PLANTS.

To successfully grow tomatoes, cabbages, celery, and some other plants, it is necessary to germinate the seeds and have the plants a certain size before placing them on the plot on which they are intended to mature their growth. This growing of small plants is frequently done in hot-beds; but, unless a farmer intends to extensively grow these vegetables, it will be more advisably for him to grow them in boxes on the window sill, or some shelf on which they receive as much sunlight as possible. These boxes are made about three inches deep, and of such a size that they can be conveniently handled and nicely fitted into the place in which they are intended to stand. The bottoms of these boxes should be perforated so that they afford perfect drainage to the soil they contain, which should be a light fertile and sand mixed with some vegetable mold. The seed should be planted in these boxes about 6 weeks before the time at which the young plants are intended to be "planted out." The young plants should receive as much sunlight as possible. If they grow towards the light, they may be kept straight by turning the boxes around occasionally, so that the plants which were nearest the light are placed farthest away from it. Whenever the weather is warm and pleasant, the boxes of young plants should be placed outside, so that the plants become hardy and stocky. Very great care must be used not to expose them to the slightest frost, for, if it does not entirely kill them, it at least materially weakens them. They should, therefore, always be taken in at night if there is any possibility of night frost. If early vegetables are desired, the plants should be ready to be "planted out" as soon as the weather will permit. To obtain very stocky plants, some gardeners transplant the young plants while kept in the boxes, once or twice in order that they may develop better roots and always have a rich soil to grow in. This is especially recommended for tomato plants that have been sown a little too early. For they, if large, will soon exhaust the soil, thereby retarding their growth, which if once checked by starvation, will materially injure the plant. Under ordinary circumstances it will, however, not be necessary for the farmer to transplant his young plants while in the boxes; for, if the proper soil is used, the plants will not be large enough to extract the readily available plant food it contains.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE Local Legislature was formally prorogued on Monday afternoon.

DONALD CHISHOLM, M.P., for New Westminster, died on Saturday morning.

PUBLIC School Inspector J. L. Hughes, of Toronto, has been chosen by the Peel Conservatives as their candidate for the Ontario House.

THE Lincoln Reform convention on Saturday nominated Capt. W. Gerson, the sitting member, to contest Lincoln county for the Local Legislature.

THE Conservatives of Addington have reaffirmed their decision to sustain Mr. James Reid, of Camden, as the standard bearer of that riding for the Local Legislature.

HON. P. J. O. Chauveau, sheriff of Montreal, died at Quebec Friday evening at the residence of his son-in-law, Dr. Valles. Mr. Chauveau had been ill for some time, and his death was not unexpected.

WM. GALLOWAY, who ran the first locomotive on the Baltimore & Ohio railway, is dead. Mr. Galloway was probably the oldest railway engineer in the world. He was born in Baltimore county, Maryland, September 21, 1889.

ABBE Filiatrault, a leading Roman Catholic priest, delivered a striking discourse in Montreal on Sunday on intemperance in Quebec. He said the true way of banishing the demon of drink would be by sending temperance representatives to the House of Parliament and the Local Legislature.

LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL ridicules the idea that the Land Purchase bill is a pacifying and tranquilizing measure. He predicts that the tenants will resort to repudiation of rent, which will throw Ireland into such a condition of anarchy as will give strong support to the Home Rulers' demand for an Irish Parliament.

W. C. MCDONALD, of Montreal, has given $150,000 to found two chairs in the law faculty of McGill University; $50,000 to found a chair of experimental physics, and in addition will spend $200,000 more in putting up and equipping a building for technical education and physics. The total endowment will amount to $400,000.

WHEN Prince Bismarck left Berlin for his home at Friedrichsruhe he took with him the little table on which he and M. Thiers signed the preliminaries of peace between Prussia and France in 1871. He paid the French woman who owned the Versailles cottage where he then had his headquarters, a little over four dollars for it. Its commercial value has risen since then.

THE Legislative council of New Brunswick has again refused to consent to its abolition. The vote was very close, however. A change of one would have turned the result. The one was wanting because Mr. McLellan, the last appointee, voted for retention. Premier Blair, who attended the interprovincial conference and made the abolition of the legislative councils a plank in the platform, is thus directly responsible in his own province for a failure to obtain by constitutional means what he then desired to obtain through unconstitutional means. The interprovincial conference was great chiefly as an aggregation of political humbugs.

GRIT papers, says the London Free Press, effect to ridicule the distribution of two rowed seed barley by the Dominion Government at $2 a bushel, and try to make it appear that as good can be got for 60 cents. The catalogue price in England of the barley the Government is distributing is 12s 6d a bushel. If the Grit papers in question can provide it for 60 cents, they have a grand chance for belittling the Government and turning over a good profit at the same time. The best evidence that the farmers throughout the country approve of the action of the Hon. John Carling in this matter is seen in the fact that twenty five hundred applications have been thus far sent in for samples of the two rowed barley, and that the staff at the Experimental Farm have been kept busy night and day sending them out.

R. H. Walker, grocer, Clinton, has assigned. The liabilities are $4,000, and assets $1,900 less.

Good Friday was quietly celebrated in town.

Mr. S. Mossop and family, of Dundalk, have removed to town.

Beatty's regular sale of horses takes place on Saturday, the 19th.

THE SUN is the best $1 weekly in Dufferin. Try it for one year.

As yet no decision has been given in the liquor case of James Smith.

A large number of former residents spent their Easter vacation here.

The public and high schools reopened on Tuesday after the Easter vacation.

King Bros. are repairing the Mill street terrace, which was recently destroyed by fire.

The Camille Cheap Store's millinery department will be opened to-morrow and the next day.

St. Mark's church was full to the doors during the children's service on Sunday evening.

The Dufferin license commissioners will meet in the court house, here, on Friday, the 18th.

It is rumored that the C.P.R. will relay the C.V.R. track and continue it up to the quarries.

Messrs. Sam Irwin and Wm. Dudgeon have passed the necessary examinations to become V.S.

The local board of health intend to make great changes in the sanitary condition of the town this year.

Mailcarrier Harry Scott's spirited team ran away on Broadway one day last week. No damage was done.

We haven't heard from our Camilla, Cardwell, Salem and Mono Mills correspondents for a week or two. What's up?

A large staff of workmen are busily engaged making the Turnbull binder in the McMaster foundry on East Broadway.

The gun club are trying to get a match on with Owen Sound. The latter club appears to be afraid to face the music.

Admirers of lacrosse will meet at Ketchum's office this evening. The Dufferins have strong hopes of winning the pennant this year.

John Martin and Frank Hume, two miserable and weather-beaten tramps from Owen Sound, were accommodated with lodgings in the lockup on Sunday night.

The Select Knights attended the Methodist church in a body on Sunday evening. Rev. C. E. McIntyre, the pastor, preached a suitable and effective sermon.

About twenty men are engaged at the Nottawa quarries at present. It is expected that employment will be given to at least two or three hundred during the summer.

"Do not wait for extraordinary opportunities for good actions," says Goethe, "but make use of common situations." That is right. If you owe a man $5 give it to him now.

Several young boys appeared before P. M. Pattullo last week, charged with tearing down and mutilating bills. The magistrates cautioned the boys against repeating such depredations, and if they ever come before him again they will spend a few hours in the cells. All mischievous "kids" should take warning in time.

An exchange says:—The Owen Sound Stone Company (D. Chalmers, manager) have purchased a freestone quarry in the township of Mono, some two miles from Orangeville, to which place they are commencing to move their extensive plant, consisting of stationary and portable engines, stone planers, saws, derricks, in fact pretty much all of their heavy machinery.

BLAZE AT MOUNT FOREST.—About 5 o'clock Tuesday morning a fire broke out in the Vulcan foundry, owned by Snow & Blackwood, and in a short time the entire building and contents were consumed. The machinery was insured for $1,500 and the building for $1,200. Cause of fire unknown.

THE BAZAAR.—The bazaar given by the ladies of the Methodist church yesterday was a grand success. As we announced in our last issue that it would be the best ever held, we reassert that statement, for it certainly was. Fancy goods of every description were quickly bought up by the throng that attended. The receipts were large.

VISITED THE JAIL.—The teachers and scholars of St. Mark's church visited the jail on Sunday, and brought with them presents for the inmates. They were escorted through the building by Gov. Sutherland. The visitors held service and talked pleasantly to the unfortunates, who were overjoyed to find that they were not entirely forgotten by the outside world.

MUDDY ROADS.—If any of our neighboring towns are in want of MUD, we are happy to state they can be supplied from this place. The roads of our town are in a worse condition now than they have been for a long time. Mill street is something terrible, and Second street is little better. All the work that has been done on the streets for the past two years seems to have entirely disappeared. We hope the council will adopt a more effective scheme for improving the roads than has been followed lately.

The Harriston high school board is in financial difficulties.

BAPTIST CHURCH.—On Friday evening last a meeting of special prayer in behalf of foreign missions was held in the Baptist church in this town. The missionaries for Canadian Baptist churches are laboring amongst 3,000,000 Johnjos in India, and have asked for reinforcements, to the extent of forty-eight new men, to be sent out this year. At their request Friday, April 4th, was set apart as a day of humiliation and prayer, and meetings were held in a large number of churches throughout the country.

A SERIOUS FALL.—John Bradford, employed as hostler at the Commercial hotel, met with a very serious accident shortly after six o'clock on Monday evening. It appears the unfortunate man was up in the mow putting down hay, when he accidentally fell through a large hole in the centre of the floor of the mow, falling a distance of about twelve feet to the floor beneath. He was quickly removed to the hotel and Dr. Henry summoned. An examination showed that his back was badly injured and other parts of his body bruised. He is recovering as rapidly as can be expected.

WHO'LL BE CUT OFF?—There are three new applicants for tavern licenses in Orangeville, John Hicks, Emma Smith and Edward Lesson. And to grant either of the above a permit some one of the present license-holders will have to be cut off. At present there are nine hotel licenses granted in town, and the commissioners will not increase that number. Now, it is pretty certain that one of the new applicants will be authorized to sell liquor, and, consequently, there is a great amount of speculation as to whose license will be withheld. However, the commissioners are all upright men, and they will, no doubt, do justice.

VESTRY MEETING.—A very large and interesting vestry meeting was held in the basement of St. Mark's church at 2 o'clock on Monday afternoon. The incumbent, Rev. A. Henderson, occupied the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The churchwarden's report was then read and adopted. George Island, J. M. Bennett and F. Irwin were appointed as delegates to the Synod. Rev. A. Henderson then named Mr. James May as his churchwarden, the people choosing Mr. A. Turner as theirs. The following sidesmen were appointed for the ensuing year: A. A. Hughson, Jas. Hewitt, Noah Dunning, Michael Armstrong, Theo. Doner and Joseph Haddock. W. L. Walsh and R. T. Hann were appointed auditors. After some more interesting business had been gone through the meeting was dismissed.

A REVOLVER'S CRUEL WORK.—A very sad and fatal accident occurred at Grand Valley at 9 o'clock Good Friday morning, by which Willie Rose, the ten year old son of Mr. W. R. Scott, lost his life. The little fellow and several school companions were playing with a revolver, when the weapon accidentally went off, the bullet taking effect an inch below the unfortunate boy's breast bone and passing clean through his body. He was at once taken home and everything that medical skill and loving hands could do was done, but to no effect. The young fellow suffered untold agonies, but never once complained or shed a tear. He sent for his companions and told them they were not to blame for the accident. He expired at 9 o'clock Saturday morning—just twenty-four hours after the accident. The remains were interred in the English church burying ground on Monday.

PERSONAL.

Dr Hunter, of Everette, was in town yesterday.

Miss Sarah Hall is attending school at Toronto.

Miss Maria Meredith is visiting at Hamilton and Toronto.

Registrar Anderson, of Arthur, was in town Monday evening.

Miss Sade Caldwell is visiting friends at Toronto for a few days.

Mr. W. H. George, of Croydon, Surry, Eng., is visiting friends in town.

Mrs. Denison left on Monday to visit friends at Toronto and Dunville.

Miss E. Rilley returned from her visit to Orangeville last week.—Alliston Herald.

Mr. Thomas P. Elliott has accepted a situation with Robinson & Stork, of Brampton.

Mr. Rigby Swinton, of Hamilton, formerly of the Bank of Hamilton, here, was in town this week.

Mr. Harry Stewart, of the Bank of Hamilton, Hamilton, spent his Easter vacation with his parents here.

Messrs. James McMullen, M.P., of Mount Forest, and Dr. Sproule, M.P., of Markdale, passed through Orangeville on Friday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Bradley, of Teeswater, were in town yesterday and interred the remains of their youngest child in the Forest Lawn cemetery.

Mrs. D. C. Hossack, Mrs. L. J. McLelland and Mrs. J. W. Tate were delegates to the annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church of Canada held at Hamilton on Tuesday and Wednesday.

MILLINERY OPENING.—We will show all the latest novelties in trimmed and untrimmed millinery, feathers, ribbons, etc., at our grand opening on Wednesday and Thursday, April 9th and 10th and following days.

SHORT AND SWEET.

Aldermanic Honeycrow on Monday Night—Another Batch of By-laws—Ketchum's New Road By-law Passed.

The town council assembled in the council chamber for the dispatch of business on Monday night. At 7:30—the hour for commencing business—there was not a quorum present, but in ten minutes more the mayor, reeve, deputy-reeve and Ald. Coburn, Bailey, Gillespie, Gross, Youmans, Ketchum and Pinkney were ready to proceed with a rush. Ald. King did not favor the conclave with a call during the evening.

ACCOUNTS

were read by the mayor from the Advertiser, $3.50; Post, $33; THE SUN, $8; D. Bell, $3.75; L. Waynes, $3.25; Jno. Armstrong, $7; A. G. McKenney, $6.20; R. Ferns, $1; George Gray, 38c; D. McDonald (electric light), $398.50; Empire, $1.20. The above accounts were found correct and their payment ordered. Other bills from Wm. Harding, 88c; George Gray, $2.06; W. Fremlin, $9.03½; H. Flesher, $2.20; H. S. Webber, $1.75—25c. interest included—referred to their respective committees.

Dr. Henry and one hundred others sent in a petition, praying for a continuation of the sidewalk on John street. The ladies of that street intended marching in a body to the council chamber, but at a meeting held recently they decided to quietly await developments. The R. & B. committee will consider their request.

The mayor said the C.P.R. would shortly correspond with the council regarding the latter's claim against that company.

SAYS HE HAS A CONTRA.

A communication was read from Police Magistrate Pattullo regarding fines which never find their way to the corporation coffer. His Worship said he had a contra account for books against the town, and he would be happy to have a settling up with the financial committee. The matter was left to that committee.

REPORTS.

The treasurer's statement for March was read by Reeve Lindsay.

Deputy-reeve Endacott read the T. P. committee's report, which recommended that repairs to the amount of $30 be made on the town hall and market. The report was adopted.

An unimportant F. & W. report was brought down by Ald. Gillespie.

MOTIONS.

Ald. Bailey asked for another extension of time for his report on the new waterworks scheme. He said they were comparing water from Owen Sound, Brampton and other places with the water of the town. The extension was granted.

On motion of Reeve Lindsay the clerk will send all the snow-shovelling accounts to the treasurer.

Ald Youmans asked the free use of a room in the town hall for the firemen to hold their meetings in. It was granted.

The Finance committee are still considering the manufacturers' communications.

J. E. Henderson was appointed gate keeper for the cattle fairs. His salary is $1 per day.

The T. P. committee ordered the purchase of 200 dog tags, the price of which is $10. Ald. Bailey thought 150 would be enough, but the motion was carried before he brought in his amendment.

BY LAWS.

By laws relating to transient traders, better protection from fire, removal of snow from sidewalks, amendment to wood by-law, fire limits and collection of taxes were introduced and read a first and second time. The council went in to committee of the whole on the by laws, and they received their third readings.

The fire limits are within the area bounded on the south by the north side of Broadway street, on the west by the east side of Faulkner street, on the north by the south side of Zina street and First avenue, and on the east by the west side of Second street; and within the area bounded on the north by the south side of Broadway street, on the east by the west side of Wellington street, on the south by the north side of Water street and the mill race from the mill square, and on the west by the east side of John street.

MELVILLE.

The farmers are welcoming spring.

Mr. George Corbett intends taking a trip to California this spring.

Mr. Alex. Delaney and family and Wm. Maxwell have removed to the Queen City.

Messrs. J. & D. Watson have leased a farm adjoining here. We wish the boys success.

Wm. Maxwell's fine 100 acre farm has been sold to Mr. J. S.Ead, banker of Orangeville, for $2,700.

Miss Mary A Leighton, of Cardwell, who has been visiting friends around here, returned home last week.

Mr. Robert Corbett purchased a fine brood mare from Mr. Parsons, of Mono, Road, the other day. One hundred dollars was the price paid.

Miss Minnie Hillock has returned home from visiting friends at Cardwell.

Mr. John Graham is home from his hunting tour through Michigan, a sadder and a wiser man.

WAIT FOR IT.—The grand millinery opening at the Right House, Wednesday and Thursday, April 9th and 10th and following days.

SHELBURNE.

The scholars of the Methodist church have organized a juvenile mission band.

Mr. W. C. Hall, having disposed of his grocery business, will retire from business.

The Shelburne foundry has changed hands. Mr. Henry Dixon, well-known around here, is the purchaser.

The citizens of this place intend to celebrate the 24th on a larger scale than ever. Meetings are being held and committees are being appointed to boom the celebration.

Messrs. Witter and Beck, owners of the celebrated running stallion "Disturbance," have sold the horse to a gentleman in Toronto. Mr. Witter took the horse to Toronto on Friday last.

Mr. John Ormsby, of Percy, had his house destroyed by fire on Thursday evening last. Mr. Ormsby was living with his brother and there had been no fire in the house from Tuesday. The house was a hewed log one and lathed and plastered inside. All the furniture was also lost. The general opinion is that it was the work of an incendiary. As there was no snow at the time it was impossible to track the party who did it. The building and contents were insured for $400.

CREDIT FORKS.

Our old friend, John Hunter, has arrived, looking as though he had wintered well.

We would advise all tourists who purpose visiting this Lero' to bring stilts with them, as the mud is higher than top boots.

Mr. H. Phillips arrived here Monday, bringing with him a young cubbear that he succeeded in capturing near Arder, after killing its mother with an axe.

The first fight of the season occurred on Saturday, in which the very unpopular correspondent of the 'Tiger took occasion to bite mother earth. Sorry for you, Mac.

The quarries are all in operation, but those seeking had better wait a couple of weeks before coming our way, as there are quite a number of idle hands waiting until work becomes more plentiful.

Mr. Jno. Bacus has sued Mr. W. H. Hillis for $5,000. The writ was served yesterday. The plaintiff claims that defendant has slandered him to that amount. The case will come off in Toronto some time this spring, and if not settled out of court is likely to cost both parties a pretty snug sum. Go steady boys.

Mr. Mathias Morris' three girls, whose mother died a short time ago, left here for their uncle's, at London, where they will reside for the present. All the Credit Forks children and most of their parents were at the station to bid them good-bye. There were more wet eyes on this occasion than we ever noticed around the station before.

GRAND VALLEY.

Our spring fair will be held on the 25th.

J. A. Church, V. S., formerly of Arthur, has hung out his shingle in this village.

Mr. Samuel Graham sold some very fat live stock the other day. He disposed of a bull weighing 1,900 at 4½ cts per lb.

A new crossing has been put opposite Stark's store.

Miss N. Rodger, of Belwood, is now studying medicine with Dr. Gaviller, having been a student at the medical school, Toronto, for several months.

On Saturday last, remarks the Star, while Mr. Fairgrieve, of the 9th con., was returning home from Grand Valley he met with a rather bad mishap. Upon arriving at the watering trough on one side of the road, known as Conlin's watering place, he stopped to water the horses. Getting down off the waggon Mr. Fairgrieve took the horses by the heads to get them straightened round to the trough, but somehow the horses started backing up and both waggon and horses went over the bank into the Grand River, getting things mixed up in bad shape. The waggon, which was loaded with chop feed, in its decent down the bank upset, tutning the load into the Grand, some of the bags of feed being floated away by the current and the balance getting a bad soaking. With the aid of a assistance the farmer with great difficulty saved his team and part of the load. Something should be done by the council or some one interested to have the road at the trough put in shape to prevent similiar accidents.

A very sad accident occurred here on Friday morning. W. R. Scott's little 10 year-old son was playing with some other boys who had a revolver. The weapon was accidentally discharged, the shot penetrating the unfortunate child's body. He suffered until Saturday, when death relieved him.

MILLINERY OPENING.—We extend a cordial invitation to all the ladies of the town and surrounding country to attend our grand millinery opening on Wednesday and Thursday, April 9th and 10th and following days.

IN THE SOUTH.

BUREAU OF SOUTHERN NEWS, Raleigh, N. C.

Among the agencies which are at work to develope and change the South, the saw mill is doing a very important work, and doing that work more rapidly than any other influence now operative. For years past Southern pine has been a prime factor in the lumber market of the North. It has been used for every part of ordinary houses, and has formed a very important and costly part of large structures and public buildings. If a school house is to be well built it must have hard pine floors; if a dining room is to be handsomely finished it must have a yellow pine wainscoting, if an office is to have extra fine finish, it must be of Southern pine and mahogany; if a public building is to be erected regardless of cost, a large part of it is drawn from the sand hills of the South. The parties who contracted to rebuild the ceiling of the Assembly Chamber of the famous Capitol at Albany, N. Y., charged fifty cents a foot for pine, which the southern saw mill man saw in covering his mill and negro hovel; the same kind of wood which the fire-man uses to feed the fires beneath his boiler.

The use of the pine of the Southern States is rapidly on the increase, as it has been for several years. People have learned that it possesses both strength and durability, and that it is without a peer in the beauty and variety of the fine finish of which it is capable. The beauty of its grain is unsurpassed, and its tints vary from a brown, which is almost red, to a straw color as delicate as hazewood, and capable of as fine a finish still showing its beautiful grain.

The demand for this wood has pushed the saw mill with its mules and its darkies, farther and farther into the mirror pine forests, and the railroad has as steadily followed. A builder in New York or Philadelphia contracts to erect a large block of buildings. He sends his order for various kinds of lumber and timber to a dealer in Norfolk, Va. He distributes the order among the parties who supply him with his means of doing such business, and straightway the hum of a dozen saws away in the pine forests sing a response.

We do not suppose that a saw mill is a novel sight to the most of our readers, but yet the saw mill of the South, by reason of work and the result of that work, are a matter of no little interest.

The southern saw mill is of one type only viz. the steam engine, the circular saw and the sliding carriage, all portable. Water mills are so rare as to be only exceptions. A water mill too soon becomes useless, from having sawed all the trees within a paying radius. The steam mill cuts up the surrounding trees in a short time and then is moved on to untouched forests. We are personally cognizant of more than twenty removals and new placings of saw mills during the past year. The steam engine which is always considered and spoken of as a part of the mill ranges from twenty four to forty horse power. It is as simple in its build as possible and be effective. The furnace is large the boiler uncovered, and the smoke stack similar to a large stove pipe. It requires for its fuel only a part of the slabs made by the saw. The remainder of the slabs are burned in large piles, and persons living in the vicinity of saw mills will see fire lights in all directions at night, the light of burning slab piles. The saw in use varies from thirty six to fifty inches in diameter. It is made of the best metal, thick and strong. The teeth are hooked and swedged at the point, to make them wider than the thickness of the saw. This prevents the pinching of the wood upon the saw as it runs through the log. The engines are all high pressure and run the saws very fast. A saw in good order and ready to enter a log, shows no motion. The body appears like a still plate of polished steel with a rim of light around it a little as the length of the teeth. The rapidity with which a saw will pass through a log sixteen feet long, a very common length, is marvelous. The carriage on which the logs are run on pulleys, and is so made that when a log is placed it may be sawed into boards or other lumber without being moved on the carriage. When one board is sawed off the slow carriage only feet long is brought up to the saw by a small engine and against work done by the sawyer or his setter. The saw runs all the time, while the carriage runs forward and backward at the will of the sawyer by the use of a single lever. The building or mill structure is only a roof; sometimes not that. Remember we have southern snows requiring thick warm roofs throughout, and not sufficient cold weather to render an enclosure necessary. The water in the tanks or storage for feeding the boiler never will freeze to any extent and the water pipes never burst. The complement of a well equipped mill consists of a manager, a sawyer, a setter, a fireman, two or three men to move the logs on the carriage and as many to remove the slabs, mark the lumber and pile it away ready for shipment. Such a mill will need from six or eight to twenty mules to haul the logs to the mill, and to haul the lumber to the railroad, probably eight men to work with the teams, and from four to six choppers to fell the trees. The products of a mill thus manned and equipped will range from five to seven thousand feet of lumber, ready for market, per day. Perhaps some of our readers who know the price at which such mills sell in northern cities and towns will be ready to say, "That is a large business and there must be large profits."

But the profits while fair are not as large as may be supposed. First the expenses are very large. Nothing which is consumed by man or beast is raised near the mill. Hay comes from the North, corn meal and pork from the Northwest, and all must be bought for cash. Second the cost of transporting lumber for so great a distance is very great, consequently the price to the mill man is low. Good timber is sometimes delivered to the buyer at four dollars and fifty cents per thousand feet. For choice lots and exceptionally large sticks eleven dollars is now paid for lumber at the railroad. But these prices will not continue. Northern capitalists are learning that there are good fortunes in the pine woods of the South, and that the saw mill is the machine to cut them out. Prices have advanced during the present winter from fifty cents to one dollar a thousand feet. It is very easy to calculate what this means for a mill sawing six thousand feet per day. The new equipped are numerous. It is no uncommon thing to find a saw mill with only one white man, the manager, about it. The negroes like the business and remain in it. There are few if any roadsters from the saw mill region. They are far more likely to leave other work and lands to seek employment among the pines. These negroes call up on the manager of the mill for supplies. He must keep a commissary; stocked with corn meal, bacon, flour, coffee and coarse clothing and shoes for the men and their families. He must also keep a large supply of corn and hay for the mules. A day's work in a saw mill is from sun up to sun down, all through the year. During the long summer days one hour and a half time is taken for rest at noon. In these pine woods all sounds are agreeable to the ear. The whistle of the engine does not screech, the puff of the engine sounds like the clapping of the wings of a large bird, the saws sings with the clear tones of a bell, and nothing is more musical than the song of the darkey as he sings to the blows of the axe, or shouts to the wayward mule. All of these sounds can be heard to a great distance.

The large mills cut only the largest trees; and after sawing for a year or two in one place, are moved farther into the forests; and from roads are laid on which the sawed lumber is hauled on cars to the railroad. Sometimes small mills follow the large ones, and cut the smaller trees into shingles and narrow boards for floors and ceilings. The railroad follows the saw mill quickly and closely, and the two are rapidly changing the face and character of the pine and sand belt of the South. But not to its detriment. Some of the land uncovered by the mills will be occupied for agricultural and horticultural purposes; and thus a good population will be planted on the new lands. Other tracts will grow up again into pine, and the climatic conditions of the South will essentially remain unchanged.

The next letter will discuss mules.

One Little Piggie,

I OWNED a litter of pigs. They throve well until a month old, when their throats swelled, and spite of all remedies they all died except one, which was nearly dead. Laughingly I said I would try Yellow Oil, and gave it a thorough application. He improved at once, and soon was all right.

WILLIAM WINDSOR, Brinsley, Ont.

HORRIBLE FATE OF A DESERTED WIFE.

PATERSON, N. J., April 4.—Mrs. Carrie Young, aged 40 years, was found dead in her rooms, on North west street in this city, this morning. The woman had been ill for several days, and was visited and cared for until a late hour last night by friends. When discovered her body was lying in centre of the room burned almost to a crisp. Beside it was a broken lamp. She had left her bed and attempted to to walk with the lamp in her hand, when being overcome by weakness, she fell and her clothing caught fire, and she was slowly roasted to death. The floor was little burned. Nobody discovered the blaze or even smelled the smoke. The woman's husband had deserted her. The charred remains were taken to the morgue.

DYNAMITERS AT WORK!

Dastardly Act in the Township of Hungerford.

BELLEVILLE, April 8.—Particulars were to day received of a villainous act which was perpetrated on Saturday night at Downey's Rapids, in the township of Hungerford, near Moira lake. There is a grist mill at the place of which Geo McIntyre is lessee, lives in a frame house with his wife and seven children. At about 9.30 on the night in question, shortly after the family had retired to bed, they were startled by a loud report, and instantly the house was shaken in a most violent manner. Some of the occupants were thrown from their beds, and the furniture was tossed about in all directions. On going to investigate, Mr McIntyre found that a cartridge of dynamite or some other explosive had been exploded under one end of the house at which place the building was demolished and the timbers scattered about. Strangely and most fortunately not one of the nine inmates of the dwelling was seriously injured. It is reported that a man was seen to run away from the vicinity of the building immediately after the explosion. An investigation will be held before the local magistrate at Tweed.

National Prejudices Vanquished—The Triumphs of a Great Discovery.

The magnetic influence of gold attracts the people of every clime to our shores. Men of all nations, and speaking all the languages of civilization are to be found congregated on our auriferous plains. Differing in all other things in their customs, habits and religion, yet there is one point upon which their opinions coincide. Englishmen and Americans, French, Swiss, Germans, Swedes, Italians and Chinese admit without a dissenting voice, that the great remedies introduced to the world forty years ago by Holloway are better adapted to the cure of diseases in this climate than any other preparations in existence. This appears in fact, to be the experience of mankind in all parts of the world, and hence the universal popularity of these medicines. We consider, however, that the boundless confidence placed in their efficacy by the representatives of so many nations at the mines, is a striking phenomenon in medical history. Many of these people in their youth, and even at maturity, were accustomed to the use of drugs and nostrums peculiar to their several countries. These remedies were connected in their minds with associations of home, and indorsed, as it were, by their national prejudices. Yet they have been thrown aside and utterly repudiated, while Holloway's Pills and Ointment have been adopted by a common impulse throughout the entire gold regions. There is only one way of accounting for this movement. It is the result of conviction—conviction grounded on personal observation and experience.

The Ointment is used with such wonderful success as a dressing for wounds, ulcers, and sore legs, and for all the external diseases and casualties to which the adventurous gold hunter is peculiarly liable, that scarcely a digger's tent can be found within the vast area of the gold fields unprovided with a stock of this healing, soothing, cooling preparation. The hard fare of the digger, and sometimes his habits, tend to vitiate the blood and develop running sores and purulent ulcers of the body and limbs. Bad legs, especially, are very common at the diggings, and seriously interfere with the labours of the diggers. The worst cases of this class are cured by the Ointment with extraordinary rapidity. The best method of healing sore legs, and sores and ulcers generally, is by rubbing the Ointment into the inflamed parts around the orifice first opening the pores and softening the flesh with warm fomentations. The part affected is then dressed with lint or linen saturated with the Ointment. Such is the external treatment, but it is also proper to give the patient a few doses of the Pills during the progress of the cure, as they serve to purify the blood and discharge morbid matter from the system, while the Ointment is doing its work on the surface.—The Scientific Witness.

THE DEADLY TOUCH.

NEW YORK, April 7.—An Auburn despatch to the Herald says:—Strange news comes from the lonely cell where Wm. Kemmler, the wife murderer, of Buffalo, awaits almost in solitude the expiation of his crime. Dead to the law, and soon to sit in the chair which science has devised to rid the State of its assassins, this strange man has suddenly claimed to have evinced a change of heart and melted into the seeming of a man. Last Wednesday morning just after midnight he claimed to have a vision of Christ, and from that vision he has found conversion. So he says, and two at least who have seen him believe in it.

The correspondent says hundreds of persons are filing applications for permission to witness the execution. All the scientists in the country want to get in and the most absurd claims are made upon the warden, who is limited to 22 and cannot satisfy the demands of the entire population.

The Electric Commission continues its attempts to keep out the newspapers in spite of the fact that an alleged "scientist," who is under contract to be present, has engaged to write up the execution for a paper. Kemmler has not asked to see a clergyman.

Quick Relief for Headache.

Had suffered with headache, and tried everything I could think of without effect until I used Burdock Blood Bitters, which relieved me right away, and I am now remarkably well.

ANNIE TOBANSEAU, Glen Almond, Que.

An exchange remarks:—At last the French seem to have found out the plain fact that the red trousers of their soldiers are just ten per cent too remarkable, especially when not shaded by smoke. Many people have wondered why they never made the discovery before; but the flowing and flaming garment was fastened by tradition and fancy for the picturesque. Now, however, it seems doomed to disappearance. But just what the French government will do with all those red trousers it is at present hard to say. Perhaps the best thing that could be done with them would be to send them all to John Wanamaker in Philadelphia. They would make a show on his bargain counter. He could have them smoked to any and all shades, and conscientiously advertise them as "genuine French goods marked down."

The aggregate tonnage which passed through the Sault Canal last year was only about 2 per cent greater than that of the previous year. The total for 1889 was only 6,783,000 tones, or decidedly less than the freight movement through the Sault Ste. Marie Canal in a season of navigation only six months long. In growth of traffic there is no comparison between these two great waterways, the "Soo" canal gaining more in one year than the Suez canal in ten.

Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam loosens the phlegm, cutting coughs, colds, hoarseness, croup, asthma, bronchitis and all affections of the throat and lungs.

U. S. Consul H. W. Diedrich writes from Leipsic to former associates of the faculty of Concordia College at Fort Wayne, Ind., that he has unearthed a gigantic system of frauds on the part of German exporters whereby many thousands of dollars of import duties are annually lost to the United States. He does not particularize on what articles frauds have been practiced, but will shortly forward to Washington a detailed report of his discoveries.

All the through trains on the principal roads east, west and south will soon be supplied with a lunch counter and sample room on wheels. Ed. Stokes, of Huffman house fame, is the originator of this idea, and associated with Messrs. Burns and Brown, of Chicago, he has organized a dining car company, with a capital of $100,000, for the purpose of doing a general restaurant and bar business on railroad cars.

In Denver, Rawlins county, Kansas, the father and mother of a family named Chleboard disappeared some time ago. Their bodies have been found in a well. The children are suspected of committing the crime to get property.

CATARRH,

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS—HAY FEVER

A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N.B. This treatment is not a snuff or an ointment; both have been discarded by reputable physicians as injurious. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 303 West King Street, Toronto, Canada.—Toronto Globe.

Sufferers from Catarrhal troubles should carefully read the above.

GUARANTEED.

The only medicines sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from their manufacturers, that they will do just what is claimed for them—that is, benefit or cure in all cases of diseases for which they are recommended, or the money paid for them will be promptly refunded—are Dr. Pierce's world-famed specifics, manufactured by World's Dispensary Medical Association, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures all diseases arising from a torpid or deranged liver, or from impure blood, as Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, Pimples, Blotches, Eruptions, Salt-rheum, Tetter, Erysipelas, and Scrofulous Sores and Swellings. Consumption, or Lung-scrofula, is also cured by this wonderful remedy, if taken in time.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the world-famed remedy for all those chronic weaknesses and distressing derangements so common to American women. It is a most potent, invigorating, restorative tonic, or strength giver, imparting tone and vigor to the whole system. As a soothing nervine it is unequaled. See guarantee printed on the bottle-wrapper and faithfully carried out for many years.

MRS. EDWARDS ACQUITTED.

GODERICH, April 4.—The trial of Mrs. Edwards of Woodstock on the charge of poisoning her former husband, Hugh J. Whitney, was concluded this forenoon. Mr. Justice Street charged strongly in favor of the prisoner and took the ground that the girl Johnston, who was the principle witness against the prisoner, if her story was true was an accomplice and that her unsupported testimony would not warrant a conviction. He also pointed out vital discrepancies in the story told by the girl.

The jury returned in about ten minutes with a verdict of not guilty. The verdict meets with general approval.

An almost unheard of crime was committed in a Kentucky town the other day. A girl 10 years old was walking in the field with her two-year old sister. The baby grew fretful and the girl tied the little thing to the tail of a cow and then hustled the animal into a gallop. The girl then went home and told what she had done. When the child was discovered it was a shapeless mass.

The farmer may often feel poorer than he really is from the system of false book keeping which he practices. ## A DANGER SIGNAL!

A Cold in the Head may be aptly termed a danger signal warning you that if neglected that dangerous and disagreeable disease, Catarrh, is sure to follow, perhaps leading to Consumption and the grave. At no season of the year is Cold in the Head more prevalent than during the Spring months, and at no other season do the people of this country suffer more generally from Catarrh, with all its disagreeable and annoying effects. Do not for an instant neglect either of these troubles, but apply NASAL BALM, the only remedy that will give instant relief and effect a thorough cure. The following testimonials from among thousands in our possession bear witness to its sterling merit.

Alex. Burns, Sudbury, Ont., says: I may state that I have been affected with Catarrh seven or eight years, and it was attended by consequent symptoms such as foul breath, constant dropping into the throat, hawking and spitting, partial deafness, ringing in the ears and sickening pains in the head directly over either eye. I have used powders and douches, but all to no effect, the only result arising from the use of such was temporary relief, followed by the usual symptoms in a more aggravated form. The results arising from the use of Nasal Balm: Sweet breath, stoppage of the droppings into the throat, (consequently less hawking and spitting), clearness of hearing, and not once since I began its use have I had pain in the head. In fact, it is my opinion that a careful and persistent use of the Balm will effect a cure in the worst case of catarrh.

T. D. D. Loyd, 8 Clarence street, Toronto says: I wish here to testify to the unequalled healing powers of your Nasal Balm. I have been troubled for three years by what the doctors call post nasal catarrh, and have tried everything in the city that could be obtained, in the shape of catarrh cures, and found no permanent relief from any of them, till a friend one day advised me to try your Nasal Balm, and I find that even one bottle has done me more good than all the medicines put together that I have persecuted myself with before. I was very much troubled with spitting and hawking, especially in the morning, so much so that my throat was continually in a raw condition, but I am now beginning to know what it is to be able to speak freely. I shall not fail to recommend it to any of my friends suffering from the like disease.

NASAL BALM

INSTANTLY RELIEVES

Cold in Head.

A. W. Mallory, Mallorytown, Ont., says: My daughter suffered for years from a most distressing and annoying Catarrh. Her case was under the treatment of eminent physicians in the United States and Canada. Two months use of Nasal Balm has had more beneficial effects than all former treatment combined.

L. D. Dion, Dept. Railways and Canals, Ottawa, says: I am very glad to give you to-day the testimony that Nasal Balm has completely cured my catarrh, from which I suffered for nearly three years.

NASAL BALM

POSITIVELY CURES

CATARRH.

D Derbyshire, Mayor of Brockville and President of the Ontario Creamery Association, says: Nasal Balm beats the world for Catarrh and Cold in the Head. In my own case it effected relief from the first application.

Isaac Waterman, Imperial Oil Co'y, Petrolia, Ont., says: Nasal Balm gave me the most perfect satisfaction of any medicine I ever used for Cold in the Head. I found it easy to use, quick in giving relief and effect a complete cure in a couple of hours.

If Nasal Balm is not kept in stock by your dealer it will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 Cents for small and $1 for large size bottles) by addressing

AFTER THE BALL

They sat and combed their beautiful hair,
Their long bright tresses one by one,
As they talked and laughed in the chamber there
After the revel was done.

Robe of satin and Brussels lace,
Knots of flowers and ribbons, too,
Scattered about in every place,
For the ball is through.

And Maud and Madge in robes of white,
—The prettiest nightgowns under the sun—
Stockingless, slipperless, sat in the light,
For the revel is done.

Sit and comb their beautiful hair,
Whose wonderful waves of brown and gold
Till the fire is out in the chamber there
And the little bare feet are cold.

Steal along in a splendid dream
To a gold glitter's tinkling tune,
While a thousand lustres shimmering stream
In a palace's grand saloon.

Two and two they dreamily walk,
While an unseen spirit walks beside,
And all unheard in the lovers' talk
He claimeth one for a bride.

Robed for the bridal and robed for the tomb,
Braided brown hair and golden tress;
Of the bearded lips to press.

Oh, beautiful Maud, in your bridal white,
For you the revel has just begun;
But for her who sleeps in your arms to-night
The revel of life is done.

But robed and crowned with your saintly bliss
Queen of Heaven and Bride of the Sun,
Oh, beautiful Madge, you never will miss
The kisses another has won.

IF AND PERHAPS.

If every one were wise and sweet,
And every one were jolly;
If every heart with gladness beat,
And none were melancholy;
If none should grumble or complain,
And nobody should labour
In evil work, but each were fain
To love and help his neighbor—
Oh, what a happy world 'twould be
For you and me—for you and me!

And if, perhaps, we both should try
That glorious time to hurry;
If you and I—just you and I—
Should laugh instead of worry;
If we should grow—just you and I—
Kinder and sweeter hearted
Perhaps in some near by-and by
That good time might get started,
Then what a happy world 'twonle be
For you and me—for you and me!

SUNBEAMS.

When a joke has malice in it it becomes a witticism.

A man who itches for fame must scratch around lively to secure it.

It is a strange fact that a man can best be used as a tool when he is dull.

It does not require a legal education to go into the son in law business.

"One good turn deserves another" is the motto of an economical dressmaker.

Love not; the one you love may die, or at any rate run off with another man.

A washerwoman's work has just begun when she is approaching the clothes.

The man who is intoxicated with love should take a little marriage to sober him up.

It does not seem right to charge an enemy's battery after the guns are all paid for.

A Texas debating society recently had for a subject, "Is it proper to sound horn dogs."

It is well enough to mind your own business but you want to sink the shop when in assiety.

Home Missionary—Does your son profess religion now? Housewife—No, he's working for a gas company.

Sometimes the lover who is fired with passion for the daughter is put out by the father.

"Pa, I won't go to the bad place when I die, will I?" "No, my son, I hope not. When you get a little older I'll let you take a trip to Chicago.

"Victor," asked the teacher, "what animal shows the greatest attachment to man? Victor thinks a moment, and then replies—"The leech, sir."

A man is like an omnibus. When he is full of drinks he thinks there is room for one more.

Captain—How is that fellow I cut down? Doctor—Dead, sir. Captain Well, don't bury him until he has apologized

The difference between the modern journalistic "special commissioner" and the old reporter and correspondent is the former knows more, but what he knows isn't so.

A man is a good deal like a machine: By the time he gets himself into good running order, and pays for himself, and learns how to do his work with some sort comfort, he is marked old and out of order.

In purchasing medicines, don't try experiments; the first and only consideration should be genuineness. Ayer's Sarsaparilla has stood the test of forty years, and to-day it is in greater demand than ever—a triumphant proof of popular approval.

"Mamma, what's hereditary?" asked Bobby, laboriously tripping over the syllables of the long word. "Why, it is—it is anything you get from your father or me," replied the mother, a little puzzled for a definition suited to his years. Silence of two minutes. "Then, ma he asked, "is spanking hereditary?"

John Tamson had lived in London for a considerable length of time. He hailed from the Vale of Nith. His friends used to send a local paper occasionally, and the first thing he looked at was the obituary column. On one occasion he was heard to say, in a grumbling, disappointed tone, "What's the use o' sending a paper like that, there's nae news in it; there's no a body dead that I was acquainted wi'."

Of Great Value.

Capt. D. H. Lyon, manager and proprietor of the C. P. R. and R. W. and O. R. ferry, Prescott, Ont., says: I used Nasal Balm for a prolonged case of cold in the head. Two applications effected a complete and thorough cure in less than 14 hours. I would not take $100 for my bottle of Nasal Balm if I could not replace it.

EARLY RISING.

Most of the talk about early rising is moonshine. The habit of turning out of bed in the middle of the night suits some people, but they enjoy it. It is only fair to say there is a general rule upon the subject, says a writer in the Domestic Monthly. Some men are fit for nothing at all after they have risen early every morning. The energies are deadened, their imaginations are heavy, their spirits are depressed. It is said you can work so well in the morning. Some people can, but others can work best at night; others, again, in the afternoon.

Long trial and experiment form the only conclusive tests upon these points. We all know the model man, aged eighty. "I invariably rise at five, I work three hours, take a light breakfast—namely, a cracker and a pinch of salt—work five hours more, never smoke, never drink anything but barely water, eat no dinner and go to bed at six in the evening." If anybody finds that dull keyfied sort of life will suit him, by all means let him continue it. But few people would care to live to eighty on these terms.

If a man cannot get all withered and crimpled up on easier conditions than those, it is almost as well that he should depart before he is a nuisance to himself and a bore to everybody else. Schoolboys and young people generally ought to get up early, for it is found that nine tenths of them can stand it, and it does them good. But let no one torture himself with the thought that he could have been twice as good a man as he is if he had risen every morning at daylight. The habit would kill half of us in less than five years.

There are two reasons why some people don't mind their own business. One is, that they haven't any mind; the other, that they haven't any business.

Samuel Wood, a wealthy New Yorker, died in 1878 leaving a fortune of $1,000,000. His heirs went to law and on Saturday the estate was declared bankrupt.

The annual dinner of the parliament press gallery at the Dominion Parliament took place on Saturday night at the Russel House. Mr. J. S. Willison of the Globe presided.

There have been eight burglaries in Oakville during the last three weeks. On Friday night the postoffice and telegraph office were ransacked.

A shock of earthquake was distinctly felt at Contoocook, N. H., on Friday night, shortly after ten o'clock. It was also noticeable in several surrounding towns.

Miss Wright, the Ottawa evangelist, who was so badly treated in Hull last February, has purchased a centrally located hall in that town, and will soon resume her service.

This winter has been a bad one for coal men, for dealers, snow shovellers, ice and skating rinks, but an exceedingly good one for doctors, undertakers, and druggists.

The coroner's jury found that Saloonkeeper Hodgins, London, died of natural causes, and the man supposed to have struck the blow from which it was believed he died has been released.

The Baltimore Sun says the marriage of Miss Margaret Blaine, eldest daughter of the Secretary of State, and Mr. Walter Damrosch, of New York, will take place April 17.

A notary from the parish of Les Eboulements has arrived at Quebec to file claims of seventeen families of twelve or more children to the 100 acre grant of land. Although a small parish, more claimants are expected from it.

Mrs. Mary Ann Wade, wife of Mr James Wade, druggist, Port Stanley, died on Sunday morning very suddenly of heart disease. She had gone for a bottle of liniament for her husband, who was suffering from rheumatism, and had just handed it to him when she dropped over dead. She was in the 76th year of her age and resided for 50 years in Port Stanley.

John Bruce, No. 9 Huron street a cab driver in Verrall's livery stable, Toronto, quarreled with his sweetheart on Saturday night at the restaurant at 53 York street. His sweetheart, Mary Bennett, ran across the restaurant in question and it is said that Bruce followed to make trouble. There arrived a little ahead of leading after in his face. Dr. Hay, Spadina avenue, was called in to attend to the injuries inflicted on him. He will probably lose an eye. The woman was arrested by Detective Slemin for felonious wounding. She says that Bruce led her astray and then neglected her, for this reason she desired to get even.

The wife of James Thompson, a farmer living outside of Dartmouth, N. S., has been missing for some days, and cannot be found. She left her home for Halifax to sell an ox, and succeeded in disposing of the animal on the road. Nothing is known of her subsequent movements, and her husband fears she has met with foul play.

A Trip to Manitoba.

Last year I went to Manitoba on the C. P. R. At Rat Portage I got sick, and at Winnipeg I was so weak I had to be assisted off the train. I got a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and after the first dose felt better. When I got to Boissevain I was as well as ever. The Bitters cure the bad effects of the surface water of the prairies

DONALD MCLEAN, Bolsover, Ont.

Little Janet, aged four years, accompanied her mother to the kirk for the first time the other Sunday. During the sermon the minister mentioned the name of God several times, and every time he uttered it she acted as if she disapproved of his conduct. At length she could endure it no longer. The next time he chanced to mention it she rose up in her seat, and called out in her shrill treble—"Hey, man! stop sweerin'."

Shall Women Be Allowed to Vote?

The question of female suffrage has agitated the tongues and pens of reformers for many years, and good arguments have been adduced for and against it. Many of the softer sex could vote intelligently and many would vote as their husbands did, and give no thought to the merits of a political issue. They would all vote for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for they know it is a boon to their sex. It is unequalled for leucorrhea, abnormal discharges, morning sickness, and the countless ills to which women are subject. It is the only remedy for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by druggists under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. See guarantee on wrapper around bottle.

Mrs. Ross, who lives near Dutton Village, Elgin County, while sitting on the M. C. R. track one mile east of West Lorne, was struck by a train and cut into pieces. The woman is said to have been under the influence of liquor.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism and Gout.—These painfulying and scoothing remedies demand the earnest attention of all persons liable to gout, sciatica, or other painful affections of the muscles, nerves or joints. The Ointment should be applied after the affected parts have been patiently fomented with warm water, when the unguent should be diligently rubbed upon the adjacent skin, unless the friction should cause pain. Holloway's Pills should be simultaneously taken to reduce inflamation and to purify the blood. This treatment abates the violence, and lessens the frequency of gout, rheumatism, and all spasmodic diseases, which spring from hereditary predisposition, or from any accidental weakness of constitution. This Ointment checks the local mischief. The Pills restore the vital powers.

It is said that the English authorities are still in pursuit of Jack the Ripper, and that one of the best known of their detective inspectors devotes his whole time to the case.

General Debility.

A few weeks since, we began to give her Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Her health has greatly improved."—Mrs. Harriet H. Battles, South Chelmsford, Mass.

"About six years ago I became aware of Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for debility and neuralgia resulting from malarial exposure in the army. I was in a very bad condition, but six bottles of the Sarsaparilla, with occasional doses of Ayer's Pills, have greatly improved my health. I am now able to work, and feel that I cannot say too much for your excellent remedies."—P. A. Pinkham, South Molunkus, Me.

"My daughter, sixteen years old, is using Ayer's Sarsaparilla with good effect."—Rev. S. J. Graham, United Brethren Church, Buckhannon, W. Va.

"I suffered from

with lame back and headache, and have been much benefited by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I am now 80 years of age, and am satisfied that my present health and prolonged life are due to the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—Lucy Moffitt, Killingly, Conn.

Mrs. Ann H. Farnsworth, a lady 70 years old, So. Woodstock, Vt., writes: "After several weeks' suffering from nervous prostration, I procured a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken half of it my usual health returned."

The four greatest medical centres of the world are London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna. These cities have immense hospitals teeming with suffering humanity. Crowds of students throng the wards studying under the Professors in charge. The most renowned physicians of the world teach and practice here, and the institutions are storehouses of medical knowledge and experience. With a view of making this experience available to the public the Hospital Remedy Co. at great expense secured the prescriptions of these hospitals, prepared the specifics, and although it would cost from $25 to $100 to secure the attention of their distinguished originators, yet in this way their prepared specifics are offered at the price of the quack patent medicines that flood the market and absurdly claim to cure every ill from a single bottle.

The Favorite

Medicine for Throat and Lung Diseases has long been and still is, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It cures Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and Asthma; soothes Irritation of the Larynx and Fauces; strengthens the Vocal Organs; allays soreness of the Lungs; prevents Consumption, and even in advanced stages of that disease, relieves Coughing and induces Sleep. There is no other preparation for diseases of the throat and lungs to be compared with this remedy.

"My wife had a distressing cough, with pains in the side and breast. We tried various medicines, but none did her any good until I got a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which has cured her. Kensington Mew Gibson, had the measles, and the cough was relieved by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have no hesitation in recommending this medicine to every one."

Cough Medicine

to every one affected.—Rev. T. Thorson, Foreman Herald office, Morrilton, Ark.

"I have been afflicted with asthma for forty years. Last spring I was taken with a violent cough, which threatened to terminate my days. Every one pronounced me in consumption. I determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Its effects were magical. I was immediately relieved and continued to improve until entirely recovered."—Joel Bunting, Guilford, Conn.

"Six months ago I felt a severe hemorrhage of the lungs, followed by an incessant cough which deprived me of sleep and rest. I tried various remedies, but obtained no relief until I began to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A few bottles of this medicine cured me."—Mrs. E. Coburn, 19 Second st., Lowell, Mass.

"For children afflicted with croup, sore throat, or croup, I know of any remedy which gives more speedy relief than Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have found it invaluable in cases of Whooping Cough."—Mrs. Ann Lovejoy, 1287 Washington st., Boston, Mass.

Poetry.

SUMMER.

She comes arrayed in spreading robe
Of emerald hue and garlands bright,
And with her magic powers the hills and vales clothe in light
In transformation grand, while life and light
Thrills on through all the land. Oh, 'tis a gladsome sight.

Earth rings with praise from feathered throats,
Oh, why need man in woe despair,
When in his ears and to his heart earth hears
Ceaseless notes
Are lavished on him plenteous everywhere?
Surely the voice of nature soothes away our cares,
If in some lonesome, anguished heart
Hope long hath lost its ancient power,
Seek in nature's bowers and Hope from the heaven's shall start;
For she in summer's garb hath wondrous dower,
And oft o'erloads the mind with joy in one short hour.

Oh, dream of beauty and of love,
How many a hand within thy shade
Have joined in compact sweet, while only heaven above
Hath heard such sacred vow and promise made,
Such summer dreams and secrets speak from every glade.

Thus summer in her gliding course,
Sweet as the sparkling, tinkling rill
That floweth through her dewy shades, must still perforce
Glide on in beauty as the seasons still
Glide on, and leave a memory at the summit of life's hill.

The Story Teller.

Old Uncle Bill.

Anyone who visited Mr. Norris at his fine place on the Hudson would be sure to notice, after a while, an old man who wandered about the place dressed all summer in a white shirt and linen vest and trousers and a fisherman's hat, and all winter in a woolen dressing-gown. He was a meek, tall, bald old man, and people at first took him for a superannuated old servant; but, finally, his nice linen, his neat hands, and a certain, well-bred tone of voice, if, by chance, they heard him speak, made them ask:

"Who is that?"

If they inquired of Miss Belle, the eldest unmarried daughter, she would answer:

"An old connection of poor mamma's. I can't see why pa has him here—horrid thing!"

If they asked Mr. Norris's maiden sister, she would reply:

"One of the blessings my late sister in law brought with her into the family. A miserable no-er-do-weel of a relation."

If the question were propounded to pompous Mr. Norris, as he sat in his arm-chair on his piazza, or drove about his property in one of his handsome vehicles, he would answer:

"Well, that's a sort of a relation of my wife's, a no'er-do-weel. The black sheep of the flock, you know. Always is one in every family. For the sake—she was a very benevolent woman—we let him stay about. He prefers eating by himself. He's very stupid, very; but she wanted him here, and she had her way, poor soul. I grudged her nothing. Yes, that's poor Bill."

But if it was Miss Phemie of whom the question was asked, she always answered:

"Why, that is Uncle Bill. He is a little eccentric, but the dearest old soul. I'm very, very found of him, and he of me. Dear old Uncle Bill."

Certainly Phemie was the old man's only friend in that pompous household. She it was who went up to his little room with meals, and sat with him while he ate them; who saw that he had the newspapers and his pipe; who had fixed that little out of the way place with a carpet, book shelves, a student's lamp, lots of pretty ornaments worstad and painted silk, who never received her monthly allowance without buying something for him.

His pretty, snow white shirts were her gift, and she saw that they were "done up" properly. The flannel dressing gown he wore in the winter was of her contrivance. In a sort of up in that corner-roofed room there were hours that were more home like than any spent in the great parlors, or the big dining-room, where Miss Belle was only affectionate to "pa" when she wanted more money to spend; and Miss Norris' the elder sister of the master of the house, made bitter speeches in the pause of the needle-work in which she was perpetually engaged. Sometimes directed at her brother, some times at Belle sometimes at Phemie but all worded so circumspectly and clothed in such a guise of piety that no one dared resent them.

"What a comfort you are, Uncle Bill," Phemie would say, as she poured out the old man's coffee.

"And what a comfort you are, Phemie," old Uncle Bill would say. "If I was a rich uncle, just home from India, like those in plays and novels, you couldn't make more of me."

"I wouldn't make so much, uncle," Phemie would answer, "for you'd be a victim of liver complaint, and that would make you ill natured, and you'd scold me, and say naughty words. They all do, you know. Now you haven't any stocks to worry about, files pass you, and you're not irritable, and I like to be with you. Rosie like mamma too. You have her eyes."

"You are sister Susan's image," the old man would say. "Do you remember the day that you came to the hospital with her?"

"Yes," said Phemie. "I was just twelve years old and mamma was crying over the telegram. 'My only brother, Phemie, she said. 'So sick that he may die, and so poor that he's in the hospital.' Then we came and saw you in bed, and after a while we brought you home, and we nursed you well again."

"And died herself just as I got about," said Uncle Bill. "And your father and the rest did not like the shabby old man around the house. Well, I was lucky to get a home I suppose, and luckier still to find one disinterested love as yours. You're like Susan. She was the dearest girl that ever lived. Yes, you're like Susan."

But they did not always talk thus. They were very busy often, over books! over Phemie's embroidery, for which he designed patterns; teaching her little dog a thousand tricks; feeding the blind kittens Phemie saved from drowning; making a little well, from which the canary drew buckets of water. And Phemie and the old man would wander off to the river-side, where he would fish, seldom catching anything and she would read and knit.

None of the family knew of these intimacies. Bello, older than Phemie by six years, preferred that she would consider herself a child until Miss Norris was married. And Aunt Marcia detested her for her resemblance to the sister-in-law who "had never been congenial."

Sometimes, when the old man's rod dangled over the water, a younger angler would take his place near him—a handsome young fellow with black hair and the brightest eyes in the world; and then the hours went by like the hours of dream, and Phemie felt happy as she had felt when a child by her mother's side. And Uncle Bill laughed and told fishermen's stories. As for the young man, silent or talkative, he was always charming. So thought Phemie. She was seventeen; she had never had a lover.

She was well-read in romantic lore. What happened was only to be expected. In a little while two lovers sat beside old Uncle Bill on the banks of the pretty stream, and walked together as far as the little gate in the hedge that nobody else used, and did not hide from the old man that they parted with a kiss.

Fred Howard was not a fashionable man, only the son of a poor widow who had made a book keeper of her boy. What holidays he had he spent at home. This was his mid-summer vacation; he he was bright and good and handsome, but Mr. Norris surely would have had other views for his youngest daughter.

And so, one day, as the two, having met accidently on the road, were talking together, with an expression on either face, that made an old country lady, who drove past, remark to her husband, "Hiram, take my word for it, them's beaus." Mr. Norris marched up behind the pair, and appeared like a very florid ghost between them, with an:

"I was not aware, Mr. Howard, that you had ever been introduced to my daughter."

The young man blushed, but answered:

"But I have sir—by my friend, her uncle."

"Oh!" replied Mr. Norris, lowering his tone a little. "Then you know my brother, Mr. Whipple Norris of this city? He is a relative I am proud of—worth half a million if he is a cent."

"I have often heard of Mr. Whipple Norris," replied the young man frankly, "but never met him. I owe my introduction to Miss Phemie Norris to her Uncle William—ah—ah." The young man suddenly remembered that he did not know Uncle Bill's last name.

"Her Uncle William!" repeated Mr. Norris. "Euphemia, does young Howard allude to your poor mother's unfortunate brother Bill?"

Phemie bowed her head.

"Young Howard!" repeated Mr. Norris. "That person has no authority to introduce my daughter. Consider yourself a stranger to her henceforth."

Phemie looked at Fred. Fred looked at Phemie.

"It is too late, sir," the latter said. "I love your daughter, and have won her heart. She has promised to be my wife."

Mr. Norris stared at him, lifted his eye brows; stared again through his double eye glass, and spoke sternly:

"I have one daughter who is a credit to me. Lord McTab paid great attention to her last winter. He has written to ask my consent to their nuptials, which I shall give, and he will return in fall to be married to her. An English nobleman would hardly like a brother-in law who makes, perhaps, twenty dollars a week. My eldest daughter, Mrs. Timkins Trotter, has married a gentleman who is esteemed the wealthiest man in Mineville. My son is with my brother in New York—a man I am proud of. Now I shall never make a fuss about Phemie. I only tell you this: If she marries you, I disown her. You can take her if she chooses. I shall never give her a penny. She may have her clothes and trinkets, and go. If she obeys me, she shall be married or single well provided for. She is plain and unpreposessing; but I know a young clergyman who will attain eminence, who only needs my permission to propose. She might do very well with a proper portion for him. She has a thick waist, a large mouth, and ordinary features," continued Mr. Norris, turning his eye glass on his daughter; "but a clergyman should not look for beauty."

"She is the prettiest girl I know, and if I may earn her bread and butter, I can do it," said Fred Howard. "You give her to me, sir!"

"No," replied Mr. Norris. "She may give herself to you if she chooses to be a beggar."

Then he walked way.

As Phemie and Fred stood looking at each other, old Uncle Bill's head arose above the shrubbery.

"I give my permission," he said, with more than usual dignity, and I am her mother's brother. I think you will make her happy, young Fred Howard."

The maiden aunt and the sister, who was to be the bride of an English nobleman, led Phemie a sad life of it for a while; but one morning she walked out of her home in her simple church-going costume, and was married, in the little chapel of St. John. Old Uncle Bill, in his old-fashioned broadcloth suit, went with them, and gave the bride away. Mrs. Howard was there, and a school-friend of Phemie's, and a fellow clerk of Fred's. None of the Norris family. And after the wedding they were to go upon a little trip. Phemie's trunks had been sent to Fred's mother's house. The bride was not as happy as she might have been under other circumstances, but at home no one had ever loved or considered her since her mother's death; and Fred loved her, and she loved him. Her only trouble was that she must leave old Uncle Bill.

"That is hard," the old man said, "very hard, Phemie." And then Fred held out his hand.

"Uncle Bill," he said, "we shall live in a very plain way, but if you will live with us, we will do our best to make you happy, and shall be happy ourselves."

"Will you be so, boy?" cried Uncle Bill. A poor old man like me—oh! really?"

"Really!" cried Phemie, dancing with joy.

"Really and truly, heaven knows." And Fred grasped his hand and shook it. "You brought us together, Uncle Bill," he said.

"It's lucky," answered Uncle Bill, "for brother-in law Norris has turned me out of his house for aiding and abetting you—told me that I might be town poor if I liked. I didn't, but I just said: "very well; I'll go."

"I'll get your things and take them to mother's," said Fred. "You'll be company for her while we're gone; after that, one home for all of us."

Then the old man looked at them with a smile; looked at Mrs. Howard with another, and laughed his sweet, good natured laugh.

"You're two good, honest, generous children," he said. "And you're Fred's mother, ma'am. But I've an explanation to make. Five years ago, my sister Susan heard that I was sick, and at a hospital, and took me to her house. She nursed me back to tolerable health, and was very good to me. Then, sweet angel, she died. She thought that being in a hospital meant poverty. I was paying fifty dollars a week there. I have a fortune that even Mr. Norris would respect, but seeing what he was, I took a fancy that I'd find out what his children were. I have. I've lived about the place as old Uncle Bill, a poor relation. I wasn't wanted, even at table. I was despised by all but Phemie. She, dear little soul, has been a daughter to me. I told my sister Susan the truth on her death bed, and promised to do my best by this sweet girl; and my money has been growing under good care for five years. Why, had I been the beggar they thought me I'd have gone to an alms-house rather than eat Norris's bread all these years. As I was, I enjoyed the joke. To think how he would have respected me if he had known the truth. How he scorned me for being poor, when I was a wealthy man; but let that pass; we are happy together and what need we care?"

There was great excitement at the Norris mansion when the news reached its inhabitants, and Mr. Norris sent a formal forgiveness to his daughter.

She was a good girl and felt glad that this was so, but she only began to know what real happiness was in the home where she and those who truly loved her lived contentedly together for many long and pleasant years.

"Nothing But Skin and Bones."

is the indignant though appropriate expression used in describing the appearance of many females whom Nature intended for perfect specimens of her handiwork, but who have been reduced to this distressed condition by some of the organic troubles, peculiar to the sex, styled "female complaints," the symptoms of which are "an all gone feeling," weakness in the back, especially mornings, nervousness and sometimes hysteria. The cure for these beauty-destroying troubles—and an undoubted one in every case—is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and it renders it unnecessary to consult a doctor—a disagreeable duty for a modest woman. ## A HOT HORSE-SHOE.

Once upon a time, a wet, chilly afternoon, a number of loungers were assembled in Col. Chestnam's blacksmith's shop, in Conway, New Hampshire. It was in the old colonel's time, when he was at the forge, in full vigor. He and his son Joe were at work making horse-shoes, while the loungers, sitting as whatever came handy, there being but one chair, were discussing cash matters as such occasions are wont to suggest, village gossip and politics taking the lead. Thus stood matters, when Billy Bulpit, from "over the river," came in, meek and lowly, as usual.

Billy had the reputation of being a fool. He certainly was uneducated, having, in all probability never attended school in his life, and he was now almost thirty; but I have seen bigger fools than he, who passed for shrewd and able men. As Billy stood before the anvil, watching the tongues of flame that leaped up from the nozzle of the well plied bellows, Joe took from the fire an embryo horse-shoe, at a white heat, and holding it clasped in the strong pinchers, he poked it playfully under Billy's nose.

"How does it smell, Billy?" asked John Head who sat on the head of an inverted nail keg, close at hand

"Let's see ye touch yer tongue to it!" said Jake Berry.

"He dar'sn't do it!" cried Jake's brother, Horace.

"Look a hayr!" exclaimed Billy, with a flush, "jest you gi' me haff a dollar, an' I'll put my tongue right on to it—you see if I don't!"

"Go ahead. Do it, and you shall have the money."

"No yer don't!" said Billy, with an emphatic nod. "Gi' me the half-dollar fust."

"And then you'll do it?"

"Yaas, I'll tetch my tongue to it, right slap."

They made up the money—two quarters—and placed it in Billy's outstretched palm, ready to go for him should he attempt to make off without fulfilling the conditions.

"Thayr!" he said, as he ran out his tongue, and laid it upon the two silver pieces. "That's the cheese, and it's what I said I'd dew!" And he slipped the money into his pocket and made for the door.

Joe was upon the point of hurling the red hot shoe after him, when his father mildly suggested that the fellow had honestly won his bet. They saw the catch, and let him go.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—Diseases of Women.—Medical science in all ages has been directed to alleviate the maladies incident to females, but Professor Holloway, by diligent study and attentive observation, was induced to believe that nature had provided a remedy for those special diseases. He has, after vast research, succeeded in compounding his celebrated Pills and Ointment, which embody the principles naturally designed for the relief and cure of disorders peculiar to women of all ages and constitutions, whether residing in warm or cold climates. They have repeatedly corrected disordered functions which have defied the usual drugs prescribed for such cases; and still more satisfactory is it that the malady is relieved completely and permanently.

WICKED HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS.

NEW HAVEN, April 11.—Principal Whitmore of the Hillhouse High School discovered a plan to day by which the pupils attending the school had arranged to deceive their teachers, and by a system of bribery secure advance copies of the papers containing the questions which are to be presented for examination next Monday. There are 700 pupils in the school, and the majority of them are implicated in the plot. The scheme originated with members of the junior class. They attempted to bribe G. F. Krause, a printer with the firm of Tuttle, Moorehouse & Taylor, which prints the examination papers for the school, to give them proofs of the papers. He refused. Then a young lady, a member of the high school, with whom Krause was keeping company, was prevailed upon by the ringleaders to induce her lover to steal the proofs. He made the first attempt last Friday and was detected. Saturday noon he again tried to take an impression of the questions and was caught in the act by the foreman. Krause was immediately discharged by Mr. Taylor of the firm and the fact reported to Mr. Whitmore.

He called the teachers of the school together and gave instructions that a complete new set of examination papers be issued. A room in the school was set apart, and fifty teachers and assistants are working night and day to get the examinations papers out in time for Monday's examinations. All of the papers will be written. In the meantime an investigation is going on, and all of the boys and girls found to be implicated in the scheme will be expelled from the school. This will include about 100 scholars who had pledged to pay $1 for each paper of questions received through Krause.

Scrofula is transmitted from parent to child, and thus becomes a family inheritance for generations. It is, therefore, the duty of every scrofulous person to cleanse his blood by a thorough and persistent course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Regulating the Tariff.—Thompson (after a dubious whiff)—"Didn't you say, Brown, that these cigars were two for a quarter." Brown (puffing joyously—"Yes, I'm smoking the 20 cent one.

Jane—How is it that the gentleman always rises to give me a seat in the street car and never give you one? Can it be their respect for beauty? Mabel—Oh, no Jennie. What, then?" "Age."

One way for a man to find out how many friends he has is to put a billiard table in his house. Add a well stocked sideboard, and the number can be easily doubled.

IN THE SOUTH.

BUREAU OF SOUTHERN NEWS, Raleigh, N. C.

THE MULE.

Why should a letter, to a series of letters from the South, be devoted to the mule? Because this animal is a very large factor in the industries of the South, and because there is a large capital invested in it and means of doing business. Not from accident, hardly from choice, but because it can do work which no other animal could do, and at less cost. In its ability to do hard and difficult work, it holds a middle place between the horse and the ox. Slower than the horse and less fiery, it works in safety where a horse would soon ruin itself. Faster than an ox it will do more work in a given period of time. Hardy, long lived, easy to keep and patient under ill usage, the mule is the working animal of the South. The mule does the plowing, hauls the cotton from the field to the gin, and thence to market. It hauls the logs to the saw mill, and the lumber to the railroad; the crude turpentine to the distillery, and the refined spirits of turpentine and the rosin to the depot. It carries its owner on its back to the village store and Post office, and safely home again in the darkest night and through the most tangled woods. A farmer says he works a one horse, a two horse, or four horse farm, and the case may be, but mules do the work. A man keeps a team for general work; it is usually two mules. A man runs a single wagon for odd jobs at draying; but a mule generally draws the wagon. If a man wishes to make a long journey in a short time he will select the mule; for a mule trained to the road will travel more miles in a day and for more successive days than any horse. The writer wishing on one occasion to ride a short distance to the city and back in the shortest possible time, was put into a heavy two seated, top wagon with driver, behind a good road mule. The distance was made in very quick time; with a steady trot, up and down steep hills which would break the wind of any horse we have ever seen.

Again, as the most of the manual labor of the South is done by the negroes, it is necessary to place in their hands an animal that will not be ruined by their management. As a rule negroes are cruel to the lower animals. They shout a language which the mule understands, they scold, beat and thrash, and drive the animal straight into thickets and tangles which would pain any other animal. In fact the two animals seem made for each other. They seem to know each other, and harmonize quite as well as the whiteman and the horse. If the darkey becomes over confident and careless in the management of his co laborer, the mule is likely to call back his wandering thoughts by some unexpected evolution of muscle not laid down in the athlete's catalogue of health giving motions. If the darkey overload the mule, the mule don't pull, that is all. If the darkey seizes a young tree wherewith to persuade the mule to pull, the mule kicks. The darkey shouts, thrashes, and abuses the mule with all kinds of language; the mule looks peaceful and—kicks. This interchange of expression of esteem and affection goes on until the darkey throws off a part of the load, or puts his own shoulder to the wheel. Then the mule pulls, and the load goes, and all is lovely again. The darkey sings and whistles, and the mule meditates, not vengeance for these two companions never harbor any ill will toward each other, but on some new and effective way to educate the negro up to the proper manner of treating his friend.

When it is remembered that fifteen or twenty are needed to work a saw mill, and that saw mills are numbered by thousands throughout the South, it will be seen that the breeding of mules is not a small business. As a rule mules are not bred where they are most used. Kentucky is the great breeding State, while North Carolina and Georgia are the largest users and consumers. The owners of saw mills use the most but breed none. If a mill owner loses an animal by any cause, he starts the next day to find one; and in two days the cars bring in one or more to replace the loss. The value of a really good mule is about one hundred and twenty five dollars; of a good pair, two hundred and fifty. Horses are not held so high. And many a man in the pine woods or the cotton fields will refuse one hundred dollars for his mule, who would not accept a horse as a gift, with the condition that he be obliged to keep and use.

Some mules are very handsome. A sleek, well fed, fawn colored mule is not only a good mule but a handsome animal. One of the finest road teams we ever saw, both in appearance and speed and endurance, was a mule and a horse of a bright fawn color. The two were both handsome and they were well matched.

We have been able thus far to write some good things about the mule. We have some other things to write which the reader may consider good, bad or indifferent as he pleases. The mule is a cross between the ass kind and the horse kind. It has the ears and tail of the former; the body mainly of the horse, and disposition like what? We are reminded of a conundrum, so called, pro-

ONE KIND OF MORTGAGE.

One of the great drawbacks to successful farming is the number of weeds that farmers have to contend with. They spring up in the field, in the garden, in the door yard and by the road side, and most of them find congenial surroundings and rapidly multiply. Weeds seem to be naturally well provided for without any other aid. But it is a well known fact that year after year weeds are sown broadcast by careless farmers in the different kinds of cereals and other seeds. For instance, red clover seed above all others is the vehicle for the introduction of weeds and a knowledge of this emphasizes the necessity of clover seed being pure. Rib grass or lance leaved plantain is becoming common in clover seed and is said to be spreading all over. No one can afford to pay the price of clover seed, even when a single per cent. of any other kind of seed is mixed with it, much less when it is the vehicle of a pest like plantain. The clover and this seed are so much alike in general appearance as to pass unnoticed unless a careful scrutiny is made. Beside this, adulterations and impurities are found in turnip seed, such as mixing it with charlock, or wild mustard, and German rape. With the natural supply of weed seed always on hand and this artificial supply, there is no wonder that they are rapidly getting the mastery.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

SOUTH Leeds Conservatives will meet at Delta on April 24 to nominate a candidate for the Legislature.

SOUTH Wellington Grits have nominated Donald Guthrie, Q. C., M. P. P., for the Local Legislature.

A BILL has been introduced in the Dominion Senate providing for the legalization of standard time and the twenty-four system, in accordance with a recommendation adopted by the Washington Convention.

THE city of Louisville has declined all offers of outside assistance to sufferers by the recent terrible tornado. The mayor says the citizens are able and willing to care for their own afflicted. Louisville's future should be all right, if self reliance can make it so. Her name deserves honor among American cities.

Mr. John Notman, Queen's printer for the Ontario Legislative assembly, who who has been in ill health for some time, has resigned, and Lud K. Cameron, of London, has been appointed to succeed him. A farewell supper to Mr. Cameron was given by London friends Monday evening.

NOTWITHSTANDING the rumors, says the Empire, which have been circulated that Mr James L. Hughes would not accept the nomination recently unanimously tendered him to run for Peel, he on Saturday definitely accepted, and will go to the poll. His formal letter of acceptance will, we understand, appear in a day or two. He has called a meeting for general organization at Brampton on Saturday next at two o'clock, at which he will deliver his first address to his future constituents. The most enthusiastic feeling over his candidature prevails throughout the riding, and those who know the ability of Mr Hughes as well as the energy with which he goes into whatever he undertakes do not doubt that Peel will be one of the constituencies to bring about the collapse of the Mowat Government at the next election.

THE Mail's Montreal correspondent has this to say of Mr. Taillon, the leader of the Opposition in Quebec:—I had a long talk the other night with Mr. Taillon, leader of the Conservatives in the Quebec Legislature. Mr. Taillon has many traits in common with the Opposition leader of Ontario. Like Mr. Meredith, he is a jovial, genial, whole-souled man, zealous for his party's interests, but with none of the bitterness of a partisan. He is like Mr. Meredith, too, in being a man of high personal character and unimpeachable integrity. Even his bitterest enemies have never been able to say a word against his honor. There has been a good deal of opposition in some quarters to his leadership on the part of persons who are in favor of a more vigorous policy. There is no doubt that were Mr. Taillon a more bitter partisan he would have a better show of coping with Mr. Mercier, who is undoubtedly one of the cleverest tacticians in the country. But it is perhaps in one sense Mr. Taillon's misfortune that he is not a bitter partisan. He prefers to await the tide of events to bring him into power rather than to make use of unscrupulous means to carry him into office.

The Manitoba farmers have their seeding well under way.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Notes from the American Capital by Our own Correspondent.

The indications are that there will be a very general attempt on the part of the Republicans to amend the tariff bill when it reaches the House so as to make it conform with their home interests. There will probably be a caucus held on the measure in due time, but members who believe it will be political death to them to vote against the interest of their districts will insist upon their rights to propose amendments. The committee will have to accede to this, but they profess to be able to bring matters to such an understanding that members, after proposing their amendments and probably having them voted down, will vote for the bill practically as it is. Before the matter settles down, however, there will be a great deal of strong opposition in the House, but Republicans generally claim that a bill in some form will become a law.

The men who want free sugar will make a hard fight to have the duty all taken off. The committee will meet them with the statement that the revenues will not stand so heavy a cut; that the bill as it stands will make a reduction of about $65,000,000, and that the government cannot stand a greater reduction at this time. This reduction is possible only by ceasing to pay in millions to the sinking fund. On the other hand, the sugar men will insist on having a higher duty on sugar than the bill gives and will make a stubborn fight for it. The committee will meet their attack with the statement that the duty proposed in this bill, as deeply cut as it is, is extraordinarily high, and some significant remarks will be made about trusts. The committee will try to overcome all opposition in detail and prevent combinations to enable them to preserve the integrity of their bill and get it through the House. They do not attempt to calculate what may happen to it in the Senate; but they look to the western influence, which is strong in that decorous body, to hold the bill in shape.

The rumor has been revived that owing to illness Senator Beck, of Kentucky, would resign his position and use his influence for the election of ex-Speaker Carlisle as his successor. In the absence of any substantial evidence the reports are not credited. Unless his health becomes much worse than at present he will hardly step down. It is popularly believed that if any change should be made in the Senatorial representation from Kentucky ex Governor McCreary, the present representative from the eighth district, would be honored by a promotion from the House to the Senate. In the event, however, of ex Speaker Carlisle being called from the House to the Senate, all indications point to Judge Crisp, of Georgia, as his successor as leader of the Democratic side of the House. Judge Crisp is regarded with great favor by the Democrats, all of whom think that the next House will be democratic. A great many of them think it would be good policy to elect some one for speaker who would retaliate on the Republicans for the course pursued by Speaker Reed and endorsed by the majority. In short, if any combination of circumstances should withdraw ex Speaker Carlisle from the House, Judge Crisp would be his logical successor.

Three heavy streams of travel, above and apart from normal and usual, are converging on Washington, and the hotels are crowded. The sporting contingent is here, of course, the result of the racing season; from the south hundreds of Florida, Georgia and North Carolina excursionists and winter resortists are returning north by way of Washington, and from the north numerous parties are headed south, this far at anyrate. Numerous excursionists from all parts of the country are quartered at the various hotels, where the porters are kept active in handling the baggage. Altogether the present year promises to exceed all previous years in the number of Washington excursions.

There is no abatement of interest in the Tracy mansion, despite the fact that it is a most desolate and unprepossessing-looking spectacle, and, singular to say, women betray the most intense longing to visit the scene of the disastrous fire of a few months ago. Pilgrims from different parts of the United States do not enquire so eagerly at hotel counters as formerly concerning the route to the White House, but a majority of questions addressed to clerks are for the most direct method of reaching Secretary Tracy's burned house.

Congressman Randall's present condition is much better than it has been at any time since his illness. However, at no time during Mr. Randall's illness has he been incapacitated from giving good advice to those who would indulge in correct political practice. That the Pennsylvania Democrats fully realize the value of this advice is attested by the frequent visits made to the sick statesman.

SENTENCED TO DIE.

BELLEVILLE, April 15.—Peter Edwin Davis is sentenced to be hanged here on June 20. His trial for the murder of William Emory, a farmer of Marmora, opened in Judge Armour's court at 9 a. m. on Monday. The evidence was all in at 10:15 this morning. The judge charged the jury at 1.50, and at 2.55 they returned with a verdict of guilty. The evidence against the accused was circumstantial, but it left no doubt in the minds of the jurymen of the guilt of the accused. Mary Emory, wife of the murdered man, was tried as an accomplice, and the judge in his charge pointed to her as an accessory before the fact, but the jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

The doomed man is but 26 years of age. He has a pleasant, intelligent face, but there is that about his appearance that warns you not to rise his ire. He paid the closest attention to the evidence, but did not falter when he rose this afternoon to receive the sentence of the court. When asked by the judge, "Have you anything to say why the judgment should not be passed on you, Peter Edward Davis, for the crime with which you stand charged?" he replied, with a slight tremble of the lip, "No, nothing." The sentence of the court was then passed upon him, and he was led to the cell below.

Mrs. Emory is about 25 years of age, and has three children.

The Amaranth Council will meet at Laurel on Saturday, May 31st, as a Court of Revision, pursuant to adjournment of February 22nd.

Worth Trying.

Do not be discouraged because other remedies have failed you. Mr. Hugh Ryan says—For Cold in the Head and Catarrh, Nasal Balsam is the best remedy I ever tried, and I have tried many.

"THROWN ON THE WORLD."—"Thrown on the World" is the name of a story that will be commenced in THE SUN next week and continued until finished. The story is of the most interesting kind, and lovers of first class literature should not fail to read it.

TO HORSEMEN.—We are better prepared now than ever before to turn out neat, tasty horse bills. Our large and superior stock of cuts and type gives us the advantage over all competitors. Call and see us before leaving your order elsewhere. Prices right and satisfaction guaranteed.

PUBLIC SCHOOL BOARD.—The public school trustees held a special meeting on Tuesday evening for the purpose of engaging a new teacher. Mr. R. J. Potter, of Mono Mills, was engaged. About twenty applicants were after the position. Mr. Potter comes highly recommended, and will, no doubt, give entire satisfaction.

THEY STRUCK.—On Thursday afternoon the moulders employed at Gordon's foundry, Mill street, struck work. The men wanted a change made in the system of working, and because Mr. Gordon wouldn't grant their request they pursued the above mentioned course. They returned to work on Friday morning without the desired change.

QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.—The Queen's birthday falls on Saturday this year, and in several places an agitation is already on foot to postpone the formal celebration till Monday. One argument used is that it is all the same to her Majesty whether the day is observed on market day or on washing day. This is the view which the Queen and her counsellors have always taken.

KING IMPERIAL.—Riddell Bros. were fortunate in securing this celebrated fast trotting stallion, and lovers of good stock will be pleased to learn that he will remain at his own stable during the season of 1890. King Imperial was bred by George McCullough, Esq., near Port Perry; he was sired by Crown Imperial (2.27¼); dam, Chestnut Doll; stands 15¾ hands high, and weighs 1156 pounds. Terms, to insure, $12.

EXAMINE YOUR MONEY.—Our readers are advised to examine very carefully their "pile" of bank notes, and if they find any on the following banks, viz., the Royal Canadian, City Bank, or Consolidated Bank, to present them for payment in Montreal not later than May 7th, as that is the last day for redemption; after that date they are worthless. The local banks will, we believe, accept these notes up till the 5th of May.

THE DUFFERIN REPUBLICANS.—A meeting of Harrison supporters was held in Councillor Ketchum's establishment last Thursday evening to reorganize the Dufferin harrison club for 1890. The attendance was not as large as was expected. The treasurer's report was submitted and showed a small balance of cash on hand. The following officials were elected:—

Hon. President.....Mayor Walsh
Hon. Vice-President.....Marshall Green
President.....John Ketchum
1st Vice-President.....A. J. S. Tomlinson
2nd Vice-President.....C. F. Bearman
Secretary.....S. Marsh
Treasurer.....W. Kearns
Field Captain.....H. Gillespie
Committee—T. H. Henry, John Thompson, H. Ketchum.

A DISGRACEFUL AFFAIR.—Last Thursday evening (Saturday) a disgraceful row occurred on east Broadway. Several farmers from Mono and adjoining townships took too much bad whiskey during the day, and towards evening they were in capital condition to create a disturbance. There was no genuine fighting, however, but only loud talk and excessive cursing. Chief Shields appeared on the scene shortly after the commencement, but his presence did not seem to have the desired effect. The boisterous crowd had away for about two hours. One of them told our reporter that he would have made several arrests had there been a special constable to assist him.

METHODIST Y.P.A.—Next Tuesday evening the Young People's Association of the Methodist church will render the following programme:

POLICE COURT.—Angus MacKenzie, a young farmer from Lucknow, had Mr. W. J. Gilkinson and his son, William, up at Tuesday's police court, on a charge of assault. It appears Mr. Gilkinson bought a horse some time ago, and later on MacKenzie paid $500 for a half interest in the animal. The stallion was quartered at the Commercial hotel stables, and on Monday last MacKenzie came to town with the intention of changing the horse's stables. He did not make known his intentions to Mr. Gilkinson, however, but employed strategy in attempting to accomplish his designs. He brought a friend to the stable on the pretext of buying the animal, which Mr. G. happened to be cleaning at the time, and took it out to show what a fine horse it was. After MacKenzie had led the animal out into the yard, he told G. what he intended to do, and then two or three on each side ran and caught the horse by the head. The bridle was cut and the horse ran back to the stable. Mayor Walsh and P. M. Pattullo, who sat on the case, imposed a fine of $10 and costs on the father and $2 and costs on the son. The parties concerned arranged matters and dissolved partnership.

PERSONAL.

Mayor Walsh and Elgin Myers, Q.C., paid Toronto a professional visit last week.

Mrs. Thompson, of Arthur, spent a few days with her many friends in town this week.

Mr. Alex. McLachlan, of Amaranth Station, the famous Canadian poet, was the guest of Mr. C. J. Wheelock this week.

Miss Katie Barlow, of Petoskey, Mich., is visiting friends in town.

Mr. John McCormack is home on a visit from Chicago.

Mr. J. A. Leighton returned to Trinity College, Toronto, on Monday.

Mr. W. W. Ruthven, of Montreal, the Bank of Commerce new manager, has arrived in town.

SHELBURNE.

The Citizens' band attended St Paul's church on Easter Sunday.

Henry Besley has sold his brick block on Main street to E. F. Bowes for $2,100.

The Dufferin Teachers' Association will hold their annual meeting here on the 24th inst.

It is said that Roger Smith, formerly a resident of Melancthon, has been killed in a railroad accident in Michigan.

Mrs. (Rev.) T. J. McClelland was a delegate to the Women's Foreign Missionary Society at Hamilton last week.

Robert Fife, of Amaranth, had several of his toes crushed with a horse-power the other day. Dr. Norton found it necessary to amputate four of them.

Editor W. L. Smith's family circle is growing. On Friday, April 4, his better half presented him with a bouncing baby boy. Tally one for the Economist.

The people around here were very sorry to hear of the death of Miss Jennie Graham, daughter of Colwell Graham, of Primrose, which sad event occurred on Tuesday of last week. She was engaged on the staff of nurses at the hospital for sick children, Toronto, for the past eighteen months, and was well liked by everybody in connection with the institution. The deceased lady had been in Shelburne about three weeks ago. The funeral took place on Thursday last to the Presbyterian burying-ground, Centre road, Mulmur, and was largely attended.

WITH THE HORSEMEN

A Sun Tourist Takes a Trip Through the Trotting Stables in Town.

Several Big Fast Steppers and Some Speedy Stallions—This Season's Splendid Showing.

A tour among the local horsemen on Tuesday afternoon developed the information that the quantity and quality, speed, style and stability of the horseflesh owned in town this spring is very much in advance of the showing of previous years.

Mr. John Witter's removal to Shelburne leaves a large-sized gap in the ranks of Orangeville's sporting men, but as he and his chestnut pacing mare are still within the county limits he can scarcely be mourned as one dead, or even missing, judging by the regularity with which he turns up in the old town. It is rumored that he has entered his brown filly (by Terror) for the Queen's Plate. If this is true, it is truly a terror.

Mr. Hank Crozier, of the Queen's, is the proud owner of the far-famed trotting stallion Crown Imperial, record 2.27¼, and until quite recently he also owned Jim Mitchell. About ten days ago he gave the great James to Massey & Noble, of Owen Sound, in return for easy-going Billy Go Easy, who has done his mile in 2.36, and is so recorded. A pair of greys in this stable are being well groomed, and look quite gay and glossy out on the roads.

Messrs. Harry and Joseph Riddell have recently purchased King Imperial, a son and heir of the great Crown Imp. King Imperial is graceful in action and a beauty in appearance. He is destined to win fame and shekels for his lucky owners. The brothers drew a prize when they secured King Imperial. Harry also owns a fine chest filly, sired by Billy Patterson; dam, Lady Morgan.

Mr John Gilkinson owns a quartette of grand stallions. Antrim is an Irish hunter, and was imported by Mr. G. last spring. Defiance is well known throughout the province; he is a handsome coal-black and has a record of 2.39. Faugh-a Ballagh is a 2-year old Irish thoroughbred, also imported, in color a beautiful chestnut. It would be hard to find his equal this side of the sea. Lichnagar is a recently imported heavy draught stallion, unexcelled in his class. Mr. Gilkinson has met with some mishaps in handling horses, but it is hoped that he is now in a fair way to realize on his investments.

Mr. R. T. Haun's pair of chestnut cobs are neat and nobby, and almost any day Tom and Dolly may be seen spinning along at a lively pace.

Dr. Lewis cuts a wide swarth with his bay and gray. They are both mares and were sired by Forest Membrino. The doctor can remain longer with a sick man and get home earlier than any other M.D. in the county—the only trouble is, these time-exhibitators are too fashionably bred for night driving over corduroy roads in Amaranth and Mono, but when his patients all recover, or die, he intends to fit them up and smash the team record for fast and furious double action, and he'll do it or break an axle. The doctor also has a chestnut mare, by Clear Grit, in foal to Crown Imperial.

Mr. W. Johnston's steppers were sired one by Telephone and one by Clear Grit. Tney are attractive, spirited but gentle, and on the road generally keep well to the front.

Mr. Dalton McCarthy drives a chestnut mare, by Tom Jefferson, and is the owner of Maid, formerly the property of John Witter. Maid is now 26 years of age and in her day was a true hearted lady. She is being well cared for, and is entitled to the best in the bin. Mr. M.'s little Fairy is in foal to Disturbance.

Mr. C. W. Sydie has a 3 year old side-wheeler that can beat any boat on the Erie canal, and it is "Farwell, Brother Watkins," when she goes over the divide. Her gait is a garden gate, and it is the gate-post she likes to pass about feeding time. There are many pacers thought less of that are not so fast as Sydie's sorrel.

Dr. Smith's Cleopatra is a black mare that may yet develop good speed. The doctor has great confidence in Cleopatra, and he probably has good grounds for his suspicions.

Mr. James Bennett, has a bay gelding, by Watchman, rising 2 years, that gives promise of fine work in the near future.

Mr. Maitland Stewart (Col. Dime) has the longest string of horse in town. He has no less than eight of them, and they are all fine stock, neat and clean of limb, gentle in disposition, stylish in movement and by no means slow on the road—those of them that have been broken to harness. The Colonel drives the best matched team in the town, Lass and Maid. They are full sisters, and can scarcely be distinguished one from the other. Lass took first place in the green trot at the fair here last fall, and, with a mate, came out ahead for speed, style and general excellence at Charleston and Grand Valley fairs the same year. He has, also, a finely matched pair of 3 year old chestnuts, a 2 year-old chestnut filly and a yearling bay. The dam of this brood of beauties is now in foal to Disturbance.

Mr W. B. Kent's Dan can pace a mile in most any time, and is a stayer where there is work to be done.

Mr. J. C. Fox has a very handsome brown mare, by Terror. He calls her Nellie By, and she is good for a trip around the world in eighty days.

Mr. J. S. Faus's bay mare, by Hambletonian Tippo, is good stock and a fancy driver.

Mr. John Irving, of the Dufferin house, has a Crown Imperial brown gelding that he values highly. It is a high-flyer, and with John and the yellow-wheeled sulky can mill pretty close to the 2 minute limit.

Mr. J. S. Tomlinson, the sporting alderman, is a great lover of good horseflesh. He has a side wheeler in the side of his barn, and she can do a mile inside of time, or eternity. She is by Twig, and John twigs that she will make the dust fly, sailor fly or shoo fly. His well known bay mare, Annie D., is in foal to Crown Imperial.

A. Collier has a fine chestnut gelding, called Snow Flake or Steps Clock. Some years since this pale faced veteran took first place at a hack at the Caledon fair, and it is said Mr. C. intends to enter him for the world's fair at Chicago in '93.

There are some other good roadsters and saddle horses in town, and at another time THE SUN will take a bird's-eye view of the choicest of the lot.

The formation of a Driving Park Association is being agitated, with every prospect of success, and it is altogether likely that the track on the show grounds will be put into good condition and a grand meeting arranged for the coming summer.

MELANCTHON STATION.

While looking over a copy of THE SUN I noticed, to my great surprise, that you were without a correspondent here, and knowing that an enterprising village like ours should be represented in a fine newspaper like THE SUN, I will, with your permission, offer myself for the office, and will try and give all items of news that will be of interest to your readers.

Mrs. John Sanderson is just recovering from a severe attack of malarial fever.

Mrs. James Sloan has had an attack of pleurisy, but under the skillful treatment of Dr. Norton is improving.

Mrs. Ed. West, of Cleveland, Ohio, is visiting at her father's, Mr. Wm. Bell.

Mr. John Wilson, of the back line, lost a valuable mare and colt the other day. This is a very heavy loss to Mr. Wilson, as he is not in a very strong position financially.

Mr. James Sawdon is the possessor of a pair of twin calves. Next!

Sugar making is the order of the day—and night, as well, but the production is not so plentiful as in former years.

The farmers are welcoming spring and fine weather to dry up the roads.

Fall wheat and clover in this vicinity has a poor chance owing to the scarcity of snow last winter, and the severe spring frosts.

CARDWELL.

Young Jack Fleming has removed to Parkdale.

Mr. W. E. Hall sold a draft horse to T. Essery, of Orangeville, for the sum of $150.

A great wood bee was held at Mr. Thomas Duke's on Tuesday week. Wes. McMaster and Jim Rusk furnished the music for the dance in the evening. Mr. John Bracken was the caller off. Best yet!

We were very much amused when we read the Coulterville news in your spicy paper a couple of weeks ago. We want your Coulterville friends to understand that Cardwell has more hand some girls than poor little Coulterville or any other hamlet twice its size. Please note the fact.

The quarries near Cardwell are beginning to boom. Quite a large amount of stone is being taken out of Nichol son's, and the Owen Sound Co.'s premises are getting into shape. A large staff of men are erecting derricks, engines, etc. Property has risen in price around here in consequence.

Dick Faloon, of Coulterville, has the contract for building the lime kiln on Limestoneview farm.

Mrs. Martha Gulley, of East Garafraxa, is visiting friends around here.

Our football club will be organized shortly. The boys are in excellent spirits, and intend to do up all the clubs around here.

Mr. Hugh Bracken purchased a very valuable coach horse the other day from Mr. James Coulter, of Coulterville. The price, we believe, was in the neighborhood of $200.

ALTON.

Mr. John McLellan has removed to West Toronto Junction.

Mr. Bert Rowcliffe has returned from his visit to Detroit.

The mills are all going again, except the lower flour-mill, and business is getting brisk.

Mr. Henry Newman sold a valuable mare to Mr. H. Madill the other day. One hundred and twenty-five dollars was the price paid.

Mr. B. Ward's mill-dam, which was partially flooded away a short time ago, has been temporarily repaired. The loss this time is $150.

SKIPPED.—One of the two weddings which should have taken place here on Monday did not come off. The reason for this was that the prospective bridegroom mysteriously left town and has also left the proprietor of the Dixie house in the "hole" for several weeks' board. His intended is patiently waiting for his return.

HAPPY NUPTIALS.—A very pleasing event occurred at St. Peter's church, Orangeville, on Monday of this week, in being the occasion of the marriage of Mr. Ed. O'Hearn, of Black River, Mich., to Miss Annie Dunn of this village. Rev. Father Morris performed the ceremony. The happy couple are spending a few days here, before their departure to their new home at Black River. The young couple has our best wishes.

[We would like to have a good, regular correspondent at Alton. Write us for terms.]

The Salvation Army has disbanded at Brantford.

GRAND VALLEY.

The local creamery is in full swing.

A valuable brood mare, owned by Mr. Scott, of Scottsville, died the other day.

Mr. H. J. Speers, V.S., of this place, has now of Uncle Jim, recovered and certified up his horse for Underwriter, Jim. He left for Owen Sound last Saturday, where he will put things in shape.

On Saturday week the West Garafraxa council met in the district for making drains through the township. The work was let to Mr. T. F. Reid, of Orangeville, and a third to A. McCallister to Abraham Cantelon, and a third to A. McCallister. The council were unanimous in appointing the money for the drains to contractors under the Ditches and Watercourses Act, at 4 per cent.

MELVILLE.

A good many of the farmers have started ploughing.

Mr. Alfred Shaw, who resides on the 10th, purchased a genuine heavy stallion from a Toronto man for $[illegible]

Mr. James Torrence, of the 1st line, recently sold two fat cattle in Orangeville for $117.

Mr. James Johnston will shortly commence making extensive improvements on his farm. He intends to raise a full house and twenty feet more in the barn, and convert it into a bank barn. Armstrong will look after the frame.

Mr. J. S. Ford has rented the Wood farm, which he bought a short time ago, to Wesley Maxwell. The rent is $200 a year.

Mr. John Dawson, of the Centre line, had a wood bee on Friday after the last snowfall. About twenty five cords were cut and drawn to the house. The bee took place in the evening, and was a very enjoyable time was spent by the twenty-five couple who were in attendance.

Our footballers are beginning to think that it is time to reorganize. The boys would like to play the first game with Cardwell, to even up old scores. We are going to have the champion club here this season.

Framer Ed Armstrong is at present engaged repairing Mr. Robert Cochran's barn, which was partly blown down by the great storm that swept this section last winter.

COULTERVILLE.

Business is booming around here. The agriculturists have begun their spring work.

A CONFLAGRATION AVERTED.—Waterloo little borough was nearly the scene of a serious conflagration one day last week. A spark from a chimney had ignited J. Coulter's agricultural building, but thanks to the prompt action of the men in charge of the steam fire engine, it was turned out a municipal catastrophe was averted.

Mr. James Falstead occupied the pulpit in the town hall at Glen Cross last Sunday.

Excitement reigned supreme here on Friday night. A white horse was seen bearing a stalwart man within the limits of our hamlet. About 9 o'clock the municipal representative from Caledon called at the residence of Mr. Jas. Coulter and asked for a night's lodging. The appearance of the man frightened the lady of the house so badly that she ran swiftly to a neighbor's, and when their assistance the alcoholic embarrassed man was unceremoniously ejected from a bed at another house near.

The notorious Jack Hadden has returned from Muskoka.

Superintendent Dick Faloon has commenced the erection of Mr. D. [illegible] barn.

Some of the councillors should visit the Hockley road, opposite Cardwell's mill pond. The water from the pond overflows this portion of the road and it has to be repaired two or three times a year. The difficulty might be overcome by not letting the water flow this otherwise excellent road.

COLLINS' ANNUAL BALL.—Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Collins gave their annual ball on Wednesday night of last week, and a grand affair it was. Messrs. Coulter and George Bagnell held the musical part of the programme to perfection, and Mr. Sam Matthews, the sonorous tones, officiated as floor manager. The boys think Sam's lung power a little too strong for the ordinary entertainment. Everything went off in the most happy manner, with the exception of a little misunderstanding between two of the touch. Archy thought they should have been put out.

CREDIT FORKS.

Mr. George Bruce is home again visiting friends at Palgrave.

Miss McTaggert, of Belfountain, is for an extensive visit to Toronto.

The roads are drying up so that people visiting our town will be safe from being in a buggy without the boat attached.

Our public school is to have a chimney. Mr. R. Puckering is doing the work.

Jimmy Todd has arrived once more but has failed to strike a job.

We hear that Mr. F. McKenna intends erecting a fountain erected near the C. P. R. station, Cataract, where all those who are thirsty can partake of Adam's ale free of cost.

Mr. Algie sold his beautiful residence, situated on First avenue, Orangeville, to Stone Point, for the small sum of $[illegible] to Mr. Mason.

All the men employed in what is known as Brock's quarry, near Belfountain, went out on strike on Tuesday. Non-payment of wages is what they complain of.

Mr. T. Davis, who for the past year has been seriously ill, is slowly regaining his usual good health.

We sincerely hope that the "Lambs" will not eat McLaren's four six weeks old brute has refused to masticate

GRAND VALLEY.

The latest manufactory in the village is a bee-hive factory.

A valuable brood mare, owned by H. Hill, of Montcalm, died the other day.

Last week H. J. Speers, V.S., formerly of this place, but now of Coldwater, returned and settled up his accounts. He left for Coldwater just as soon as he got things in shape.

On Saturday week the West Luther council let the contract for making several drains through the township. One contract was let to Mr. T. E. Reid for $1300; another to Abraham Cann for $650, and a third to A. McKinney for $530. The council were successful in securing the money for payment to contractors under the Grange Aid Act at 4 per cent.

The members of Credit Forks lodge No. 303, A.O.U.W., will hold an open meeting to-night, in their hall, for the purpose of presenting Mrs Beatty Glover with $2,000, the amount of her late husband's beneficiary in that order.

The village of Brimstone is in an uproar over the unusual treatment of a father, who is in the habit of putting a handkerchief around his children's necks and strangling them while applying the rod of correction. It is high time the humane authorities' attention was directed to this case so as to prevent repetitions of such inhuman conduct.

"JIMMY" WALDRON.

He Rag-Picker Goes Over With the Greater Majority.

One of the queerest and most eccentric of Irishmen died on Saturday last in the person of James Waldron. He would have been a fitting subject for one of Will Carleton's characters. Jimmy, as every one called him, was for years a rag-peddler, going about the country exchanging tins for rags and sheepskins. He was known to every housewife for miles around, and out in the country he was a famous individual. Many the half hour the women folk spent badgering and dickering in trade for tins and listening to Jimmy's querulous talk of current events. Jimmy had a great faculty for making wills, and one of his keenest enjoyments was to hoodwink parties endeavoring to secure his favor by the promise that they would be remembered in the will. Scores of people he fed on anticipations, all the time deriving his pleasure by the evident avidity with which they swallowed his nonsense. For several years back he has been on the point of dropping off, but with his usual contrariousness he fooled priest, lawyer and legatee, from time to time, and at last Death claimed him when his arrival was received by the one person who had clung to him through good and evil, his wife, as much a character in her way as he was. Notwithstanding Jimmy's peculiarities he had a grand eye to the main chance, and when he died was worth upwards of $10,000. By his last will he left his widow $200 per year and the use of the real estate during life time. After the old lady's death the estate is divided as follows: $2,500 each to a sister and brother in Ireland; to Jerry Ryan, four acres and his late residence, in consideration of Jerry paying $700 to the estate; building fund of Catholic church, Brampton, $200; orphanage, Toronto, $70; Presbyterian church, $10; to Thomas Ingoldsby, one of the executors, six acres of the homestead, conditional on his paying $7 per year to the Catholic church; that portion of the estate remaining after above division is left in trust of above mentioned executor, to be applied to aiding the worthy poor of Brampton, irrespective of creed. This should provide a charity fund of $150 per year, which will go a long way toward showing the hidden bright side to the character of queer Jimmy Waldron.—Brampton Banner.

MURDEROUS ASSAULT.

CHESLEY, Ont., April 15.—John Schohn, hotel keeper, of this village, and his son, about 25 years of age, were tried here to day before a bench of magistrates on a charge of assault, and committed to stand their trial at the next assizes. The circumstances of the case are as follows:—On the 7th inst James McFarlane, a shoemaker from Paisley, got into a dispute with young Schohn about his hotel bill. Words led to blows, and the father coming to young Schohn's assistance, McFarlane, after receiving very rough treatment, was ejected from the house. He proceeded to a blacksmith shop near by, where for some time he lay in agony. He started for his home in Paisley, but had to return to Chesley, where he put up at the Windsor hotel. There he remained suffering greatly until Thursday night, when he died. A coroner's inquest was held on Friday, and the jury bringing in a verdict of acquittal. There was a general disapproval of the verdict, and proceedings were at once instituted on the charge already specified. Bail has been accepted in $2,000 for the old man and $500 for his son.

SENT BACK TO CANADA.

NIAGARA FALLS, April 14.—Four Chinamen, among whom was Man Lee of Toronto, who have been trying to get into the United States at Windsor and other points, tried to get through here Tuesday morning by concealing themselves in a closet of the train. They were detected and sent back. After dark they were driven in a hack to Chippewa by a hackman who contracted to land them across the river for $30. At Chippewa a boat was procured and the four Chinamen were rowed to La Salle, N. Y. One of them fell out of the boat near the shore, but was rescued. Special Officer Lewis, who was watching for them, arrested them and sent them across the bridge yesterday. At the other end of the Canadian officers stopped them, and for a time it seemed as if there was no place on earth for the poor Celestials, but they were finally permitted to re enter Canada upon producing Canadian customs certificates.

PACKED IN A BARREL OF LIME

A Man Murdered in Denmark and the Body Shipped to New York.

NEW YORK, April 14.—The body of a man was found in a barrel of lime at the custom house to day. It is believed to be the body of one Meyer, a clerk of a soap manufacturer of Copenhagen, named Phillipsen, who was arrested for insurance frauds, and who confessed to strangling Meyer and sending the body in a packing case to this country. The cask was shipped from Copenhagen January 13, and the charges were paid by a Mr Smith. It was consigned to "Bresford Brothers," Racine, Wis., U.S.A. The cask arrived here Feb 4, and was sent to the appraiser's stores. It was there examined by taking out the head of the cask, scraping off a pound or so of the contents, which looked like plaster of paris, and then re-headed and set aside until it should be called for. Duty was fixed at $25, which an express company paid. The express company wrote to the Racine firm, and learned that the name was fictitious. The case was cleared up when it was learned from a cable despatch that a man named Phillipsen was arrested in Hamburg, and made a confession that he had murdered Meyer, the messenger of a factory in Copenhagen, and had shipped the body of his victim to New York in a cask. The body is still in a good state of preservation, and is that of a large-built man.

How Dyspepsia Is Cured.

I suffered from dyspepsia, and was weak and miserable with what the doctor said was nervous debility. Seeing Burdock Blood Bitters advertised I tried it, and after taking three bottles feel perfectly restored to health. MRS. S. H. SYKES, Kleinburg, Ont.

A little five year old son of John W. Hitchcock, of Massena, died Tuesday from injuries received by falling into a pot of boiling syrup.

A perfect specific—Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

The Re-distribution bill of the British Columbia Government, provides for the increase in representation in the Legislature to 33 members.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

It is proposed to erect a monument in memory of Dr. Cronin in Chicago.

Five thousand men employed on the Birkenhead docks struck on Monday.

Fifty-nine cases of measles are reported in Hamilton.

A. R. Cameron, the head miller of the Carberry mills, had both hands and arms ground to a pulp Monday morning.

Windsor and Kingston are said to be the favorite points for smuggling Chinamen into the United States.

Lottie Marlatt, a six year old child in Brantford, swallowed a small square of paint and it killed her.

The Quebec Conservatives are determined to put a candidate in every constituency for the coming elections.

The homeliest thing on earth is not the homeliest man, but the man who is just homely enough to think he is pretty.

The murdered man found in the canal at Dunsville in November, 1883, has been identified as Mr. David Lawrie of Toronto.

Hamilton city is to have electric street cars. St. Catherines has had the system in operation for five years, and is in said to work well there.

Mr. Donald Guthrie, Q.C., was unanimously selected by the Reform Convention held in Guelph on Saturday to contest South Wellington at the next local elections.

While driving home from Virden on Saturday in an intoxicated state, a farmer named Connelly, fell under the wheels and received injuries from which he will probably die.

George Follett, the M. C. R. brakeman, who was run over by a train at Brownsville, Thursday evening, and had a leg cut off above the knee, died in the hospital at St. Thomas Sunday morning. He was 17 years of age.

About nine years ago, Mrs. Wm. Evans, of Keppel township, by some means lost a valuable ring, for which search was made, but all proved of no avail. Last fall while cleaning some carrots that had been planted near the door, she saw a black mark around one of the carrots, which upon closer inspection proved to be the lost ring.

Coming Events.

Coming consumption is foreshadowed by a hacking cough, night sweats, pain in the chest, etc. Arrest its progress at once by taking Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, which never fails to cure coughs, colds, bronchitis, hoarseness, etc., and even in confirmed consumption affords grateful relief.

At Belleville on Monday Peter Davis was found guilty of the murder of Wm. Emroy in Marmora, and was sentenced to be hanged on June 20. Mrs. Emroy was acquitted. Blondin, a school teacher, was sentenced to 23 months in the Central Prison for an offence against the Charlton Act.

A number of sportsmen in Hamilton, who deplore the scarcity of quail in that vicinity, have determined to stock several farms about Hamilton with these birds. Some time ago an order was placed in Chicago for 50 dozen brace of quail, and the first consignment of 12 dozen brace lately arrived. They were liberated on half a dozen farms near the city. Every effort will be made to protect these birds from the ravages of the pot hunters and to prevent their being shot out of season.

Mr Wm. Duxbury claims $90 damages from Erin township council, to recover the loss recently sustained to his furniture destroyed on the 9th line, Erin. Mr. Duxbury was removing his household effects from Inglewood to Erin, and some distance from the village the road is somewhat narrow and graded to the height of four feet without the railing on either side. The load being high and the road icy the contents were precipitated to the side of the embankment. The council viewed the scene on Saturday and have not yet given decision.

Ira D. Barrows, reeve of Maryboro', while leading a bull from the yard into the stable on Wednesday afternoon was attacked by the animal. The brute pitched Mr Barrows up with its horn, and then made a lunge at him, fracturing one of his ribs and severely bruising his whole side. He is under medical treatment, and it may be some time before he is able to be around. That he was not killed on the spot, however, is the wonder of all.—Fergus News-Record.

On Monday afternoon last a cow belonging to Mr J. A. Aitken ended her days by breaking her own neck. The animal had been stabbed during the winter months, and the owner letting her out frisked till opposite Mr John Moore's residence, when in trying to turn a somersault, happened with the above accident. A jury was empanelled and the verdict returned that "death was caused through her own negligence, in not taking proper precaution."—Alliston Herald.

A prominent Trafalgar farmer recently used "Rough on Rats" poison around his outbuildings extensively for the purpose of destroying a few little sparrows which had taken possession of his barn and housetop. The high winds blew the poison upon the ground, and one morning he was horrified, upon going out to the barn yard to find his highly prized turkeys, geese, and other fowl lying dead. This ought to be a warning to people not to deal with deadly poison in such a reckless fashion as some of them do.

A Cure For Rheumatism.

I CAN recommend Hagyard's Yellow Oil as a sure cure for rheumatism. I had it for some time, and was cured by using part of one bottle. I can also recommend it for chilblains, burns, frostbites, sprains, bruises, etc. Max H. Procopovick, Olga Almond, Que.

THE BENWELL MURDER.—Reginald Burchell at present in jail at Woodstock, charged with the murder of Fredrick Cornelius Benwell, near Princetown, Wednesday at Osgood Hall before Chief Justice Galt by his counsel, moved for an order to commit R. G. Wilkie and Kate E. Westlake, proprietor and editor of a city weekly, for contempt of court in advertising and intending to publish a story which it was claimed would prejudicially affect Burchell's interests. After argument by counsel the learned judge made a mandatory order prohibiting the newspaper from publishing either the advertisement or the story.

A LESSON FROM APAR.—Having taught the men how to govern the city properly, the women of Oskaloosa, Kan., have withdrawn from municipal politics. Under the "petticoat government" of last year the civic debt was wiped out and a surplus established, the streets were put in good shape, and the morals of the city generally improved. Having accomplished these excellent results, the women have this year allowed the men to resume the reign of government, and the latter will now have an opportunity of showing whether they have profited by the good example set them.

STRUCK BY THE ERIE FLYER.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., April 14.—About 5.30 this evening when the G. T. R. Erie flyer was coming into the west end yard she struck a tramp walking on the end of the ties, throwing him into the ditch, badly breaking his right arm and the railway authorities handed him over to the police. He gave his name as William Trodes, of Glasgow, Scotland.

Living in a Fool's Paradise.

Many neglect slight symptoms of disease, hoping that nature will restore health. True nature will aid, but she must also be aided by using Burdock Blood Bitters, from 1 to 2 bottles of which is sufficient to cure any ordinary case of impure blood, constipation, dyspepsia, liver complaint, kidney complaint, debility, etc.

Peter Davis and Martha Emery were placed on trial Monday at Belleville on the charge of murdering the latter's husband.

CATARRH AND COLD IN HEAD HOW CURED

NASAL BALM CURES

CATARRH

NASAL BALM.

A certain and speedy cure for Cold in the Head and Catarrh in all its stages.

SOOTHING, CLEANSING, HEALING.

Instant Relief, Permanent Cure. Failure Impossible.

Many so-called diseases are simply symptoms of Catarrh, such as headache, partial deafness, loss of smell, foul breath, snuffing and spitting, nausea, general feeling of debility, etc. If you are troubled with any of these or kindred symptoms, you have Catarrh, and should lose no time in procuring a bottle of NASAL BALM. Experience has proved that neglected cold in head results in Catarrh, followed by consumption and death. NASAL BALM is sold by all druggists, or will be sent, post paid, on receipt of price (50 cents and $1.00) by addressing

FULFORD & CO., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

Beware of imitations similar in name.

A dog died in Philadelphia the other day. His carcass was put in a metal-lined, silver mounted mahogany coffin, carried to the cemetery to a hearse and interred with solemn ceremonial. The ancient Egyptian who worshipped a bull would take paternity to some phase of nineteenth century development in America.

Left a Legacy.

LAST winter left a legacy of impure blood to many people, causing tired feelings, lack of vigor, indigestion, constipation, biliousness, etc. From 1 to 4 bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters never fails to cure any of the foregoing diseases by unlocking the secretions and removing all impurities from the blood.

Sir Provo Wallis, a native of Nova Scotia, has entered on his hundredth year.

Long-Standing

Blood Diseases are cured by the persevering use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

This medicine is an Alterative, and causes a radical change in the system. The process, in some cases, may not be quite so rapid as in others; but, with persistence, the result is certain. Read these testimonials:—

"For two years I suffered from a severe pain in my right side, and had other troubles caused by a torpid liver and dyspepsia. After giving several medicines a fair trial without a cure, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was greatly benefited by the first bottle, and after taking five bottles I was completely cured."—John W. Benson, 70 Lawrence st., Lowell, Mass.

Last May a large carbuncle broke out on my arm. The usual remedies had no effect and I was confined to my bed for eight weeks. A friend induced me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Less than three bottles healed the sore. In all my experience with medicine, I never saw more

Wonderful Results.

Another marked effect of the use of this medicine was the strengthening of my sight."—Mrs. Carrie Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

"I had a dry scaly humor for years, and suffered terribly; and, as my brother and sister were similarly afflicted, I presume the malady is hereditary. Last winter, Dr. Tyron, (of Fernandina, Fla.) recommended me to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and continue it for a year. For five months I took it daily. I have not had a blemish upon my body for the last three months."—T. E. Wiley, 146 Chambers st., New York City.

"Last fall and winter I was troubled with a dull, heavy pain in my side. I did not notice it much at first, but it gradually grew worse until it became almost unbearable. During the latter part of this time, disorders of the stomach and liver increased my troubles. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after faithfully continuing the use of this medicine for some months, the pain disappeared and I was completely cured."—Mrs. Augusta A. Furbush, Haverhill, Mass.

A DANGER SIGNAL!

A Cold in the Head may be aptly termed a danger signal warning you that if neglected that dangerous and disagreeable disease, Catarrh, is sure to follow, perhaps leading to Consumption and the grave. At no season of the year is Cold in the Head more prevalent than during the Spring months, and at no other season do the people of this country suffer more generally from Catarrh, with all its disagreeable and annoying effects. Do not for an instant neglect either of these troubles, but apply NASAL BALM, the only remedy that will give instant relief and effect a thorough cure. The following testimonials from among thousands in our possession bear witness to its sterling merit.

Alex. Burns, Sudbury, Ont., says: I may state that I have been affected with Catarrh seven or eight years, and it was attended by consequent symptoms such as foul breath, constant dropping into the throat, hawking and spitting, partial deafness, ringing in the ears and sickening pains in the head directly over either eye. I have used powders and douches, but all to no effect, the only result arising from the use of such was temporary relief, followed by the usual symptoms in a more aggravated form. The results arising from the use of Nasal Balm: Sweet breath, stoppage of the dropings into the throat, (consequently less hawking and spitting), clearness of hearing, and not once since I began its use have I had pain in the head. In fact, it is my opinion that a careful and persistent use of the Balm will effect a cure in the worst case of catarrh.

T. D. D. Loyd, 8 Clarence street Toronto says: I wish here to testify to the unequalled healing powers of your Nasal Balm. I have been troubled for three years by what the doctors call post nasal catarrh, and have tried everything in the city that could be obtained, in the shape of catarrh cures, and found no permanent relief from any of them, till a friend one day advised me to try your Nasal Balm, and I find that even one bottle has done me more good than all the medicines put together that I have persecuted myself with before. I was very much troubled with spitting and hawking, especially in the morning, so much so that my throat was continually in a raw condition, but I am now beginning to know what it is to be able to spit freely. I shall not fail to recommend it to any of my friends suffering from the like disease.

NASAL BALM

INSTANTLY RELIEVES

Cold in Head.

A. W. Mallory, Mallorytown, Ont., says: My daughter suffered for years from a most distressing and annoying Catarrh. Her cause was under the treatment of eminent physicians in the United States and Canada. Two months use of Nasal Balm has had more beneficial effects than all former treatment combined.

L. D. Dion, Dept. Railways and Canals, Ottawa, says: I am very glad to give you to-day the testimony that Nasal Balm has completely cured my catarrh, from which I suffered for nearly three years.

NASAL BALM

POSITIVELY CURES

CATARRH.

D. Derbyshire, Mayor of Brockville and President of the Ontario Creamery Association, says: Nasal Balm beats the world for Catarrh and Cold in the Head. In my own case it effected relief from the first application.

Isaac Waterman, Imperial Oil Co'y, Petrolia, Ont., says: Nasal Balm gave me the most perfect satisfaction of any medicine I ever used for Cold in the Head. I found it easy to use, quick in giving relief and effect a complete cure in a couple of hours.

If Nasal Balm is not kept in stock by your dealer it will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 Cent for small and $1 for large size bottles) by addressing pounded in us in our youth. "What is most like a half a cheese?" Ans. The other half. What is most like a mule? Another mule. Is the former case we fail to see any real conundrum. But in the latter case the mule is the conundrum. There is a saying among the people of the South that once upon a time the Devil and mankind put their heads together, to produce an animal unlike all others; and at the same time, something which could not freeze out the investors by taking the business of making into its own hands. The result was a mule; a grand success. It cannot reproduce its kind, and it is like nothing in the heavens above, in the earth beneath, or in the waters under the earth.

We are reminded of the small boy's composition on the horse. "The horse is an animal with four legs, one at each corner and fans itself with its ears. A definition of a mule about as minute as it is safe to give. It is unlike all other animals; and as the darkey said "You never know what a mule will do till it is dead." It delights in unique surprises, with an expression of satisfaction as calm and placid as a summer's moon. My neighbor owns a mule fifteen years old. Her personal appearance is a good deal like a tramp's overcoat. She is slower than the days counted by the prisoner of Chillon. A short journey behind her reminds one of a six months night at the poles. And yet, turn her out to browse, and try to catch her before she is ready. She'll bid you a hurried good bye and jump a five foot fence without touching it. My lady wishes to go to the village store and Post office. All the animals available being in more important use, a mule is borrowed. "Is your mule gentle?" "Yes, gentle as a lamb." "Does he ever kick?" "No, he never was known to kick." The beast is harnessed and my lady mounts the wagon together with the young man who is to drive. The young man says "Get up." The mule gets up, but only at one end; and that the end nearest the wagon. The unexpected had happened, and at the next trial both ends moved in serene harmony.

We once tried to lead the mule past his stable at feeding time. While going toward the stable we had a splendid animal, but as soon as it became evident that it was our wish to go beyond the barn, we had the sickest mule we ever saw on foot. Head down and step uncertain and slow enough to beat a turtle on a "fast in race."

Some people say the mule is stubborn. Webster's first definition of stubborn is, unreasonably obstinate. Experience with the animal we are treating, shows that the mule generally has a reason for the position it takes. We once loaded three hundred brick upon a wagon for a good mule team to draw, driven by a negro. As the forward wheels settled into a hollow in the sand containing a little water, the driver allowed the team to stop. Then, the expected did not happen. When the off mule pulled, the nigh wasn't ready, and when the nigh mule pulled, the off mule needed rest. The darkey tried to persuade with a large black jack; the off mule turned its head around and looked at him, and the nigh mule kicked. Nothing could be done but to unload or pry out. We chose the latter course; and the calm scrutiny with which one of the beasts watched the gathering of plank and blocks, suggested the thought that it had an intelligent idea of the division of labor. It seemed satisfied; for when we were ready to do our part, the mules pulled together like two souls knit into one.

This letter is on the mule. Now we have reached the end and are off from the mule. The word has been used about fifty times; and if that is not mulish enough for any of our readers, let him buy a mule; if he still differs from our estimates and conclusions, let him buy two mules.

Our next letter will be on the young men of the South.

That the rose of health and happiness
Are O! so fair to see,
But fairer than those flowers are
Is the rose that blooms for me
On the cheeks once pale and hollow,
And God be thanked, I say,
The rose of the June time
Blooms out again to day.

That is what many a man feels like saying when he sees some member of his family restored to health after a long and wasting illness. In many households there are persons who seem to be fading out of life slowly. There is a general debility that indicates a lack of vital force. The blood seems to be blood only in color. There is often a dry, hard cough. Night brings no refreshing sleep. The cheek grows thin and pale. What shall be done to ward off disease which is making slow but sure efforts to secure another victim? Let me tell you: Get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and fight the enemy with it. There is nothing like it to build up a weakened system, and restore lost vitality. It is a most wonderful tonic, nutritive and alterative, or blood-purifier.

CATARRH,

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS—HAY FEVER

A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N.B.—This treatment is not a snuff or an ointment; both have been discarded by reputable physicians as injurious. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 West King Street, Toronto, Canada.—Toronto Globe.

Poetry.

WHAT LOVE IS.

Love is the centre and circumference,
The cause, end aim, of all things; 's in the key
To joy and sorrow, and the reason praise
For all the life that have been or may be.
Love is as bitter as the dregs of sin,
As sweet as clover honey in its cell.
Love is the pass-word whereby the sentinels
In
To heaven—the gateway that leads sometimes to hell.

Love is the crown that glorifies—the curse
That brands and burdens—it is life and death.
It is the grand law of the universe,
And nothing can exist without its breath.

Love is the impulse which directs the world,
And all things know its and obey its power,
Man, in the maelstrom of his passion whirled,
The bee, that takes the pollen to the flower.

The earth, uplifting her bare, pulsing breast,
To fervent kisses of the amorous sun,
Each but obeys creative Love's behest,
Which everywhere instinctively is done.

Love is the only thing that pays for birth,
Or makes death welcome. Ah! dear God above
This beautiful, but sad, perplexing earth,
Pity the hearts that know, or know not Love.

COMING HOME.

Och! mother dear, I'm comin' home.
I'm growin' ould, my health is breakin',
I've been to Delhi and to Rome,
To the Crimeya an' to Paykin;
I've won some medals an' they say
Victoria's cross is thought a lot of,
But troth I felt the other day
I'd rather have the leg they shot of.

I've seen quare places, purty spots,
Ood make your eyes stare wide wid wonder;
Their name out the your tongue in knots,
Even Father Flade himself ond blunder.
It's mighty grand, St. Pather's dome,
But faith I ax his saintship's pardon,
For prayin' there I thought of home
Of the ould mud hut an' prater garden.

Well, then, the Rooshian girls wor kind,
An' on the sly I often kissed them.
But Molly darlin' needn't mind,
Shure Roosian fur, she never missed them.
An in the night, when loved wans came,
Dear Molly's lips to mine wor pressin',
Then wakin' from the pleasant dreahme,
I felt an angel kiss her blessin.

So back, dear mother, I'll come home,
Forget the past, an how I spent it;
My heart is whole an' all yer own,
Except the spot that Molly rinted.
An' wance I'm home, a full three quarther
I'll make my darlin —not better half;
Or ay I die upon the wather
I'll send my ghost by telegraph.

THE MOON'S HEAT.

The study of the temperature of the moon's heat carried on by S. P. Langley, with the assistance of J. W. Very, at the Allegheny observatory, beginning in the year 1883 and lasting until 1887, have attracted world-wide notice.

Abstracts of these studies have been published in "the Londres, Edinburgh and Dublin Philosophical Magazine," in the "Annales de Chemie et de Physique" and in "The American Journal of Science."

The latter periodical published a synopsis of these investigations in December, 1888, and a month ago printed the exhaustive memoir on the subject read to the National Academy of Science in November, 1887.

The main questions at issue are the temperature of an airless planet at the earth's distance from the sun, the action of the atmosphere in modifying the temperature of such a planet, and, in general, the study of those conditions of radiations and absorption which have actually rendered life possible on our own.

It has been generally assumed hitherto that the temperature of the sunlit surface of an airless planet at such a distance would be exceedingly high. Thus Sir John Herschel, in his latest "Outlines of Astronomy," says: "The surface of the full moon exposed to us must necessarily be very much heated, possibly to a degree much exceeding that of boiling water."

It has also been almost universally supposed that our atmosphere was nearly impervious to the lunar radiant heat, so that, if any existed, it could still not be perceived by us at the sea level. Thus Sir John Herschel says of the moon, that "its heat (conformably to what is observed of that of bodies heated below the point of luminosity) is much more readily absorbed in traversing transparent media than direct solar heat, and is extinguished in the upper regions of the atmosphere, never reaching the surface of the earth at all."

These statements have remained unchallenged on account of the hitherto insuperable difficulties of experimental investigation, arising from the all but infinitesimal amount of heat which the moon sends us, and the added fact that this heat, small as it is, is of two essentially different kinds—that which the moon, acting as a mirror, reflects from the sun, and that which directly emanates from the substance of her own sun-heated soil, while it is only by an analysis of each of these two kinds of heat, each in its totality non-existant to the most sensitive thermometer, that an experimental answer to the question can be obtained.

It is impossible, in that article, to give a satisfactory summary of the experiments of Professor Langley. His conclusions only can be given.

With the aid of the bolometer, Professor Langley arrives at a conclusion exactly opposite to the general opinion, namely, but the mean temperature of the sunlit lunar soil is much lower than has been supposed, and is most probably not greatly above zero Centigrade, which is the freezing point.

Truth Stranger Than Fiction.

Miss Jennie A. McNair, of Lion's Head, Bruce Co., Ont., tells the following remarkable experience:—I called upon a poor woman who was very sick. She had not left her bed for weeks. Her friends said she was dying of consumption; indeed she was so low it seemed that it would be but a very short time until she would pass away. I looked around on her little children and resolved if possible to cure her, but how to do it was the question. I was well used to the different forms of consumption and knew her trouble all came from the "head," and that her lungs were being destroyed by breathing the poisonous secretions into them. I came home praying that God would give me what was wanted to cure her—and He did in a strange way. A little boy came into the room where I was and wanted me to look at a star on a piece of paper. It proved to be an advertisement of Nasal Balm. I ordered it at once and it proved to be just what I wanted, as to day the woman's head is all right. She is able to do her own work and is getting strong very fast. This remarkable change was effected by one bottle of Nasal Balm. Enclose 50 cents for another bottle, which is for a young lady here who has had catarrh for a long time. Please send at once and I will try and make its worth known in this place. It is a pleasure for me to work for the suffering and praise the medicine that deserves it.

Read this extract from the scientific papers of Great Britain and Europe:

The four greatest medical centres of the world are London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna. These cities have immense hospitals teeming with suffering humanity. Crowds of students throng the wards studying under the Professors in charge. The most renowned physicians of the world teach and practice here, and the institutions are storehouses of medical knowledge and experience. With a view of making this experience available to the public the Hospital Remedy Co. at great expense secured the prescriptions of these hospitals, prepared the specifics, and although it would cost from $25 to $100 to secure the attention of their distinguished originators, yet in this way their prepared specifics are offered at the price of the quack patent medicines that flood the market and absurdly claim to cure every ill from a single bottle.

Newspaper Decisions.

1. Any person or persons who take a paper regularly from the post office, whether directed in his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment.
2. If a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken or not.
3. The courts have decided that refusing to take a newspaper or periodical from the post office or removing and leaving them uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intended fraud.

Poetry.

A PATH LEADS ALL THE WAY.

I sit before my door at eve,
And looking westward softly, say,
Should I those garden precincts leave
And cross the meadows sweet with dew,
And climb the hills so sweetly blue,
And follow still the setting day—

Still other gardens I should find
And other meadows dewy sweet,
And still the summer winds would wind,
And still the patient earth would lend—
Though I a thousand miles should wend—
Herself unto my patient feet.

The rivers hide 'neath many a bridge,
The better pleased they greet the day;
There's guidance o'er the roughest ridge;
Aye, though 'tis thousand miles or more
To where she sits within her door,
There is a path leads all the way!

O blessed land of the dear earth,
Betwixt us still, though wide we stray,
Thou seem'st to lessen thy great girth
In dusk and stillness for my feet;
Thy futile hinting yet is sweet;
There is a path leads all the way.

And at its end she sits the same,
With evening face serenely bright,
With lips that sweetly speak my name;
While through her look and smile there plays
Suggestion still of holy ways
That conquer parting, change and night.

CHAPTER I.

"YOU ARE NOT MY WIFE."

Hath he not sworn his love a thousand times
In this green valley, under this green hill,
Even on this hand, sitting on this stone,
Sealed it with kisses, watered it with tears?
Tennyson.

AGAIN the door of the dining room opened, and Silvia Rymer, looking up, saw the flushed face of Hannah, the maid.

"It is after seven, and dinner was ordered for five. I can not keep it any longer."

Mrs. Rymer smiled, though a shade of uneasiness came over her beautiful young face.

"Has not my husband returned yet Hannah?" she said.

"No!" was the blunt reply. "I always did think that when a gentleman once leaves a house he never knows the time to come back."

Mrs. Rymer laughed.

"Try to keep everything nice for one half hour longer. You can do it Hannah, if you will try."

"I can try," said the girl, "but between trying and doing there is a wide difference."

She went back to the kitchen, and Silvia Rymer took up the book she had been reading, but it was in vain that she tried to fix her attention on it: there was a mist between her beautiful eyes and the page: the sense of the words she was reading did not reach her mind. She looked at her pretty, jeweled watch, it was twenty minutes past seven; and when he kissed her that afternoon, he had said he should be back by five.

She rose from her seat and went to the window. No fairer scene than that on which she gazed ever met human eye. The grand Scotch lakes in the distance, and the heather crowned hills stretching down to them; a large, old-fashioned garden led to the meadows, and the meadows sloped to the border of the lake.

It was in the month of June, and the sun shone upon the blue waters, the heather, and the flowers. The breath of the rose and the lily floated toward her; among all the flowers blooming in the garden, there was not one so fair as the young face gazing over them.

"It is strange he does not come," she said.

Just then, from among the roses, came a young girl, holding a lovely, princely baby in her arms.

"Bring the baby to me," said Mrs. Rymer. She took the child in her arms, kissed the little velvet cheek, caressed the little golden head, talked to him in that sweet language only known to mothers and children.

"Where is papa, baby?" she said; and the child raised his large, dark eyes to hers. Her heart grew warm within her as she looked at him. Ah! please Heaven, what a grand, noble man he would be in the years to come, but never so noble as his father, Alric Rymer. Earth did not hold his equal.

Then nurse and baby went away. Over the lake came the sound of chimes—half past seven. There was Hannah, looking very cross, with an appearance of great meekness.

"Would you be so kind as to tell me what I am to do with this dinner?" she said.

Mrs. Rymer went back into the room; the scent of the roses and lilies followed her. The room was the very picture of comfort, prettily furnished with flowers and books, the dinner table bright with its choice linen and delicate silver. There was her husband's chair ready for him; everything that he could desire or wish, prepared with loving hands and loving thought. He had left home at three, telling her he was going to Brae on some business.

Brae was a small town only two miles away. She looked round, noting every detail; on a side table she saw a cigar case and a kid glove, with a faded flower that he had worn that morning. She raised the glove, and kissed it with passionate kisses. "My love! my love!" she murmured, "how was I worthy of you?"

As she stood with that half divine light on her face, she looked fairer than any pictured dream. She was tall and slender, not more than eighteen, with a figure of perfect grace and symmetry; fine little hands, and fine little feet; a white neck, delicate and graceful; a face so pure and lovely in its fresh, girlish beauty—so sweet, so pure, so eloquent—a face such as Raphael would have given to Angels, framed in soft, shining hair, brown in the shade and golden in the sun; dark violet eyes, bright as stars. She was exquisitely, but simply dressed. On her white neck shone a golden locket worn with a golden chain, and on the fair, rounded arm was a bracelet of gold and precious stones. The sunlight fell over her, the perfume of the flowers floated round her; but she was lost in a trance of happy love.

"My love! my love!" she murmured again, "who in this wide world is so happy as I?"

Hannah again, but this time she held in her hands a letter, and her face looked less anxious.

"A messenger has brought this from Brae," she said. "The master sent it."

With a smile still on her lips, and a beautiful blush that overspread her face as her eyes fell on the beloved, familiar writing, she took the letter. She kissed her own name because he had written it.

"My love," she said again to herself; "how thoughtful he is for me."

Then she sat down in his chair near the window to read it—Heaven help her!

With the sun shining above her, and the fair flowers around her, she read her death warrant.

She read the words that struck her from the list of honored living women, and blighted her whole life.

One moment she was smiling, her heart warm with the thought of him, the next that tender, loving heart was broken. Heaven help her and all who suffer from the heartless cruelty of men!

These were the words on which the sun shone, words that stabbed and slew the truest, the kindest, and most tender of God's creatures.

"My Dearest Silvia.—It is better and kinder to speak plainly to you, and tell you all. You will blame me, but my excuse is I loved you so dearly, so madly, that I could not live without you. Always remember that, when you are disposed to judge me harshly. Always remember that I loved you first, dearest and best; that no other woman can take your place in my heart, but Silvia, I have deceived you—I was obliged to deceive you; all is fair in love, and if I have won you by stratagem, I am not the first who has forgotten what the world calls honor in love.

"Better for you to know the truth. I could not live without you, but, Silvia, you are not my wife! Do not hate me. I could not marry you, because for some years past I have been betrothed to a lady in my own rank of life, and I am now compelled to leave you and keep my promise to her. I have misled you as to myself. You have believed me to be Alric Rymer, a man of moderate and mediocre position; it is not so. Prudence forbids me to reveal my real name and rank.

"Now, believe me Silvia, I am grieved to write this: if it had been possible, I would fain have kept all knowledge of this from you. The form of marriage we went through I knew was useless—it was merely to satisfy your delicate conscience—it was a vain, idle ceremony. I repeat this because I hope, in course of time, to know that you have married some one worthy of you.

"I hope common sense will guide you, and that you will avoid all tragic nonsence. Hundreds of girls have been in a similiar position, and have afterward settled comfortably in life. Remember if there be any blame, it is mine, not yours. You have believed yourself my wife, I knew you were not. It is hard to part from you—we have been very happy—but I dare not remain in Scotland for another day. I know you will grieve, but you must make the best of it. You may be very comfortable. I have made ample provision for you and the boy. If you will write to Messrs King & Gresham, Thavies Inn, London, to whom I have committed your interests they will tell you the amount of your income, and what is set aside for the boy. It will be paid quarterly, on condition that you never seek to find me, or anything about me. Your marrying will make no difference. Lake Cottage was taken for two years; you had better remain there until the time expires.

"Now, good by, my beautiful Silvia. My heart aches to write the word. You must try to forget me—try to make the best of it, and learn to be happy with some one else. The saddest hour of my life is this in which I leave you, but go I must. Though we shall never meet again, believe me always

"Your lover and admirer,

"Alric Rymer."

From the thin folds of paper a bank-note fluttered to the ground, and lay unheeded where it fell.

Heaven help her! There is no remedy either on earth or in heaven for such woe as hers. She read to the very end, and then sat still, staring, dumb, like one turned to stone. She did not scream, faint, or weep, but the awful despair that came over her was terrible to see. The white lips were parted and open, but no sound came from them; the violet eyes had a wild, lost, bewildered expression; no trace, no outward expression of grief could have been so awful as this blank, silent, terrible despair.

The wind blew the falling leaves of the roses into the room, and then idly stirred the letter which lay at her feet; it aroused her as though some living thing had moved beside her. She rose from her seat.

"Alric!" she cried, with a terrible voice, then rose, like one blind and dizzy, and went into the garden. She thought he was there; her brain reeled beneath the shock; there was nothing save the flowers and the trees, and she went back again, not knowing what she was about.

CHAPTER II.

A DESERTED HOME.

"I pray thee, pass before my light of life,
And shadow all my soul that I may die."

"I did you call me, Mrs. Rymer?" asked Hannah, who heard something of that terrible cry. She turned her ghastly face and said "No." Then the girl, looking down, saw the bank-note on the ground. She picked it up wonderingly.

"Money is plentiful," she said, placing it on the table. "Shall I bring you your dinner, or will you have some tea?"

"I will ring when I want anything," was the reply.

The girl wondered why her mistress's voice was so changed. She turned to look at her, but the white face was hidden from sight. She went away again, leaving the lady alone with her despair. Again she looked at the letter, and read it word for word.

"It must be a jest," she said to herself; "it can not be true. I am his wife before God and man.

But those words were not jesting words; they were terrible, strange; but as she sat in horrified, bewildered silence, it dawned upon her for the first time that she might have been betrayed, duped, deceived and deserted. Such things had been done before, but not surely by men like Alric. Alric, her handsome, gifted hero! so generous, so noble, so far above his fellow men! It was not possible to believe it all at once—but, supposing it should be true?

She sat quite still and motionless—there was not even a quiver on the white lips.

"O Heaven!" she cried. "Let me die before I know the truth." She bowed her head, unable to think or to speak, bearing in bitter, anguished silence this first shock of her unutterable woe. What shame, what grief, what outraged love, what wounded pride, what anguish passed like a tempest over her, who shall say?

Half an hour had passed before she raised her white face again, and then there was upon it such a hopeless, helpless, settled despair, that no one could have recognized her.

She rose slowly, and stood erect; her limbs trembled, a mortal sickness was upon her; a mortal cold, that seemed to freeze the blood in her veins, and made her heart beat slowly.

"I am no wife!" she said. "I gave him my heart, my love, my life, my honor, and in return he has deceived me. 'I am no wife!'"

She raised her face to the smiling summer heavens. She raised her white hand as though she would fain pierce with her wrongs the blue skies, and reach the great White Throne.

"God of justice!" she said, slowly. "God of light! I appeal to you against him. I am innocent, for I believed that I was his wife."

Did that wild prayer, that wild cry for justice, pierce the clouds and reach the merciful Father to whom no wrong cries in vain?

She had been silent, stunned, bewildered, until now. The rose-leaves came floating slowly past her, the sun shone brightly over her, and a burning sense of outraged pride, of wounded love and wounded honor, began to burn her very heart away.

"I gave him my love, and he has made an outcast of me. I gave him my life and he has made me ashamed of it. I loved him, and he has left me."

The silence and stupor of despair had died away; the very frenzy and rage of sorrow was upon her. Her eyes flamed with anger, her face flushed hotly. She took up the bank-note that lay on the table, and laughed—a sound terrible to hear.

"This was to be the price of my love, my honor, my fair name; my soul!"

She tore it into shreds.

"I will starve—I will die; but I will take nothing from him!" she said.

She went up to her room and brought down all the jewels, the ornaments, he had over given her; she tore the golden chain from her neck; one by one she threw them under her feet, and trampled them into a thousand fragments.

"I did not sell my soul for these!" she cried, as she spurned the fragments. "I will have nothing that has ever belonged to him."

Then the wild fury died away, and she stood lost, bewildered.

"I can not live!" she said to herself, hoarsely; "I can not live! I was not proud; but I held my fair name and my honor dearer than my life. I have lost both, and I can not live."

Once again she went into the room, and put on a bonnet and shawl; on the stairs she met the nurse and the baby. A low, bitter cry—one that must have pierced the high heavens—came from her lips. She did not look at her child; she turned her face away as he was carried by.

"Are you going out, madame?" inquired the nurse.

"Yes," replied the hoarse voice. "Do the best you can for him. I am going out."

She went die; the intolerable shame was not to be borne. Besides, in her fair, innocent life she had had but one love, and now that he was gone from her forever, how was she to live? She could not look in the baby's face she was never to see again, and she could not kiss the pure little lips—she was going out to die! She stood in the sunlit garden, looking round her with haggard eyes—eyes that burned, but from which no tears flowed.

This time last evening he had walked with her up and down the broad paths, his arm clasped round her, laughing as she told him pretty marvels of the baby, laughing at her inquiries, her earnest, tender words. Just there, close to that great sheaf of white lilies, he had stooped to kiss her, and said he was jealous because she loved the baby most.

Yes, at that very moment he knew that he had deceived her; that she was not his wife; that in twenty-four hours he would have left her forever.

A cry for vengence, for justice—the cry of a broken heart—came from the white lips. Oh, for death! for death! She could not bear the shame of life; she could not bear the horrible pain that tortured her.

Was there ever a sadder sight under the summer sun than this? This girl, so young, so beautiful, so loving, looking around her for the means of death. And yet such a sight was but another record of the sin and the selfishness of men.

"How am I to die?" she said.

There lay the lake, shining clear and bright in the sun, bearing white water lilies on its calm breast; bright winged birds skimmed over it; gentle wavelets washed the green banks. Should she seek her rest there?

"No, I could not die," she thought; "I have been with him so often over that clear water. I should see his face in the depths, and I could not die. I must have a quick death, in which I shall not be tortured by any memory of him."

Then she started, for she heard a sound of laughter—wild, unearthly laughter—it was herself.

"Am I going mad?" she thought. "Let me die! let me die! not live mad!"

She was laughing, for the idea had just occurred to her that it was a jest—a poor one, a sorry one, but still a jest; he had written that letter to try her, and he would come presently from among the trees, laughing too, holding out his arms to her, and then—and then she should press to him with a long, low, shuddering sigh, and he would kiss her tears away.

"It could not be true," she said to herself, now she stood out in the sunlight; "no man dare so wantonly and so wickedly ruin an innocent girl; no man dare so outrage the laws of God and of man. She would go to Brae and know that it were indeed true.

"Dare he, dare any man win a pure girl's heart and break it? Dare he have won her love, have taken her from her home, have made a mockery of that solemn marriage rite, and so have betrayed her? No, it was not possible; even to the selfishness and wickedness of men," she said to herself, "there were limits."

She had, indeed, poor child, much to learn.

She would go to Brae. See, the sunlight low on the fields; the birds were all singing in the fields; the wind stirred the fragrant heather; the bluebells and primroses laughed among the long grass; the smile of summer's beauty lay over the fair earth; could there be such desolation, such anguish, such darkness and sorrow in store for her? No, it was not possible. Earth would not mock her with its beauty or heaven with its smiles, if nothing but anguish and death lay before her.

She turned from the lake side; a short path through the woods led to Brae. The great boughs of the spreading trees stretched out on either side; the beautiful sunshine came filtered through the green leaves; the merry brown hares ran leaping through the woods; quiet and beauty, and fragrance were all around her. Could darkness and desolation be waiting for her on the other side?

She reached Brae; no one who had known her a few hours ago—fresh, fair, and radiant—could have recognized her now—haggard, with a ghastly face and despairing eyes. Some recollection must have come to her, for, as she left the woods and saw the little town of Brae lying before her, she pulled the veil over her face, and tried to look more rational, more like herself. The bells were chiming from the old church tower—chiming some sweet old melody to which she had often listened with Alric by her side. Where was she to go, now that she stood in the town from whence came that cruel letter.

SPRING MANAGEMENT OF SHEEP.

From one coward says a correspondent of an exchange, the flock of sheep will need special care and watchfulness. The lambing, and welfare of the lambs, the feeding of the week ewes, dressing and troubles from the ever-active parasites, will all call for immediate attention. A good place should be made for the young lambs so that no harm can befall them. The ewes need attending to, and feeding as well, if the lambs are expected. Grass alone is not sufficient, but corn, rye and buckwheat finely ground together, should be given them every day. They have a function to perform, to rear large healthy lambs, and to yield a good supply of milk. The English sheep breeders have a good mixture for the young lambs, which is known as lamb or calf meal. It supplies all the essentials of milk, and is easily digestible. This mixture consists of three bushels of peas, one bushel of linseed, one bushel of rye and 100 pounds of fine wheat bran finely ground together. Mixed with these substances are twenty pounds of salt and one pound of brown ginger and a pound of caraway seeds. The purity of the drinking water is another essential part of the diet of ewes and lambs. If this is not pure the milk of the ewes will become tainted and the lambs suffer from the effects.

The lambs should be docked at an early age. If this is done about a month after its birth the pain is very trifling and the loss of blood small. Cleanliness is an important factor in caring for the flock in the spring. This is the only safeguard against blow flies. If soft filth is allowed to accumulate they will deposit their larvæ in it, and in time fairly devour the animal's life. Too much care cannot be given in protecting the ewes and lambs from the inclemency of the weather. Unless ample shed protection is afforded they will suffer, and the percentage of loss among the flock will be great. This will not be an expensive undertaking if the flock is divided and the incoming ewes separated from the rest of the flock. They can be placed in the fields or pasture where sheds are provided, while the main flock can care for itself in other pastures. It is not difficult to save nearly all of the lambs of a flock in this way, but if the necessary conveniences are denied then to work becomes most difficult and trying one.

Living in a Fool's Paradise.

Many neglect slight symptoms of disease, hoping that nature will restore health. True nature will aid, but she must also be aided by using Burdock Blood Bitters, from 1 to 2 bottles of which is sufficient to cure any ordinary case of impure blood, constipation, dyspepsia, liver complaint, kidney complaint, debility, etc.

The Senate Divorce committee has recommended the passing of the Clapp and Walker Divorce Bills. In the former case the evidence is conflicting, the respondent having appealed and denied the charges which were alleged against her. Her letters to the alleged adulterer were put in evidence against her and they are a very damaging character. In the Walker case parties being minors married without the consent of their parents. They separated immediately after the marriage and have never consummated their union. The marriage being thus incomplete, an application is being made to declare it void upon these grounds.

"Born to be Happy,"

so said Socrates; so have reiterated many other philosophers in regard to humanity. As health is the vital principle of bliss, it is not only an imperative duty, but a welcome privilege for every man and woman to maintain it in the highest degree. One of the most insidious and dangerous emissaries in this connection is to neglect a tendency to constipation. The clogging up of the system with effete matter predisposes to disease, depresses the spirits, and creates gloom and despondency. The occasional use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets will prevent a constipated habit, clear the brain, sweeten the temper (and, we might add, the breath also), and open a vista of happy activity possible only to the well regulated mind and body.

Unselfish Man!—"Oh, no, dear Algy! I love you far too dearly to let your poverty stand in the way of our Union; but do you think we shall be able to live happily on £150 a year?" "My dear Clorinda! I swear to you, by all that I hold most dear, to make your life a bed of roses—even if we have to do without a servant."

Truth Stranger Than Fiction.

Miss Jennie A. McNair, of Lion's Head, Bruce Co., Ont., tells the following remarkable experience:—I called upon a poor woman who was very sick. She had not left her bed for weeks. Her friends said she was dying of consumption; indeed she was so low it seemed that it would be but a very short time until she would pass away. I looked around on her little children and resolved if possible to cure her, but how to do it was the question. I was well used to the different forms of consumption, and knew her trouble all came from the "head," and that her lungs were being destroyed by breathing the poisonous secretions into them. I came home praying that God would give me what was wanted to cure her—and He did in a strange way. A little boy came into the room where I was and wanted me to look at a star on a piece of paper. It proved to be an advertisement of Nasal Balm. I ordered it at once and it proved to be just what I wanted, as to day the woman's head is all right. She is able to do her own work and is getting strong very fast. This remarkable change was effected by one bottle of Nasal Balm. Enclose 50 cents for another bottle, which is for a young lady here who has had catarrh for a long time. Send at once and I will try and make the result known in this place. It is a pleasure for me to work for the suffering and praise the medicine that deserves it.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

MR. A. R. Kidd, reeve of Dummer, was on Saturday nominated as the Equal Rights candidate for East Peterborough.

THERE is some talk among the North Wentworth Tories of nominating W. J. Watson, of the Dundas Standard, for Local House.

A Wisconsin court has been trying a case in which a clergyman is charged with getting $225 for an unsound horse not worth $100. Doubtless this clergyman is a good and worthy man in other respects. But in swapping horses it is mighty hard work not to retain some traces of the old Adam.

THERE is a firm in Cincinnati which each year beats 21,000 gold dollars into gold leaf, and as each dollar can be beat into a sheet that will carpet two rooms 16½ feet square, some idea may be formed of its tenuity. It requires 1,400 of gold leaf to equal in thickness a sheet of writing paper, and takes 280,000 of them, piled one upon the other, to equal an inch in thickness.

FIFTEEN years ago the first cotton mill was established in Canada. There are now 24 mills, containing 600,000 spindles. In 1879, 1,245,208 pounds of cotton were imported for home consumption; in 1888, 28,727,525 pounds. The number of operatives employed has increased 80 per cent. in five years, and Canadian factories now supply 158,000,000 yards of material to meet the wants of the inhabitants of the Dominion.

THE Walker divorce bill, granting relief to Emily Walker, who was married under the legal age, against the wishes of her parents and whose husband left her at the church door, with whom she had no cohabitation and who has not contributed to her support, was given the six months' hoist Monday in the House of Commons because adultery, the essential ingredient of divorce, was absent.

WISE MEN'S DOINGS.

The Council Will Back the Board of Health—$50 to the Mechanic's Institute—Other Legislation.

The town council met last Monday evening to transact the various items of business pertaining to a great town; and they do it this year with a livlier gait than ever it was done before. Tt. 7.30 o'clock there was not a quorum present, but at 7.40 all the councillors, except Mr. Ketchum, were ready to begin the night's business. A good crowd of citizens eagerly devoured the wisdom that fell from the lips of great men. After the clerk read the last meeting's minutes, which were adopted, the mayor read sent in by George Gray, $9.50; E. Fields, $9.50; Globe, $2.24; Mail, $2.24; were ordered to be paid. Others from Hugh Haley, $12.84; Roswell & Hutchison, $2.03; were referred to the R. & B. and the Finance committees, respectively.

A communication from Walter Fremlin, asking to be appointed overseer of street repairs. The epistle was handed over to the R. & B. committee.

DRY EARTH CLOSETS.

Secretary Hughson, of the board of health, requested the council to pass a by-law compelling the erection of dry-earth closets. Dr. Henry was present and addressed the council. He said the present system of closets polluted the water in the wells of the thickly populated parts of the town, and by adopting the dry-earth system, continued the doctor, would have a tendency to do away with that fault. The matter was sent to a committee, consisting of the reeve, deputy reeve and Ald. Cobean.

The annual request of the merchants and others for street watering was made, and referred to the F & W. committee.

Dr Smith called the attention of the council to the unhealthy state that the race where the waterworks used to get its supply was in. The mayor said it was one of the questions which the board of health was dealing with at present. However, the matter was referred to the special committee.

$50 TO THE INSTITUTE.

Mr. W. Hewat, secretary of the board of directors of the Mechanic's Institute, corresponded with the council and asked a grant to aid the institute. President Foulds addressed the council, and pointed out the benefits of the institute and the free reading room connected therewith. Deputy reeve Knox contended that it deserving of success, and moved a grant of $75. Some other fellow held the same views as Mr. Knox contended, but thought $25 was sufficient. Mr. Bailey also entertained the same kind feelings, and thought that $50 would do. The reeve seconded his motion, which carried.

REPORTS.

The Finance committee's report was read by Reeve Lindsay. It showed that Police Magistrate Pattullo agreed to pay over the fines imposed by him since he has been police magistrate, and recommended the payment of $20 to T. T. King, whose wife was injured by a defective sidewalk on Mill street some time ago. The report was adopted.

Ald. Youmans read an unimportant report of the Printing committee.

Mr. Bailey introduced a by-law to amend the fire limits' by-law, to give power to erect a roughcast addition to a roughcast building.

GENERAL BUSINESS.

Ald. Bailey asked another extension of time to report on his new waterworks scheme. It was granted.

The Cemetery committee was given power to repair the cemetery fence.

After the assessor hands in his role it will be locked over by the Assessment committee.

The R. & B. committee will look after the road in front of Lindsay's elevator at the C.P.R. station.

The mayor was empowered to pay the town insurance premiums as they fall due.

SHELBURNE.

The spring fair was held yesterday.

The Imperial block has been sold to G. R. Hassack.

Mr. H Faulkner secured a first and second prize for his two dogs at the Buffalo dog show.

Nearly a hundred dollars worth of new books are being added to the mechanics' institute library.

Mr. Morrison Rooney was presented with an address and a diamond ring the other evening, previous to his removal to Collingwood.

It has been fully decided to have the proposed celebration of Her Majesty's birthday on Saturday, May 24th. Committees have been appointed and are at work making the necessary arrangements. A big time may be anticipated.

GRAND VALLEY.

The spring horse show will take place to-morrow. It will be largely attended.

Mr John Robinson has removed from Dillon's block to his own store across the street.

Sugar making was extensively carried on last week. Good samples were brought to town.

Mr. Thomas Bruce has taken a lucrative position at Winnipeg. He left on Tuesday week for his new home.

Mr. Hamilton Edgar, of Waldemar, a son of Mr. Joseph Edgar, died from the effects of consumption last Thursday morning, at the age of 23 years. The remains were interred at Price's corners on Sunday.

Mr. A. Richardson, of Peepabun, has a brood sow of the Berkshire breed that has raised three litters, in all thirty-five pigs, inside of twelve months. If any other can beat this record let them be brought to the front.

On Monday morning of last week Mr. Will Turner, apprentice in Richardson's flour mills, was assisting in the work of babbitting some of the machinery the metal exploded, a portion striking him on the face and badly burning him around the right eye. Had he not closed his eyes at the time of the explosion the accident might have been of a more serious nature. Mr. Turner had his wound dressed and afterwards left for his home near Orton.

MELVILLE.

Miss Maggie Hillock, of Michigan, is visiting friends here.

Mr. Wm. Hillock, from Michigan, who has been visiting friends around here, returned home last week.

On Sunday night before last some of the "bhoys" raided Mr. J. Torrance's sugar-bush on the 1st line. They made taffy until a late hour on Monday morning. A few hours in the cooler might have a tendency to put a stopper on such exhibitions of rowdyism.

The Melville Skyrocket football club held a meeting recently and reorganized for the season. The boys are in high spirits over the prospects they have in view. Officers were elected as follows: Ed Corbett, captain; Fred. McGuire, secretary-treasurer; G. Corbett, J. Fines and D. Armstrong, committee.

A big ploughing bee was held at J. Stanley's on Tuesday of last week, under the supervision of the amiable J. Graham, and about twenty acres were ploughed. The evening was characterized by a grand dance, at which S. Delaney, our local violinist, and R. Fines and R. Delaney acted as masters of ceremonies. Everybody was satisfied with the fun.

So Mr James L Hughes, the public school inspector of Toronto, is seeking our votes as a candidate for the Local Legislature. Well, if James L. generals affairs the way he should, he will have no trouble in getting in, but if he lets some of the Brampton fanatics loose he will fall short four or five hundred votes. A candidate should be very careful what men he sends out to canvass, for the people around here don't like the idea of an outsider coming in to try and beat a local man. It is too bad that the Conservatives could not find a fit man at home, without going outside of the county for one.

KEMMLER'S CHANGE OF HEART.

He Says He Would Rather Die Than Go Back to His Old Associates.

AUBURN, April 18.—The Rev O. A. Houghton visited Kemmler to day and gave him his usual lesson in things pertaining to religion. Mr. Houghton said to the correspondent to night:

"I had an interesting talk with the doomed man this afternoon. Among other questions I asked this: 'Kemmler, if you were liberated would you go back to your old associates?' He replied: 'I don't want any more of them or nothing to do with them.' After a moment Kemmler continued with much emphasis: 'I had rather go to that chair than live as I have been living. That's a great deal to say, but I mean it.' That's right. If Governor Hill should pardon me, and I must, to get my pardon, consent to live among those old associates I would rather die."

Mr Houghton was asked if Kemmler, with his change of heart, still held resentment toward Hospital Keeper Miller. He said he preferred not to answer but afterward expressed the opinion that Kemmler and Miller would not make first rate bedfellows.

Charles H. Whiting was locked at the Central prison, Toronto, on Saturday morning. Twenty two months ago he was sentenced at St. Thomas to 23 months' imprisonment, and also to receive fifty lashes with the "cat o-nine-tails." Twenty five lashes were administered to him one month after he had entered the prison, and now he has received the second and last instalment of his physical punishment. The offence for which he had been convicted was that of having indecently assulted his little niece, who was then about seven years of age. He has one month more of forced retirement.

On Friday James Foy, of Euphrasia, was drowned near Beaver river, where he had been engaged in driving timber. The body has been recovered, but life was extinct, having been in the water over an hour.

Two families of Canadians, who removed to Missouri three years ago, passed through Windsor on Wednesday in wagons on their return to Toronto. They report all their money in Missouri, and the story they tell of the hardships in the west was heartrending.

The Gale harrow men left for Barrie on Monday. Mr. A. R. McManus, the genial and enterprising manager, made himself very popular with the people during his stay here.

Just as we go to press, we received a telephone message informing us that a terrible tragedy has taken place in Melanothon, near Shelburne. A man named John Morrison, it is said, murdered three of his children. THE SUN of next week will contain an account of the awful affair.

LOST.—On Broadway between the market and Gilchrist & Kent's store, a buckskin glove. The finder will please leave at THE SUN Office.

OUR NEXT SOUTHERN LETTER.—The next Southern letter will be the first of a series of five letters descriptive of the celebrated Long Leaf or Southern Pine. With each letter we will be enabled to show our readers something connected with the Southern Pine, and as each letter appears our friends are invited to call and see the curiosities.

IN BUSINESS DIFFICULTIES.—Mr. Jesse Ketchum, who has conducted a leather emporium in town for some time, is in business troubles. He is trying to compromise with his creditors at 75 cents on the dollar, and if he cannot arrange in this way he will be compelled to assign. His liabilities are about $11,000, and assets $7,000. He has $10,000 worth of bad debts on his books.

DEADLY PARSNIPS.—The family of W. Nicholson, near Hagersville, were taken suddenly ill, Saturday, after eating some wild parsnips gathered during the day by the children, and one boy, aged 10 years, died in a short time afterwards in terrible agony. The eldest daughter, aged 13 is still very low, and doubts are entertained of her recovery. The others are recovering.—Tillsonburg Liberal.

AN EQUINE FREAK.—A curious freak of nature is to be seen up town. Yesterday a mare belonging to Mr. Quirk gave birth to a horse colt without the slightest appearance of either tail or anus. In other respects the colt is fully developed and unusually smart and strong. Vet. Hammell successfully performed an operation yesterday evening and the colt has all appearance of doing well.—Cardwell Sentinel.

ROYAL CLEAR GRIT.—Mr. H. Bateiner, of lot 24, 2nd Line, Melanothon, is the owner of a dandy 3 year-old trotting stallion, named Royal Clear Grit, which will travel through Primrose, Camilla, Orangeville, Alton, Shelburne and intermediate places during the season of 1890. Breeders who want fleet footed stock should not fail to see this horse. He will be at the Dufferin house, Orangeville, on Tuesday next.

ENGLISH BARLEY.—The government, for convenience of prompt distribution, has placed a few cars of prize prolific two-rowed barley, just arrived from England, with The Steele Bros. Company, of Toronto, who are prepared to ship it promptly, freight prepaid, to all who remit them $4 per bag. Each bag contains 112 pounds, and purchasers can obtain any number of bags required. Address, "The Steele Bros. Co., Toronto."

DIDN'T TAKE A PAPER.

Here lies the body of Moses Draper
(Tread softly ye who pass),
Who lived till sixty without a paper
And then blew out the gas.

A CORRECT ITEM.—You will keep delaying and putting off this matter of advertising and pushing your business until one of these fine days you'll get up in the morning and find you haven't much of anything left of your enterprise worth advertising. Why? Because a man who knows enough to advertise in an attractive and persistent manner is eminently capable of taking good care that his customer don't get away after he has once captured him!

DEATH OF MR. SAMUEL IRWIN.—Mr. Samuel Irwin who has been suffering with a cancer in his throat for over a year and who has been confined to bed for the last six months, died at his residence on William street yesterday morning. The deceased was a shoemaker by trade, and was of retiring disposition. He was born in the township of Caledon, and was fifty years of age, forty of which were spent in Orangeville. He leaves a wife and nine children to mourn his loss.

UNIVERSITY MEDICAL EXAMS.—On looking over the list of successful candidates at the University medical examinations, we find the following pupils of the Orangeville high school, most of them old Orangeville boys, were successful: 4th examination, W. H. Philip, Thomas Russell (with honors). 3rd year, M. Dunning, R. C. Griffith, T. H. Henry (with honors); 2nd year, J. H. Middlebore, J. J. Harper, H. Gear (with honors); 1st year, R. J. Hastings, F. W. Pirritte (with honors).

ANOTHER SWINDLE.—An ingenious swindle is being woked in several counties, in which a fountain pen with a double load plays an important part. The pen carries two kinds of ink, one of which will fade, the other will not. The superfluous parts of a contract are written in the ink which fades, and the farmer's signature with the permanent, and the document finally figures as a note of hand, which is discounted at the nearest bank, and the farmer has to pay.

FISTIC ENCOUNTER.—About 1 o'clock Monday afternoon the corner of Church and Mill streets was the scene of a "scrapping" match between an account collector and a painter. The collector endeavored to collect an account from the painter, but the latter disputed the bill. Words led to blows, and blows to disfigured physiogs; and the fight continued on. Two neighbors happened to hear the row, and arrived in time to prevent a tragedy. It is said the affair will be ventilated before the police magistrate.

A SERIOUS RUNAWAY.—Last Thursday afternoon a young lad named Willie Morrow met with an accident that will lay him up for some time. He had just finished washing Gilchrist & Kent's delivery rig, and was proceeding up town when the horse ran away, throwing the young fellow out and breaking a couple of his ribs. He was conveyed home and is now getting on as well as can possibly be expected. Jim Kelly, who happened to be in the rig, was also precipitated to the ground, but escaped uninjured.

BARN STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.—On Wednesday 9th inst., the barn of Mr. James McGowan, a farmer on the Fergus and Orangeville road in Garafraxa was struck by lightning. The barn is T shaped, and the lightning struck the ridge of the roof near the junction of the two buildings. It stripped from 24 to 30 feet square off the roof, and the wind getting in at this opening tore off another piece of the roof rather larger than the first. One hundred dollars would hardly repair the damages, and the building was insured in the Nichol Mutual.—Fergus News-Record.

A HORRIBLE DEATH.—A terrible and fatal accident happened to Henry Smith, a well-known breeder of high grade cattle, near Brisbane, Erin township, on Monday last. Mr. Smith and an attendant were leading a bull out to water, when the animal became enraged and broke away from the attendant. Mr. Smith had had hold of a stick which was attached to a ring in the animals nose, but he could not withstand the now maddened bull's rushes, and he was gored to death before the eyes of the horrified spectator. Mr. Smith lived all his life—66 years—near where he was killed, and is said to the first male child born in the township.

BASEBALL AT THE HIGH SCHOOL.—The Orangeville High School baseball club met the other evening and reorganized for the season. The members of this club are all crack baseball players, and any other club wanting to try them can arrange a match by dropping a post card to the secretary. The officers mentioned below are in charge:—Hon. President...W. J. Corkhill, B. A. President.....J. J. Parker, B.A. Captain.....George Luney Sec.-Treasurer.....J. C. Henry Committee—Messrs. Anderson, Hamkins and Johnston.

BOARD OF HEALTH.—Mayor Walsh, Clerk Hughson, Messrs. Hall and Decatur were in attendance at the regular meeting of the board of health which was held in the council chamber at five o'clock on Monday afternoon. The inspector was instructed to make a thorough inspection of the town, and any persons who refuse to clean up their premises may have an opportunity to interview the P. M. The board requested the town council to pass a by-law making the use of dry earth closets compulsory. The board have determined to improve the town's sanitary condition, and we hope they will.

A MEAN MAN.—Little Lillie Cummings, who was charged before Police Magistrate Powell, of Paris, at the instance of George Bonner, of St. George, with larceny was tried on Thursday. The child's father testified of going to the orphans' home, assuming to act for child, insulting Mr. Bonner, had a warrant issued and the girl arrested. The comments of the spectators upon the action of Bonner in having the child arrested, were anything but complimentary. After hearing the complainant's evidence, the Magistrate expressed his opinion of Bonner's act in pretty plain terms, and dismissed the case.

A HORSE ON A TEAR.—A very serious runaway accident took place near the Collin house, Springbrook, on Friday afternoon last. Messrs. J. F. Ewings and Ira Inglehart, of Inglehart Bros, were driving down the hill the horse ran away and threw the unfortunate men out of the buggy. Mr. Inglehart was badly bruised and cut all over the body, but Mr. Ewings injuries were of a more serious nature, he having sustained a broken kneecap and several minor wounds. Both gentlemen were brought to their boarding house in town, where Mr. Ewing now lies. He is improving wonderfully fast, but it will be some time before he will be able to leave his "downy couch."

TRY A NORTHERN VILLAGE.—Friend Lambert, of the Mt. Forest Representative, who was once a "devil" himself, committed a grievious wrong when he dashed off the following paragraph:—"That dreadful man of the Arthur Enterprise, referring to the Rep's comments on his item about Rev. Mr. McIntyre's and Mr. McCrae's evangelistic labors in Mt. Forest, darkly insinuates that if the devil is not to be found in Mt. Forest the next best place to look would be in that place the name of which is spelt with two ls—meaning Orangeville, no doubt." Probably the editor had been dreaming and imagined himself and his lacrosse team to be in Shelburne.

BRAYLEY-KYLE.—At 3.30 yesterday afternoon, in the Church of the Ascension, the marriage was solemnised of Mr. James E. Brayley with Miss Jennie Kyle, 256 Wellington street west. Rev. Mr. Baldwin officiated, assisted by Rev. Mr. Bilkey. The groomsman was Mr. J. W. Hughes and bridesmaid Miss Maria Kyle, sister of the bride. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was partaken of at the house of the bride. The wedding presents were numerous. The young couple left in the evening for an extended European tour.—Empire.

The contracting parties were former residents of this town and are well and favorably known. Their many friends here join in wishing them every prosperity.

PUTTING ON THE SCREWS.—When Mayor Walsh assumed the office as chief magistrate of Orangeville he made up his mind to put a stop to the disgraceful exhibitions of the pugilistic art which were frequently practiced on the public streets of our town. THE SUN of last week contained an account of the disgraceful scenes of the previous Thursday evening. Chief Shields had all the participants in the fairday fracas before Mayor Walsh and P. M Pattullo at the court house on Saturday afternoon, and they were taught a lesson that they will remember for a long time to come. Hugh Bracken, of Caledon, Henry Kearns, of Orangeville, Jack Hewitt, Thomas Holmes, Alex Rooney, Hugh McKenna and George Rennie, of Mono, faced the music and danced to the tune of $10 and costs each, except the latter two, who were let off with $5 and costs. The total amount of the fines will be in the neighborhood of $75. A pretty good revenue for one day.

LUCKY AND UNLUCKY APPLICANTS.—Chairman George Dodds and Commissioners Robt. Beatty and Dr. Smith, license commissioners for the county of Dufferin, met in the court house here, on Friday morning, and granted licenses to John Harshaw, H. Crozier, John Coleman, James Bennett, Shaw & Young, John Irving, John Hicks, A. W. McCarthy (hotels), T. MacAdam, J. Longeway (shops), Orangeville; R. W. Tuck, John Witter, Joseph Black, Shelburne; Thos. Bird, And. Martin, Grand Valley; Thos. Henderson, George McCarthy, Rosemont; W. J. Morrison, Camilla; R. Perfect, Springbrook; Geo. Cook, Mansfield; W. H. Beatty, Stanton; James Dean, Primrose; Mrs. Forgrave, Maxville; John Trouten, Hereward. The applications of Louis Ward, W. H. Cleminger, Melcher; P. McGarvey, Laurel; Sam Moore, Redickville; Thos. Grierson, Corbetton; Robert Gillespie, Shelburne; Emma Smith, Ed. Lerson, Orangeville, had not enough names to their petitions, and they were, therefore, not acted upon. One more license will be granted in town, and the fight is between J. E. Duffy and Joseph Edmunds, with odds in favor of Duff. The commissioners will meet on Monday and settle the question.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Teachings of Experience.—The united testimony of thousands, extending over more than forty years, most strongly recommends these Pills as the best purifiers, the mildest aperients, and the surest restoratives. They never prove delusive, or give merely temporary relief, but attack all ailments of the stomach, lungs, heart, head and bowels in the only safe and legitimate way, by cleansing the blood, and so eradicating those impurities which are the source and constituent of almost every disease. Their medicinal efficacy is wonderful in renovating enfeebled constitutions. Their action embraces all that is desirable in a household medicine. They remove every noxious and effete matter; and thus the strength is nurtured and the energies stimulated.

A TERRIBLE MISHAP

MR. G. B. ISLAND KILLED AT THE C. P. STATION

On Tuesday—Both the Victim's Legs Crushed under the Wheels—Medical Attendance soon on the Spot—Who is Responsible for the Accident?

One of the most thrilling and lamentable accidents that has ever taken place in Orangeville occurred at the C. P. R. station at 10 45 o'clock Tuesday morning. Mr. Geo. B. Island, a widely known and highly respected resident of Orangeville, was the victim. It appears that Mr. Island had come from Toronto that morning by the Toronto Grey & Bruce train, and had walked across after alighting from the train to the station, where he conversed with some of his friends. He forgot to bring his valise out of the car, and returned to get it. He got his valise and was retracing his steps to the station. Just at that moment the G. V. R. train from the city was approaching unobserved by the deceased, who had just advanced the right foot inside the rail. The piolet of the engine struck the unfortunate man and threw him violently against the platform. The wheels of the engine or tender passed over his legs, mutilating them fearfully, and dragging him a distance of about forty feet. Baggageman Davidson, who witnessed the accident, ran and caught Mr. Island's head just in time to prevent the whole of his body from being drawn under the wheels.

A stretcher, which is kept at the station for any emergency, was immediately procured, and the body, which a minute before was full of life, but now reduced to a helpless condition, was placed thereon and carried into the waiting-room.

Drs. Henry, Smith and Lewis arrived upon the scene very shortly after the accident took place. A consultation was held, and it was decided to amputate both legs—the right above the knee, and the left below the knee. The operation was performed in the most skilful manner, it being the last resort to save his life. He was conscious after being picked up and remained so until a quantity of ether had been administered. After the operation had been performed he regained his senses and retained them until the hour of his death, which occurred at 9.30 P.M., exactly ten hours and three quarters from the time the engine struck him.

His wife and family were at his side shortly after the sad occurrence, and remained with him until he fell asleep forever. He leaves a widow and three of a family—two sons and a daughter. The loss of a loving husband and a tender father will be greatly felt by them.

The insurance policies on his life, we believe, amount to $6,000; $2000 in the A. O. U. W; $2000 in the Select Knights, $1000 in the Confederation Life and $1000 in the Travellers' Accident Ins. Co.

The funeral will leave his late residence, corner of Broadway and Second streets, this afternoon at three o'clock for the Forest Lawn cemetery. The A. O. U. W. and Select Knight lodges, of which deceased was a member, will attend the funeral in a body and pay their last sad rites to their departed brother.

THE INQUEST.

Corner Henry, acting upon instructions from Crown-Attorney MacMillan, summoned a jury and commenced an inquestin the council chamber last evening. Crown Attorney McMillan looked after the people's interests, and Mayor Walsh appeared for the C. P. R.

The jury retired to the residence of deceased and viewed the body. They returned in a brief space of time and began to take the evidence.

George Shannon, a young medical student of the town, was the first witness. He said he was at the station Tuesday morning; saw the C. V. R. train arrive; saw a man being knocked over by the cow-catcher of the engine; he and several others ran to the man's assistance; he recognized the man as Mr. Island; could not say at what rate of speed the train was running; deceased complained of a pain in the back. The witness then went on to describe how deceased was treated by the doctors.

Dr. Lewis was the next witness. He arrived on the scene about seven or ten minutes after the accident had taken place. He described the nature of the wounds and how they were attended to.

The inquest was then adjourned until 7.30 this evening.

The jury consists of the following gentlemen: W. T. Bailey (foreman) Marshall Green, Jesse Ketchum, D. McDonald, F. Marshall, R. McKeown, W. Still, N. Sproul, John Avison, T. G. Porter, E. McLean, Jas. Matthews, Jas. Bable, T. McAdam, Wm. Hall, J. W. Stevenson, Wm. Fleming and A. Smith.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Adam Jones is dangerously ill with pleurisy.

Mrs. Dr. Henry has returned from a visit to Toronto.

Mr. G. H. Hannah, of Shelburne, was in town on Tuesday.

Miss M. J. Wilkins, of Toronto, is visiting in town at present.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. McManus left for Barrie on Monday evening last.

Mr. W. Gilkinson, who has been confined to his room for the past week, is recovering.

Judge McMahon will preside at the at the assizes which open in the court house here on Monday.

Mrs. Wm. Hall has been summoned to the bedside of her father, who is dangerously ill at Inglewood.

Coming Events.

Coming consumption is foreshadowed by a hacking cough, night sweats, pain in the chest, etc. Arrest its progress at once by taking Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, which never fails to cure coughs, colds, bronchitis, hoarseness, etc., and even in confirmed consumption affords grateful relief.

Boston scientists have discovered why trees do not flourish near electric lights. They need the repose of darkness just like people.

If you suffer from cold in the head or from Chronic Catarrh in the Head, use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It cures when everything else fails.

THAT MOULDERS' STRIKE.

To the Editor of THE SUN:

DEAR SIR,—We were very much surprised to see an item in your paper to the effect that the moulders employed in Gordon's foundry had gone out on strike and had returned to work on the old terms. Now, we did not go out on strike and are not in the habit of "returning to work on the old terms" when said terms do not suit us, we trust you will give the report a flat denial, as it is calculated to injure us should such a report gain currency throughout the country. We cannot understand how such a report got abroad. Again, we are not employed by Mr Gordon. We are working by the piece for Mr. J. A. McMaster, who has rented the moulding shop, and we are rapidly turning out castings for the Turnbull binder. Everything is running smoothly and is likely so to do, for an indefinite time. Yours etc.

C. A. PIERCE,
F. McNAMARA.

Orangeville, Apr. 22nd '90.

[It is quite easily for us to understand "how such a report get about." Our reporter "caught on" to the rumor and went to the foundry and asked the proprietor if the statement wad correct. He answered us in the affirmative and furnished us with a statement of the case. The Sun contained a local on the matter, and, as everybody reads this spicy journal, the report soon gained currency. However, the moulders' statement finds a place in our columns and the Turnbull binder receives an ad., gratis.—Ed.

Constipation

Demands prompt treatment. The results of neglect may be serious. Avoid all harsh and drastic purgatives, the tendency of which is to weaken the bowels. The best remedy is Ayer's Pills. Being purely vegetable, their action is prompt and their effect always beneficial. They are an admirable Liver and Aperient pill, and everywhere endorsed by the profession.

"Ayer's Pills are highly and universally spoken of by the people about here. I make daily use of them in my practice."—Dr. J. E. Fowler, Bridgeport, Conn.

"I can recommend Ayer's Pills above all others, having long proved their value as a cathartic for myself and family."—J. T. Hess, Lexington, Pa.

"For several years Ayer's Pills have been used in my family. We find them an

Effective Remedy

for constipation and indigestion, and are never without them in the house."—Moses Greiner, Lowell, Mass.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for liver troubles and indigestion, during many years, and have always found them prompt and efficient in their action."—L. N. Smith, Utica, N. Y.

"I suffered from constipation which assumed such an obstinate form that I feared it would cause a stoppage of the bowels. Two boxes of Ayer's Pills effected a complete cure."—D. Burke, Lacey, Mo.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for the past thirty years and consider them an invaluable family medicine. I know of no better remedy for liver troubles, and have always found them a prompt cure for dyspepsia."—James Quinn, 38 Middle st., Hartford, Conn.

"Having been troubled with costiveness, which seems to yield with persons of sedentary habits, I have tried Ayer's Pills, hoping for relief. I am glad to say that they have served me better than any other medicine. I arrive at this conclusion only after a faithful trial of their merits."—Samuel T. Jones, Oak st., Boston, Mass.

A PROFANE VILLAGE.

(By our own Poet)

In the gold-brim of the West,
Where nestling like nest now,
Stands a bench the commissioner's crest,
A modest village scene.

Now Hay, a rough pinnover,
Has built a dam and sluice
To turn the commissioner's wild career
Into a lush spot.

The early settlers all agree,
In honor of old Sam,
That Bessie's future name shall be
On Earth as Hay Dam.

It happened there, one summer day,
A traveler of fame
Did stroll this village on his way
And (high to know its name)

Addressed a man with heavy face,
Bronchitis in sulfurs guise:
"Good Sir, pray what do you call this place?"
"Yer be damn," the man replies.

Red in a dame, in russet brown,
He makes a low salaam:
"Sir, madam, what do you call this town?"
"Yes be damn!"

Then, in a little wheen'd cud,
With face like smoke-dried ham,
"Pray what do you call this place, my lad?"
The boy shrieks, "yes be damn!"

The good man's face was red to see,
He felt heart-sick and sore,
For such uncouth profanity
He never heard before.

And promptly his departure took,
With anxious steps and fleet,
And, in righteous indignation, shook
The dust from off his feet.

He prayed that gospel grace be given
To Hay's abandoned men,
And hopes a place so far from heaven,
He may never reach again.

A PROFANE VILLAGE.

(By our own Poet)

In the gold fields of the west,
Where mining life was new,
Nestled 'neath the mountain's crest,
A lonely village grew.

In City, a rough pioneer,
Now built a dam and sluice
To stop the streamlet's wild career
And turn it into use.

The early settlers all agree,
In honor of old Sam
Their hamlet's future name shall be
And forth so Ubi Dam

It kept on d this, one summer day,
A minister of fame
Did stroll this village on his way
And (Sign to know its name)

Addressed a man with brawny face,
Bedecked in miners guise
"Good Sir, pray what do you call this place?"
"I'm be damn, the man replies.

Red to a dame, in russet brown,
He makes a low salaam
"Pray, madam, what do you call this town?"
She answers, "you be damn!"

Then, to a little wizened owl,
With face like smoke dried ham,
"Say what do you call this place, my lad?"
The boy shrieks "you be damn

The good man's face was sad to see,
He felt heartsick and sore,
For such uncouth profanity
He never heard before

And promptly his departure took,
With anxious steps and fleet,
And in righteous indignation, shook
The dust from off his feet.

Prayer that gospel grace be given
To those abandoned men,
Lest they, a place so far from heaven,
Know never reach again

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Notes from the American Capital by Our own Correspondent.

Washington April 18, 1890.

The international body which dissolves to day has claims upon the world which the world may wait till to morrow to admit. Admit them it will. Some of its work is merely vague and preliminary. But if, in course of time, American peace, almost from pole to pole, prevails in consequence of the holding of this conference; if a convenient international currency shall result from it, and reciprocity in trade—an extent application of the free trade existing between the states of our federal union—the work will have repaid the workers and the verdict of humanity will have been. It takes long years to develop the benefits of a far-reaching enterprise like this. Let no one be discouraged if no immediate result whatever follows upon the deliberations of the congress. In the nature of things trade cannot be turned from its channels in a day, or a month or year. Our visitors have been with us nearly a half year. They have labored assiduously with our own delegates to accomplish the several purposes for which they assembled. They have visited a number of American cities and inspected American industry on the spot. They go forth from the Capital again, this time to enjoy southern hospitality and witness southern progress. Upon their return from a three weeks' tour to that part of the republic they will take final leave of the capital and bid adieu to our shores. The country rejoices in the prospects of good to grow out of the congress of all the Americas, and extends its best wishes to the foreign delegates, our brethren in neighborhood and republicanism.

The tariff bill and report and the two minority views are at last before the the country. The bill is professedly a protective measure, intended to build up a home market as to everything except sugar. It is advocated on this very ground and attention is called to the fact that the committee of ways and means is concerned rather with production than with prices. The report of the minority party sets forth strongly the argument against protection. Mr. McKenna, in a minority republican report, expresses to views of the sugar producers who are numerous in his state of California and in the states of Louisiana, Kansas and Nebraska. To this dissenting member of the majority, protection is a principle to be applied to all industries or none.

The "prequisites" of Uncle Sam's solons at the different ends of the Capitol afford an amusing as well as a striking study in facts and contrasts. Free shaves and hair cuts are prequisites of Senators but not of Representatives, though why this distinction is made is not easy to find out. This commercial foresight reflects to advantage, however, upon the wisdom of the sages who see at the feet of Vice President Morton. It has been thought judicious to encourage the habit of bathing among congressmen and owing to this commendable purpose baths were made free to both House and Senate, it being thought that no member would be likely to resist indulgence in anything that was gratis. Liberal members often give the attendant 50 cents for his services, but it is averred that Senators are usually too dignified to offer tips. If there is anything to be paid the Senate prefers to pay it out of the contingent fund. The House has also a special officer in the person of a chiropodist, who ministers to the afflicted Representatives free of charge. Each member of Congress has as a prequisite $125 worth of stationary. Formerly "stationary" included such things as opera glasses, clocks, brushes and combs, &c. &c all of which were kept in stock by the big government stationers' shops at either end of the capitol building. In those times Senators and Representatives were accustomed each year to lay in their supplies of Christmas presents from their stationary allowance, but alas! the privilege of the national legislator are being sadly cut down year by year. It is even proposed now to take away his power of directing the appointment of fourth-class postmasters in the district.

The majority report the minority report and the report of Representative Mckenna from the ways and means committee on the tariff give a joint indication of the unanimity of opinion on that issue in this country.

The present trouble in the mind of the sugar men is the fear that the proposed bounty will be repealed. Some of them do not trust even the present Congress and charge that the bounty clause was put in the bill to be omitted by the House.

Hides may come off, but they stand on the free list now. Whether it were better to peel them off or lose the party's cuticle later—that was the question.

Even Senator Vance's poetry failed to prevent the seating of the Republican Senatorial contestants from Montana.

It will be noticed that the wool tariff is still on the carpet.

How Dyspepsia Is Cured.

I suffered from dyspepsia, and was weak and miserable with what the doctor said was nervous debility. Seeing Burdock Blood Bitters advertised I tried it, and after taking three bottles feel perfectly restored to health. Mrs S H Simms, Kerrisburg, Ont.

GIVEN AWAY.—Any one sending one dollar to the Canadian Agriculturist, Peterborough, Ontario, will receive that splendidly illustrated journal for one full year and two beautiful pictures, which are guaranteed to be worth much more than the price of the paper. These pictures are not cheap chromos, but are positively the finest goods ever offered by any publisher. The Canadian Agriculturist is a large 32 page journal, of continental circulation, which ranks among the leading agricultural papers. It treats the question of economy in agricultural and the rights and privileges of that vast body of citizens—the farmers—whose industry is the basis of all material and national prosperity. Its highest purpose is the elevation and ennobling of agriculture through the higher and broader education of men and women engaged in its pursuits. The regular subscription price of the Canadian Agriculturist is $1.00 per year. The home department is ably conducted. Short stories, fire side reading, receipts and guide to the management of the home and kitchen, are prominent features of this excellent home paper. Send one dollar and get the paper for a year and two handsome pictures that are an ornament to any parlour. Address: The Canadian Agriculturist, Peterborough, Ontario.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Mr. L. O. David, Q.C., has been appointed sheriff of Montreal.

The nine-hour day partially prevails in St. John, N. B.

Smith's cider mill at Guelph was burned Saturday morning.

Over 15,000 smuggled cigars, valued at $2,500, have been seized at Key West, Fla.

It is reported that 600 miles of rail way will be constructed in Manitoba and the North-west this season.

A rumor comes from Quebec city that the provincial elections will take place June 10.

H. A. Long, the "converted actor," has skipped from Hamilton, leaving five months' board bill behind him.

John Dunn, a Welland farmer, was drowned in the canal at Port Robinson while drunk last Thursday.

Winnipeg is financially embarrassed and wants to borrow $100,000 from the local government.

Ed. McHoney, foreman of the Detroit Evening News, shot himself dead on a street in Windsor, Tuesday evening.

For the delicate and aged and all in whom the vital system is impoverished and sluggish, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the very best tonic. It restores the wasted tissues, and imparts to the system surprising elasticity and vigor. Price $1. Worth $5 a bottle.

The Dominion Government has decided to reduce canal tolls on oats for export to the same basis as those upon wheat and other grains, but the oats will have to be bonded during their passage through Canada.

Fifteen years ago the first cotton mill was established in Canada. There are now 24 mills, containing 600,000 spindles. In 1879, 1,245,208 pounds of cotton were imported for home consumption; in 1888, 28,727 525 pounds. The number of operatives employed has increased 80 per cent. in five years, and Canadian factories now supply 158,000,000 yards of material to meet the wants of the inhabitants of the Dominion. And yet the Grits tell us the country is going to the dogs.

The Opinion of an Insurance Man.

W. A. Doyle, manager and secretary of the Minota Farmers' Mutual Insurance Co., Beulah, Man., says:—My wife and myself have commenced the use of Nasal Balm, and the benefit and comfort derived from it warrants a continuance of its use.

LA SALLE, Ill., April 20.—A fire started last night in a lower level of shaft No. 2 of the Spring Valley Coal Company's mines. This forenoon Superintendent John Eustice with a gang of men went below to check the flames. They sent back orders which were understood to be to shut off the air supply. This was done. The shaft quickly filled with gas, and Eustice, N. P. Akeyson, and Jacob Williamson were suffocated. Their two companions were rescued before losing consciousness.

Thursday night there died at Grace Hospital, Detroit, of general debility, William better known as "Bill" McLaughlin, one of the widest known drivers of trotting horses in the United States. He was born near Guelph about fifty five years ago, and for quite a number of years acted as a rider of running horses, displaying on many occasions an amount of nerve and reckless dash that astonished all who saw him. In 1861 he made his first appearance as a driver of trotting horses in Chicago, and for over twenty years thereafter figured in most of the big race meetings that took place in this country. About three years ago he began to break down, and has been unable to do much since. He is survived by two sons one who resides in Saginaw, the other in Jackson.

Rev J. W. Sanborn, of Lockport, N Y., in his pulpit Easter Sunday announced that he had but six cents in his pocket and his family had had only a three cent meal each for the past six weeks to subsist on. He claimed that the church was trying to starve him out, and that he could not stand it longer. Mr Sanborn is the celebrated Indian scholar, and is pastor of the First Methodist church of that city. He has a world famed reputation, having lectured before the British Historical society at London and at Cooper Institute in New York last fall. The wealthy portion of the congregation were provoked because Mr Sanborn would not discontinue a series of revival meetings and joined a sensational evangelist named Datman who has been aired in the papers and who drove one poor girl crazy in the city. His enemies tried to have the bishop remove him, but the pastor's friends rallied to his support and compelled the bishop to reappoint him. Then began the starving out process. Pastors of other denominations and wealthy members of other churches have aided him out of his financial strait. The affair calls out severe criticism upon the church.

The English law courts have decided that the dishorning of cattle is cruelty within the meaning of the statute, and that the practice, therefore, is illegal, while in Scotland the opinion of the courts is exactly the reverse. If the bullocks could speak they would probably side with the English judges, for, according to an elaborate account of the operation furnished to a Scotch newspaper by a special reporter, the animals by no means relish the removal of their horns, whether by the saw or by the scissors. In some cases the animals "emitted a cry," in others they struggled, in others they gave a start. The cut horns bled freely, a sanguinary jet starting from the horn and falling at a distance of 3 feet or 4 feet from the head. In some cases three fountains of blood started out of a single horn, and fell to the ground a full yard off. It is true that the cattle fed, even when the blood was running into the trough from the ragged stumps, but this is hardly a proof that they did not suffer. The dishorning of calves is perhaps the worst form of the practice, for the budding horn is dug out with a knife, and to prevent aftergrowth the orifice is scarred with a red hot iron.

LOVE VS. CASH IN ROCKTON.

Two young men loved the same girl. One had $1,000 in cash and the other was poor. The thousand dollar man was very much in earnest, and offered the money to the poor suitor as an inducement for him to retire from the field. The offer was accepted but when the girl heard of it she declared her love for the man who got the $1,000. They were married and have used the money in starting house keeping. The die appointed suitor has sued to recover the money. The jury has not decided the case yet.—Dundas True Banner.

A SCHOOL BOY'S FIND.

COLBORNE, April 21.—A Coroner's inquest was held here this evening upon the body of an infant found by Nelson Casey, a schoolboy, on Friday afternoon last while fishing in the creek which crosses the Bennett farm. The lad gave evidence to the effect that while stirring up the water with his fish pole he stirred up the body, which he supposed to be a wax doll. He then caught it upon his hook and lifted it out. A string was around its neck, to which a stone was attached. He put it in a small box and took it home. The child has the appearance of being stillborn. A post-mortem is to be held, and the jury adjourned till next Monday evening.

For nearly half a century Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been the most popular cough remedy in the world. The constantly increasing demand for this remedy proves it to be the very best specific for colds, coughs and all diseases of the throat and lungs.

A DANGER SIGNAL!

A Cold in the Head may be aptly termed a danger signal warning you that if neglected that dangerous and disagreeable disease, Catarrh, is sure to follow, perhaps leading to Consumption and the grave. At no season of the year is Cold in the Head more prevalent than during the Spring months and at no other season do the people of this country suffer more generally from Catarrh, with all its disagreeable and annoying effects. Do not for an instant neglect either of these troubles, but apply NASAL BALM, the only remedy that will give instant relief and effect a thorough cure. The following testimonials from among thousands in our possession bear witness to its sterling merit.

Alex. Burns, Sudbury, Ont., says: I may state that I have been affected with Catarrh seven or eight years, and it was attended by consequent symptoms such as foul breath, constant dropping into the throat, hawking and spitting, partial deafness, ringing in the ears and sickening pains in the head directly over either eye. I have used powders and douches, but all to no effect, the only result arising from the use of such was temporary relief, followed by the usual symptoms in a more aggravated form. The results arising from the use of Nasal Balm: Sweet breath, stoppage of the droppings into the throat, (consequently less hawking and spitting), clearness of hearing, and not once since I began its use have I had pain in the head. In fact, it is my opinion that a careful and persistent use of the Balm will effect a cure in the worst case of catarrh.

T. D. D. Loyd, 8 Clarence street, Toronto says: I wish here to testify to the unequalled healing powers of your Nasal Balm. I have been troubled for three years by what the doctors call post nasal catarrh, and have tried everything in the city that could be obtained, in the shape of catarrh cures, and found no permanent relief from any of them, till a friend one day advised me to try your Nasal Balm, and I find that even one bottle has done me more good than all the medicines put together that I have persecuted myself with before. I was very much troubled with spitting and hawking, especially in the morning, so much so that my throat was continually in a raw condition, but I am now beginning to know what it is to be able to speak freely. I shall not fail to recommend it to any of my friends suffering from the like disease.

NASAL BALM
INSTANTLY RELIEVES
Cold in Head.

A. W. Mallory, Mallorytown, Ont., says: My daughter suffered for years from a most distressing and annoying Catarrh. Her case was under the treatment of eminent physicians in the United States and Canada. Two months use of Nasal Balm has had more beneficial effects than all former treatment combined.

L. D. Dion, Dept. Railways and Canals, Ottawa, says: I am very glad to give you to-day the testimony that Nasal Balm has completely cured my catarrh, from which I suffered for nearly three years.

NASAL BALM
POSITIVELY CURES
CATARRH.

D. Derbyshire, Mayor of Brockville and President of the Ontario Creamery Association, says: Nasal Balm beats the world for Catarrh and Cold in the Head. In my own case it effected relief from the first application.

Isaac Waterman, Imperial Oil Co'y, Petrolia, Ont., says: Nasal Balm gave me the most perfect satisfaction of any medicine I ever used for Cold in the Head. I found it easy to use, quick in giving relief and effect a complete cure in a couple of hours.

If Nasal Balm is not kept in stock by your dealer it will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 Cent for small and $1 for large size bottles) by addressing

KEEP AT IT.

One step and then another,
And the longest task is ended;
One stitch and then another,
And the rent is mended;
One brick upon another,
And the highest wall is made;
One flake upon another,
And the deepest snow is laid.

So the little coral workers,
By their slow and constant motions,
Have built these pretty islands
In the distant southern oceans;
And the noblest undertakings
Man's wisdom hath concerived,
By oft repeated efforts
Have been patiently achieved.

Then, do not look disheartened
On the work you have to do,
And say that such a mighty task
You never can get through;
But just endeavor day by day
Another point to gain,
And soon the mountain which you fear
Will prove to be a plain!

CATCHING SUNSHINE.

My next door neighbor's little girl,
A growing two year old,
Wondered one day why dropped the flowers,
And pleaded to be told.

Then said her mamma, "Here in doors
The sunshine doesn't come
To warm and bless and gladden them,
And drive away their gloom.

And so they droop as children do,
Who get no tender love
To cheer them on that upward way
Wherein we all must move."

Next day when mamma went to seek
Her darling at her play,
She found her standing in the sun,
In just the queerest way.

For there she held aloft a cup
Above her pretty head,
"Where are you doing, Lulu dear?"
Mamma, astonished, said.

And she, her cup still held aloft—
"Oh, see her, ye heavenly powers!
I'm catching sunshine, mamma dear,
To give my little flowers."

Type of all children there was she,
Who in life's garden-pleasaunce,
Still holding patiently aloft
Each life-cup in their hand.

We, buried in our solid cares,
Are all were that droop and die;
They catch that sunshine as it pours
Forever from on high.

Upon our weary, aching hearts
They let its blessings fall;
These offices in every land,
In cottage, hut or hall.

And so the world is kept alive,
And freshened every minute,
By the deep grace that overflows
The children that are in it.

SUNBEAMS.

The warmth of social sunshine is never disseminated by mock smiles.

The cable tells that great preparations are made for the beauty show of all nations that will take place at Rome in May. Coming at the same time as the report of Rome's bankruptcy, it must mean that the receipts from the beauty exhibit are to be applied to the city's debt. Beauty had a good deal to do with saving Rome in "that elder day," and hence the habit of depending on the ladies in a case of extreme distress. As it is an international show, the whole earth now has a chance to redeem the Eternal City.

IN THE SOUTH.

BUREAU OF SOUTHERN NEWS, Raleigh, N. C.

THE YOUNG MEN OF THE SOUTH.

It has often been said that the young man is the hope of the Nation. If this be true in the general sense, it is forcibly true in the case of the young man of the South. Does he hear and consider the sound of going among the trees; the note of preparation for future work? Does he see and appreciate the movement going on around him, which means industrial development and future wealth? Does he feel the stir and movement of the day? Will he be quick to perceive and seize the opportunities of the hour? And will he measure up to the demands and responsibilities of the times? If so, then is the young man the hope of the South. We will not give direct answers to our own questions, but will try to show to our readers the young man of the South, and let them answer the questions.

The young man of the South to-day is the product of one of the greatest social revolutions which ever affected a civilized nation. The present condition of the social structure and its condition before the civil war, are as unlike as a rich meadow well coated with clover and grasses, and a garden showing at the same time the most beautiful flowers and the most noxious weeds. Before the war society was divided into two classes; viz. the poor whites, without education and refinement, almost without the common decencies of life, with out health or the means to acquire, and yet counting in the census and in the political life of the people. The other class consisting of planters and important business men was fairly wealthy, with the means of wealth always within their reach; they were able to give their children the best educational advantages, and to surround them in their homes with comforts and luxuries. Both classes reproduce themselves as the generations followed each other, almost without change. The poor whites remained poor whites, and the young men grew up to be like their fathers. The rich and prosperous remained rich and prosperous, and the sons succeeded to the advantages of the fathers. The sons of the lower class, without education, still were educated to believe that they were to be nothing more than their fathers, and that they existed mainly to fill the gap between the negroes and the ruling whites. The sons of the other class were educated to and with the idea that they were to be the future business men, law makers, governors and presidents of the land. The two classes lived side by side, yet far apart. They did not intermarry, and they were socially separated and distinct. More than that. Generations of such life and conditions had made them almost two distinct types of humanity in personal appearance.

But the civil war came, and all the men of the South of every condition and almost every age, were swept into its destructive current. The existence of a common belief in the justice of their cause; the common discipline of the camp; the common necessities of the march; and the common dangers of the battle field, leveled all distinctions. Then the drawing together process of the two classes of people began. Similar influences were at work at home, too, during the progress of the war. A common cause and a common suffering were breaking down social distinction, and were drawing together those who had lived apart. The close of the war left all alike poor, and face to face with the solid fact that henceforth they must work for a living. Labor had been menial; the fortunes of war made it a necessity; its pleasures and its gains have now made it honorable in all. The conditions forced upon all classes of people at the South still continue, though modified in some degree. As a result of those conditions a new social life has been evolved, and is now quite well established. The upper class has lost its opportunities and means for education, culture, refinement and luxurious living. The lower class has gained greater opportunities for acquiring education and wealth. The children of the upper class have manfully accepted the situation, and by labor of hand and head are working out their own support and the support of those dependent upon them. The descendants of the working class, working side by side with the others, are forcing themselves into the avenues of wealth—agriculture, business of all kinds and the professions. The present generation of the two classes associate and intermarry without a thought of former distinctions, the physical types of personal appearance are rapidly vanishing away, and within a few years it will not be possible to find proof of the existence of such former types, except in those districts most remote from all changing influences. Social equality exists nowhere. There are social distinctions in the South as in the North, but they are formed in a different manner, and rest on a different basis from those of days before the war. As was stated above, the young man of the South to-day is the product of the tremendous changes which we have briefly described. He recognizes social distinctions; lives in them, but not with social classes. He is doing all kinds of manual and mechanical labor, and pushing himself into all classes of business, into all professions, politics and legislative bodies. He is ready to do any work, engage in any business, or hold any office. Whatever he does he does cheerfully and hopefully. Young men, descendants of parents who were rich before the war, may now be found cheerfully and uncomplainingly performing hard manual labor as a necessity of living. They may sometimes speak of the former times and say they wish they had them back, but seldom in that tone or manner which constitutes a complaint. The Young men of the South are courageous in undertaking. No matter how great the work or how hard, if they understand its nature they will undertake it courageously and work through it patiently. They are hopeful. As they compare the present condition of the South with its condition twenty years ago, they see great gain; and they base their hopes for the future on the promise of the past. They are not disheartened by temporary set backs and losses. They have been accustomed to them and have learned that a temporary loss is not a crushing defeat.

They have not enjoyed and do not now enjoy the advantages for education which the young men of the North have; but they work more while having them, and use them more effectually in the practical business of life. The young man of the South lives in the present and hopes for the future. He cares no more about the past than the young man of the North, and studies the causes of the Civil War in the same manner. Our personal experience with the young business men of the South is that they are upright and honorable in all their dealings. They have a just regard for the value of a good name.

To sum up, the young man of the South of to-day presents a character to be admired; a character which promises to build up a good business and social fabric. The young man of the South is really the hope of his part of our common country.

Can You Do Better

When attacked by fever, sore throat, colds, rheumatism, neuralgia, sprains, bruises, burns or any kind of pain or soreness, can you do better than use Yellow Oil? It is a medicine which never fails to give satisfaction. It is unequalled in speed to cure pain, and is the most and best remedy where soreness and inflammation exist.

THE DUNNVILLE TRAGEDY.

DUNNVILLE, April 14.—Detective Murray, of Toronto, was in Dunnville again to-day in connection with the murder of the man found in the canal here on November 9th, 1888. He was accompanied by Mr John Lawrie, of Toronto, who identified the body as that of his father, Mr. David Lawrie, of Toronto, a harnessmaker, formerly of Montreal, where he at one time carried on an extensive business and gave it up on account of ill health. Mr. Lawrie says his father had considerable money with him at the time, about $800 or more, and was looking about among the small country towns with the object of starting in business. The murdered man last wrote to his family from Cayuga on October 29th, since which time no trace of him could be found. Mr. Murray says he is indebted to the public press of Toronto for being able to have the body identified, as it was the description there given some weeks ago that was noticed by the unfortunate man's family. The prisoner Ciemo will be tried at Cayuga on the 28th instant. Mr. Murray says there are others connected with the crime who are not yet in custody.

is very likely the one that has conveyed poisons to your system from some old well, whose waters have become contaminated from sewers, vaults, or privies hidden from the soil. To eradicate these poisons from the system and save yourself a spell of malaria, typhoid or bilious fever, and to keep the liver, kidneys and lungs in a healthy and vigorous condition, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It arouses all the excretory organs into activity, thereby cleansing and purifying the system, freeing it from all manner of blood-poisons, no matter from what cause they have arisen. All diseases originating from a torpid or deranged liver, or from impure blood, yield to its wonderful curative properties. It regulates the stomach and bowels, promotes the appetite and digestion, and cures Dyspepsia, "Liver Complaint," and Chronic Diarrhœa. Salt-rheum, Tetter, Eczema, Erysipelas, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Enlarged Glands and Tumors disappear under its use.

"Golden Medical Discovery" is the only blood and liver medicine sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee of its benefiting or curing in every case, or money paid for it will be promptly returned.

CATARRH,

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS—HAY FEVER.

A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N.B.—This treatment is not a snuff or an ointment; both have been discarded by reputable physicians as injurious. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 West King Street, Toronto, Canada.—Toronto Globe.

Sufferers from Catarrhal troubles should carefully read the above.

The Favorite

Medicine for Throat and Lung Difficulties has long been and still is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It cures Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and Asthma; soothes irritation of the Larynx and Larynx; strengthens the Vocal Organs; gives soundness of the Lungs; prevents Consumption, and even in advanced stages of that disease, lessens Coughing and induces Sleep. There is no other preparation for diseases of the throat and lungs to be compared with this remedy.

"My wife had a distressing cough, with pains in the side and breast. We tried various medicines, but none did her any good until I got a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which has cured her. A neighbor, Mrs. Olsen, had the measles, and the cough was relieved by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have no hesitation in recommending this to every one afflicted."—Robert Boston, Foreman Heraldight, Morrilton, Ark.

"I have been afflicted with asthma for forty years. Last spring I was taken with a violent cough, which threatened to terminate my days. Every one pronounced me in consumption. I determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Its effects were magical. I was immediately relieved and continued to improve until entirely recovered."—Joel Bullard, Guilford, Conn.

"Six months ago I had a severe hemorrhage of the lungs, brought on by an incessant cough which deprived me of sleep and rest. I tried various remedies, but obtained no relief until I began to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A few bottles of this medicine cured me."—Mrs. E. Coburn, 17 Second st., Lowell, Mass.

"For children afflicted with colds, coughs, sore throat, or croup, I do not know of any remedy which will give more speedy relief than Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have found it also invaluable in cases of Whooping Cough."—Ann Lovejoy, 1237 Washington street, Boston, Mass.

Read this extract from the scientific papers of Great Britain and Europe:

The four greatest medical centres of the world are London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna. These cities have immense hospitals teeming with suffering humanity. Crowds of students throng the wards studying under the Professors in charge. The most renowned physicians of the world teach and practice here, and the institutions are storehouses of medical knowledge and experience. With a view of making this experience available to the public the Hospital Remedy Co. at great expense secured the prescriptions of these hospitals, prepared the specifics, and although it would cost from $25 to $100 to secure the attention of their distinguished originators, yet in this way their prepared specifics are offered at the price of the quack patent medicines that flood the market and absurdly claim to cure every ill from a single bottle.

Lang-Standing

Blood Diseases are cured by the persevering use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

This medicine is an Alterative, and renews a medical change in the system. The process, in some instances may be quite as rapid as in others a cure, with persistence, the result is certain. Read these testimonials:—

"For two years I suffered from a severe pain in my right side, and had other troubles caused by a torpid liver and dyspepsia. After trying several medicines a fair trial without a cure, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, was greatly benefited by the first bottle, and after taking five bottles I was completely cured."—John W. Stevens, 72 Lawrence st., Lowell, Mass.

"Last May a large carbuncle broke out on my arm. The usual remedies had no effect, and I was confined to my bed for eight weeks. A friend induced me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Less than three bottles healed the sores. In all my experience with medicine, I never saw more

Wonderful Results.

Another marked effect of the use of this medicine was the strengthening of my sight."—Mrs. Carrie Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

"I had a dry scaly humor for years, and suffered terribly; and, as my brother and sister were similarly afflicted, I presume the malady is hereditary. Last winter, Dr. Tyron, (of Fernandina, Fla.,) recommended me to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and continue it for a year. For five months I took it daily. I have not had a blemish upon my body for the last three months."—T. E. Wiley, 146 Chambers st., New York City.

"Last fall and winter I was troubled with a dull, heavy pain in my side. I did not notice it much at first, but it gradually grew worse until it became almost unbearable. During the latter part of this time, disorders of the stomach and liver increased my troubles. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after faithfully continuing the use of this medicine for some months, the pain disappeared and I was completely cured."—Mrs. Augusta A. ### THE DAYS GONE BY.

O, the days gone by! O, the days gone by!
The apples in the orchard, and the fresh breeze
Through the rye;
The chirrup of the robin, and the whistle
Of the quail
As he piped across the meadows sweet to
My nightingale;
When the bloom was on the clover, and the Blue was in the sky,
And my happy heart brimmed over in the Days gone by;
In the days gone by, when my naked feet
Were dripping
By the honey-suckle's fragrant bower the Water-lilies dipped
And the ripples of the river lipped the moss
Along the bank,
Where the placid-eyed and hay-footed cattle
Came to drink;
And the dilting snipe stood fearless of the
Trouter's wayward fly
And the splashing of the swimmer, in the Days gone by.

O the days gone by, O the days gone by,
The music of the laughing lip, the lustre of
The eye;
The childish faith in fairies, and Aladdin's
Magic ring—
The simple, soul-repenting, glad belief in Everything—
When life was like a story, holding neither
Sob nor sigh
In the golden, olden glory of the days gone
By.

CHAPTER III.

"WHY DID YOU NOT LET ME DIE?"

"I know
That wheresoever I am, by night and day,
All earth and air seem only burning fire."

There was but one hotel in the little town, "The Brae Arms," and there Alric had gone at times to play at billiards. She remembered that, and perhaps even now he might be there, laughing at the jest—such a cruel jest—so unlike him. Could it be a jest, after all?"

One or two strangers who passed her by looked with wonder at her. Through the thick veil one could see the white face and the burning eyes.

"I must speak calmly," she thought, "or they will think that I am mad."

The landlord himself stood on the steps of the hotel. She clinched her hands so tightly while she spoke to him, that great red dents left their marks there for days afterward.

"Is Mr. Rymer here?" she asked, and the man, who knew her, replied,

"No, madam; he left at four o'clock. He went to meet the train at Glenrock. I understood Mr. Rymer that he was going to Paris."

The landlord, who knew that the lady before him was called Mrs. Rymer, looked at her in wonder. She saw the look. No need to sneer at her yet—she would be dead soon. Before people knew that she had lost her honor and her fair name she would be lying dead—and no one sneers at death. She clinched her hands more tightly, and the physical pain brought her to her senses.

"Thank you," she replied; "I did not know that he had gone."

Then she walked away, with no trace of the deadly despair that had mastered her in her manner.

"That seems queer," said the landlord to himself. "Why should he go to Paris without telling his wife?"

Still, it did not concern him and he resumed his former occupation of whistling "The Laird o' Cockpen."

How was she to die? There was no mistake now—no hope left: it was no jest but a grim, horrible truth—a shame she would not face, a disgrace she could not endure—but the difficulty remained, how was she to die?

Great flushes of crimson were in the sky, and the rosy light lay on the pavement. She passed happy homesteads, where the father watched with smiles the gambols of his children, while the mother sung at her work. She passed happy young lovers, whose shy glances told their secret; and all the time pain and anguish were at her heart.

She could not bear it. There was to be no more happy home for her, no more belief in a husband's love, nor delight in the smiles of a child. She must die soon—die before that golden sun set, and before men knew the story of her shame.

There before her was a druggist's shop. Plenty of means of death there. She entered. There was only a boy behind the counter; the master was out. She went up to him.

"I want some laudanum;" she said, "I am suffering intense pain, and I must have some at once."

The boy looked up with something like a smile.

"Is it toothache?" he asked; and she whose lips had never been sullied with a false word, bowed.

"You had better take a bottle of this," he added, pointing to some patent medicine.

"Yes," she replied, impatiently, "I will take that as well; but I must have laudanum. Nothing but laudanum will deaden my pain."

"I do not know if I can sell poison. There is some law or other about it."

"You can sell it to trustworthy people. I have to sign my name in a book. You know my name—I am Mrs. Rymer, of Lake Cottage."

Then before she had finished the words she remembered that she had no claim to that name—it was not hers. The boy did not understand the crimson flush that came over her face, he thought, the pain had caused it. He placed the bottle of laudanum on the counter and served her with a small quantity. She was longing for death—death, that should free her from shame. She sent the boy to another part of the shop, and he, all unsuspicious, went. While he was gone she took the bottle and filled the little vial that she had in her hand, then she paid him and hastened away. The door of the other world was opened to her now. She held the key in her hands.

Slowly she walked down the quiet street. At the end stood the old church from the tower of which came the pealing of bells, the sweet old chimes. It was no longer a question of how should she die—but where. Where should she take her last look at the fair, smiling earth. Before her lay the church-yard; there the dead slept in peace; there was rest from shame, from disgrace, from misery. She would go there, and, sitting on one of those green graves, would drink the laudanum and die.

"That is my death-knell," she said to herself, listening to the plaintive, sweet chimes. She sat down on a grave that had been made under the shade of a hawthorn tree, then looked round on earth and sky. Her farewell glance, and, ah, me! how fair that world was; how grand the distant hills, covered with pine, covered with heather; how beautiful the summer woods, with their shady calm and springing flowers, how beautiful the little town and the old church, with its ivy-clad towers, how beautiful those great flushes of crimson light in the western skies; how sweet the song of the birds, and the chime of the bells.

She was going to leave it all, because the selfish sin of one man had made her life intolerable to her. She was mad with shame and sorrow; no thought of right or wrong came to her. She never once remembered that her life was not her own to destroy when she would; she remembered only the shame of her position and the blight of her life.

She would not remember her past; she would not dwell upon the innocent days of her girlhood, the days when he who had deserted her had taught her to love him. She would dwell upon nothing but her betrayal and desertion.

Suddenly, as she sat there with the poison in her hand, she thought of the little child; in the madness of her anguish she had almost forgotten it—the child who, when she was dead, would be left alone and friendless in the wide world.

"Better that—better that," she moaned to herself, "than that it should know its mother's story."

Then she raised the vial to her lips, and across the bewildered mind and whirling brain came the thought that she had to meet her God. A few minutes more and she would be face to face with the Great Father whom she had never willfully offended.

She fell on her knees, and a wild cry for pardon came from her lips.

"He has driven me to death, O God!" she said, "for I can not hide the shame of my life. You are more merciful than men, take pity on me!"

Did that cry pierce those beautiful skies? Could there be a deeper curse on any man, deeper condemnation than that a woman should utter such a prayer.

She closed her eyes, and placed the bottle to her lips. Several drops of the bitter, thick, dark liquid had been swallowed, when a strong hand dashed it from her, and it fell broken into a hundred fragments, the deadly poison staining the sweet, green grass.

"What are you doing?" cried a clear strong voice. "How dare you fly in the face of the living God? You are seeking to kill yourself!"

She raised her haggard eyes, and saw before her a stately old man, whose hair was white with age; his face beautiful with goodness and benevolence.

"You were going to kill yourself, child," he said, looking at her in horror.

But she fell at his feet crying wildly:

"Why have you saved me! Oh, why did you not let me die?"

CHAPTER IV.

THROWN ON THE WORLD.

"Life is mine, I who gave it Alone can take away."

The rector stooped and raised the unhappy girl in his arms; he looked in wonder at the white, haggard face, with its terrible impress of suffering; he wondered at her youth, her beauty, her sorrow.

"What can have driven her to death?" he thought. She had not fainted—such misery as hers is rarely lost in unconsciousness. He placed her on the grave where she had been sitting, and again she moaned:

"Why did you not let me die."

He looked down on her—not unkindly; he had seen too much of human suffering for that.

"If I saw you standing on the brink of a precipice," he said, "should I not draw you back? If I saw you falling into a flame of fire, should I not try to save you from it?"

She looked up at him, and he shrunk from the pain and anguish in those sad eyes.

"You do not know," she said; "you do not understand. I cannot live."

He took both her hands in his; they were cold as death—so cold that the touch startled him.

"My poor child," he said quietly, "do you know that your life is not your own? You cannot prolong it for one moment, nor can you dare to destroy it. God gave it to you; God will take it back. You may not fling it in His face like an ungracious gift."

"You do not know," she moaned.

"No; I do not know, perhaps, your particular sorrow; but I am an old man now, and all my life long I have been teaching the law of God; I have seen suffering in every shape, in every form, and I know that nothing justifies suicide."

She shrunk at the word.

"I have seen human desolation and misery that could not be exceeded," he continued; "the remedy is submission to God, not willful destruction. Can you not trust me with the story of your sorrow?"

"No," she replied; "it is not to be told."

"Poor child!" he said, gently; "you are young to endure so much. But whatever your sorrow may be, do not make bad worse. This life will soon be ended whether it has been happy or miserable will not matter to us at the hour of death. Do not make it worse by adding eternal ruin to it. You know—though men of science may rave, and men of would-be wisdom may sneer—you know that for the crime of suicide there is no pardon. Would you like to be cut off forever from the face of the Great God!"

"I had not thought of that," she replied. "I only thought that I could not bear the shame of my life."

She sat silent for some minutes; he watching intently her beautiful, ghastly face. Suddenly she looked up at him.

"Can you tell me why this has happened?" she said. "I have been a good girl all my life; I do not remember that I have ever willfully sinned; I have been proud of my fair name, I thought it the crowning glory of my life, the crown of my womanhood, the one pearl beyond price; I was never a coquette; I never spoke a light word; I never gave a free look; I was modest as the white daisies here growing over the dead. If anyone to tempt me, had offered me the whole world as the price of my honor and fair name, I should have despised it. Now, can you tell me why this happened? why my life is to be one long shame?"

She spoke with such passionate eagerness he could hardly follow her.

"You forget," he said gently, "that I do not know what has happened. Will you not tell me?"

A crimson flush came over the despairing face; she flung herself upon the ground

"I cannot—I cannot!" she cried. "I cannot sully my lips with my own story."

Mr. Douglas looked at her, not knowing what to do. The bells were chiming more slowly now; the sun was setting; birds were folding their wings; the flowers closing their eyes; the crimson flushes were dying out of the western skies; the gloaming was coming on. What was he to do with the unhappy girl lying with her face hidden in the grass, not weeping, not fainting, but cold and silent in her despair? He would not leave her there. He bent over her.

"Have you father or mother living?" he asked, and she answered him that her father had been dead many years, but that her mother still lived—far away though, far away."

"Tell me where?" he asked, patiently.

"Away in England—in Kent, among the hills and orchards!"

"Will you not go to her, or let me send for her?"

"No," she replied; "I shall never look upon my mother's face again. Oh sir, if you would but leave me, to die! I cannot, indeed I cannot bear my life."

"Have you not looked up to the ministers of God as holding any authority?" he asked gravely.

"Yes," she answered with a weary, woe-begone expression deepening on her face.

"Then, by that authority," he said, "I command you to tell me your story."

"I was seventeen," she said, "and cursed—listen to me—cursed with a beautiful face, when a stranger came to our town and married me. He was handsome and clever; ah, me! there is no one like him. He asked me to marry him, and my mother said 'Yes.' I loved him; how can I tell you how I worshipped him? you would think it wicked. He was the very light of my eyes, the pulse of my heart. I said I had done no wrong; I had forgotten. My mother wanted us to be married at the church in our town, but he was not willing; he told me he expected some money from a relation, who would never leave it to him if he found that he was married. He asked me if I would consent to keep the marriage secret for some time, and I told him 'Yes.' He asked me if, instead of being married at my home, I would go to Scotland; there was no danger for him, he said, in being married in England.

"I was innocent of all wrong, of all guile, of all harm, as a little child; but I did the greatest wrong of my life when I consented. He pleaded so earnestly with me; he asked me not to tell my mother, lest she should be unwilling, for she would not understand as I did the need for secrecy. I must have been blind—but then, I was so young. I left home with him, leaving a letter for my mother that explained all; and I, poor, blind, infatuated child, thought no harm and knew no wrong."

She paused for a few moments; the words came from her lips in such a burning torrent that he at times could hardly hear them.

"I came with him to Scotland, sir, and we were married—I believed really honestly, and truly married. If I had not believed that, sir, dearly as I loved him, I would ten thousand times rather have died than have done as I did. I have lived for nearly two years in a whirl—a dream of happiness. I thought often and often that heaven could not be fairer, brighter, or sweet than earth; and when my baby came my heart melted with gratitude to God.

"Sir, listen to me. I was brought up modestly—to love God, to value my soul, to value my fair name above all other gifts. I loved this man, who wooed me with the deepest passion; but I thought myself his true wife. Now tell me why I am so cruelly punished. There has come to me to-day a letter from him, and he tells me I am not his wife—that he purposely deceived me—that I do not know his name, his rank, or anything of him; that he has left me forever, left me to marry a lady in his own rank of life; that he has left me money, as though money could repay me. O God!" cried the wretched girl, "why did you not let me die? How am I to bear it?"

The kindly face of the good minister grew very white as he listened; he raised his hand as though he would fain protest against the selfish cruelty, the sin, the crime of men.

Then he laid his hand on the bowed head.

"It is very hard, cruelly hard, terribly hard for you, my poor child," he said; "but it will be harder for him on the day when he must answer for his sins. You never had the least suspicion, then, until now, that your marriage was a false one?"

"I never even dreamed of such a thing how should I, how could I? I should as soon have doubted heaven as doubted him."

It was her first experience of the world's wickedness, but it was not his. He had seen heart-broken women and wicked men before, yet he had never been brought face to face with such sorrow as this.

"You must not add to his condemnation by adding to his sin," he said gravely. "If you destroy yourself, your death will lie at his door."

"Yet how can I live?" she cried passionately. She plucked up the long roots of grass and flung them away. She looked so wild, so bewildered, that he felt afraid she would lose her reason.

"Others have had the same to bear. Others have been thrown on the world. You must make the best of it. You take a morbid view of your own case. Even suppose all he says is true, you have been deceived. I can not see that you are guilty of any sin; and if your own conscience be clear, and you are innocent before Heaven, ah, child! you must carry your burden bravely before men. What has happened is your misfortune, not your fault. Listen to me. Let me try to give you more hopeful views of life. A long and happy life may yet be before you, though you are now friendless and thrown on the world."

CHAPTER V

LIFE'S GRANDEST LESSON—ENDURANCE

"Listen to me," repeated Mr. Douglas. "Let me give you nobler and higher views of life."

She turned her despairing face to him.

"You need not," she said, gently; "I know. I was well brought up; I had teaching such as you would give to a daughter of your own. You do not quite understand. Suppose even that, as you say, I am before Heaven quite innocent of all sin, that in the eyes of men I have been betrayed, not wicked; supposing that I have not the weight of great and unmerited shame to bear, still, how can I live with a broken heart?"

For one minute he made no answer, but a light, beautiful to see, came over his face.

She repeated her question.

"Tell me," she said, "how am I to live with a broken heart?"

"You could not have asked that question from one who would have known the answer better than I do," he replied. "Look; do you see that white marble cross gleaming between those trees?"

She followed the direction of his hand. The western sunbeams lay low on the grass, and the trees were standing in a rosy golden light. From between them she saw the gleam of a white marble cross.

"I see it," she replied.

"My heart was broken," he said, "thirty long years ago, and was buried in that grave with my beautiful young wife. Yet I have lived on, and have done my Master's work faithfully, ever since."

Her eyes, rather than her words, asked him how it was.

"I had loved her for six years," he said gently, "but we could not marry because we were poor. When this living was given to me, this pretty rectory beneath my own, with its fair surroundings of flowers and trees, I made it more beautiful still for her, and brought her home here one summer's day—my wife.

"Ah, my dear child, it is given to some of us to drink our chalice with the foam on it, to taste the highest bliss, to drink the very dregs of the cup of despair. For one whole year I lived with my wife so happily that all I had conceived of the Garden of Eden seemed to my faint as a dream in comparison. I was so intensely, so wonderfully happy, that I used to go about trying what I could do for others, and how I could best diffuse this great joy of mine.

"For one year—one short, brief year, out of a long life-time. We were looking forward then to the birth of a little child, and my wife's sweet face grew brighter and sweeter each day with the anticipation of her coming bliss.

"What do you think happened? ah, me! How often in the first mad anguish of my grief did I dare to raise my eyes to Heaven and ask why was it? why was she taken away? why could not her most sweet and gentle life have been spared? They both died. Mother and child together. She died in great agony, without one word for me who loved her so. I never saw my baby's eyes, or heard one cry from the little voice. I was like one mad, running from room to room, asking the question that no one could answer: "Why did she die?"

"As surely as the sky shines above us my heart broke in that hour; no words that I could invent would describe my sorrow. My heart was buried with my wife, yet I have lived on for thirty long years, and I never call in question the will of my Lord God. I bow my head in lowest submission; and, you child—you, young and beautiful, may live with a broken heart if you will do the same."

Then, and for the first time, she broke into a wild passion of tears. "He was half my life," she wailed; "nay, he was all of it. I had no thought outside my love. I went to sleep with his name on my lips; my last thought was of him, I woke up blessing the bright day because it would give him to me. The world is all dark, all cold, all desolate. Without my love! my love! I do not know how to live! His face made my light, my sunshine, my brightness. His love made my warmth, my happiness. Are the summer days to pass and never bring him? Are the flowers to bloom, the sun to shine, the leaves to bud on the trees, years to come and years to go, yet never bring him once to me? I cannot bear it! I do not know how to live!"

There was something so utterly despairing in her grief that tears rose to the old man's eyes.

"You do not know what such love as mine is like," she cried. "Do you know—do you know that if he stood there before me now I should fling myself at his feet, and forgive him all?"

"I do not think you would; he has betrayed you. As far as lay in his power he has spoiled your love. Remember, that while you gave him a pure and noble love, he gave you nothing but a selfish passion, undignified by the name of love. Try to forget him."

He never forgot the look she gave him.

"Forget him!" she cried. "Yes; when the birds forget to sing, the flowers to bloom; when the sun forgets to shine, and the earth forgets its light; when I lie in my grave, cold and dead, I shall not forget him. Let him pass by and call my name, had I lain there for twenty long years, should I not hear it? Forget him! my pulse will stand still, my heart will cease to beat but I shall remember him!" Her face flushed hotly; her eyes grew bright and wild.

"I shall stand some day before the judgment-seat of God," she said, "holding my blighted, ruined life in my hand. I shall not forget him then."

"Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord. You cannot forget him, child, you must forgive him."

"Forgive him!" she repeated. "Yes, when I cease to remember how I love him, how he wooed me, how he has held my hands clasped in his own, how he has kissed my lips and called me his wife—his sweet wife, his dear wife, his loving wife, how he has made me love him until my soul has grown one with his, and my heart torn from his is like a heart rent in twain, when I cease to remember all this, I will forgive him."

There was silence between them for some little time. The vesper song of the birds was dying away, the leaves stirred faintly on the trees, the flowers waved in the long grass, the shadows fell darker; the round, golden sun had set.

The minister bent his white head nearer to the girl.

"The first smart of your sorrow is on you now," he said, "and I know it is hard to bear. Will you give me one promise? You have been a good child, and have said prayers at your mother's knee; you have had a little child lying in your own arms; will you promise me, by your love for your mother and your child—by your love and respect for the great God Himself, not to try again to take your life? Listen child, to those sweet chimes, look at the blue skies, take some little comfort, and give me your promise." She raised her white face to his.

"I do see how I am to bear my life, I do not see how I am to live without him. The greatest mercy—the greatest kindness would be for some one to slay me here where I am; but what you ask me for God's sake I will not refuse. I promise you that, come what may, I will never take my own life."

"I thank Heaven!" said the old man. "Now, child, listen, and obey me; go home, and do not turn to sick shuddering from the helpless child who is there, find comfort in it, love it doubly, because he who should love it is its worst enemy. Do you tell me in all sincerity that you will never touch the money that this man, whom you believe to be your husband, has settled on you?"

"I would rather that my baby and I starved to death together," she replied.

"I commend you; I think you are right. You will want, then to work for your own living?"

"Yes, I can work; I was never ashamed—never too proud to work."

"You will go away from here and seek for the means of earning money in some large city, perhaps?"

"As well that as anything else," replied the girl, wearily.

IT SHINES FOR ALL.

ORANGEVILLE, MAY 1, 1890.

DUFFERIN.

The Liberal Conservative Association of the county of Dufferin will hold their convention in the town hall, Orangeville on Tuesday, the 20th May, to select a candidate to contest this county in the Local Legislature. We think a mistake has been made in not having the meeting held in a more central place—Shelburne for instance—which would undoubtedly be much more favorable for all persons concerned. However, we want to see a large attendance present, and a delegate from each sub division in the county. The House has been dissolved, nominations take place on the 29th and polling on the 5th of June. Conservatives should be fully prepared for the struggle, and the sooner it is done, the better.

THE LATE G. B. ISLAND.

The End of an Honest and Useful Life—The Remains interred on Thursday.

Last week it was our sad duty to record the terrible accident which happened to Mr George B Island at the C. P. R. station on Tuesday of last week. Readers of THE SUN are already familiar with the details of that tragic affair, and we will not weary them by reproducing the report.

Mr. G. B. Island first saw the light of day in the county of Sligo, Ireland, in the year 1843. When he was seven years old his parents left the Emerald Isle and came to Canada, settling at Innisfil, Nottawasaga. He remained there for some time, and at the age of twenty started business for himself, which he successfully conducted for seven years. About that time Orangeville was beginning to become a very lively place, and Mr Island removed here. Previously to his coming to Orangeville, he married Miss Susan Craig, who with a daughter and two young sons survive him. He carried on an extensive blacksmith and carriage works establishment here for sixteen years. Four years ago he rented his business and accepted a lucrative situation with Patterson Bros. manufacturing works of Ingersoll, and it was while acting in this capacity that he accidently met his death. Mr. Island was a man who took an interest in public affairs. In politics he was a Reformer, a member of the Methodist church and a man of charitable disposition, and his generous aid, ever freely rendered to the unfortunate, his intense love of home and home ties, and his unvarying kindness and consideration for the welfare and happiness of those around him must ever remain a cherished recollection in the hearts of his friends. For several years he occupied a seat at the council board, and discharged his duties in an honest and upright manner.

The funeral took place from his late residence to the Forest Lawn cemetery on Thursday afternoon and was attended by a large concourse of friends and relations, all the places of business were closed. The A O U W and Select Knight lodges, numbering over 150 men, preceded the hearse to the cemetery. Rev C E McIntyre officiated at the grave, and the brethren bade their departed comrade a last farewell. The pall bearers were—W Judge, J C Brown, W Johnston, T MacAdam, J Shaver and W Henderson, (Mono Mills.)

The floral offerings were many and beautiful. Chief of which was a pillow with the words "Our Commander" and a wreath and anchor from the A O U W.

THE SUN extends its heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved ones.

"Till all around, creation's pillars shake,
And from their graves the sleeping dead awake—
That mighty voice that rends the parting skies
May bid our waking dust to glory rise!"

EDITORIAL NOTES

Mr Pacaud, M. P. P., of Windsor, who was rejected by the first convention, says in his paper that he will be obliged to accede to the requests of his friends and will enter the local election contest.

At the election held in Ottawa on Saturday to fill the vacancy in the House of Commons caused by the death of Mr. Perley, Mr. C. H. Mackintosh, the Conservative candidate, was elected by a majority of 996. Mr. Hay, the Equal Rights candidate, polled 1597, and Mr. Chrysler, Liberal, 1251.

Mr. J. L. Hughes, Toronto's public school inspector and Conservative candidate for Peel, held his first campaign meeting in Brampton on April 26. A number of local speakers addressed the meeting, and the candidate made a telling speech. We are informed that Mr. Alex McLaren of the Grange, is also in the field. Both Mr. Crisholm and Mr. McLaren are Reformers, and if neither of them resign, the great J. L. will cross the provincial Boyne.

THE NEW BINDER.—A SUN reporter visited the McMaster Reaper and Binder works on East Broadway, and found a large staff of hands busily engaged turning out the Turnbull Binder. J. A. McMaster, the proprietor, informed the reporter that, although late starting last season and laboring under great disadvantages, their machines gave general satisfaction, and that now, having their works properly equipped, the Turnbull open-end elevator binder for the coming season is the best self binder on earth. Mr. McMaster has so much confidence in his machine that he will put it in the field with any binder made and let the farmers see who has the best machine. This is just the industry Orangeville needs, and deserves the support of our citizens and the farmers in this vicinity.

AT the North Middlesex Liberal Conservative convention, Mr. Bridgetto drew attention to the large surplus which Mr. Mowat claims to have on hand. "The interest on Mr. Mowat's surplus," the speaker said, "is a very good barometer by which to judge the problem. In 1879 the interest on the surplus in the hands of the Government was $258,000, and in the short space of ten years (up to 1889) the yearly total of interest on this same hundred surplus was only 79,000. This is a fair sample of the extravagance of the Mowat Government.

A POET HONORED.

Alex. McLachlan Rade the Recipient of a Handsome Gift.

Alexander McLachlan, of Amaranth, Ont., has spent half a century in setting verses to Nature's tune in the New World. The grizzled old poet was in his element last evening, when he was banqueted in the Walker house and made the recipient of a handsome money gift, an illuminated address and a portrait of himself. The gathering was largely composed of Toronto Scotchmen but was representative of the bard's admirers all over the country, for nearly a score of Scottish societies in North America have willingly contributed the where-withal to place the Scotsman, who has amused and delighted them with his verses, in comfortable circumstances for the remainder of his life. Mr. J Morrison, one of those who originated the fund three years ago, occupied the chair, and on his right and left, in addition to the guest, were Mr. Arthur Cox, Mr. James Bain, jr. Rev. Dr. Dewart, Dr. Thornburn, Mr. Hugh Miller, Mr. Malcolm Gibbs, Mr. G. M. Ross, Dr. Kennedy, secretary of the fund, and Mr. Adamson, secretary of the Caledonian Society, occupied the croupiers' chairs. An excellent dinner was served by Mr. Walker, after which secretary Dr. Kennedy intimated letters of apology from, among others, the following: Rev. Principal Grant, Hon. G. W. Ross, Rev. D. J. Macdonnell, Justice McLennan, George McMurrich, R. W. Elliot, all containing best wishes for the success of the banquet to the old bard.

BARD MCLACHLAN'S HEALTH.

After the toast of "The Queen" had been honored the chairman proposed the health of the guest. He said they all felt proud of Mr. McLachlan for the grand stand by him on the side of truth and common brotherhood of men. He then detailed the origion of the McLachlan testimonial three years ago and its history, until it culminated in the loving act of the evening. A response had come from nearly every part of the world. From Minnehaha's laughing waters had been received the proceeds of a concert and ball given by the Caledonian club there. There had been a splendid response from various parts of the United States, including Kentucky, Indianapolis, California, as also from various parts of Canada, such as Halifax, Montreal, Ottawa, Port Hope, London, Windsor, Guelph, and last but not least from Guelph, which city sent in proportion to its population more than any other and equal to that of Toronto. He was gratified that the presentation so handsomely contributed to was about to culminate in a becoming manner. He therefore proposed the health of the bard. The toast was drunk in the most hearty manner and the audience sang For He's a Jolly Good Fellow.

The chairman then handed the bard an envelope containing $2,100 in trust funds, stating that there was still a balance which would be duly handed over.

COMPLIMENTARY ADDRESS.

Dr Kennedy read the address, which was in frame illuminated with a border of colored thistles. It was as follows:

"Your many friends take this opportunity of testifying to the esteem and affection in which you are held by them as a poet, a true man and a faithful friend.

"Following in the footsteps of Scotia's master poet, you have elevated our thoughts and awakened our sympathies by singing the songs of Carrin and of Clyde, and, to us especially who have left with you the glorious liberties of this newer land, with its majestic lakes and noble rivers, you have given higher motives for our lives in words that shall live when we are gone.

"Here your graceful pen has pictured the life of the woods, the clearing and the field, and lent to it a charm that has forever dignified the tool of the pioneer. In making an effort to honor you, we are but extending to the poet a small small portion of the same sympathy he has lavished so generously on man and nature in all his writings. It is our sincere wish that the testimonial which you have received to night may be taken as an evidence of our desire to assist in lightening the cares of declining days, and in giving calm to those sunset hours of your life, which we hope are still far distant.

"J. L. MORRISON, Chairman.
"GEORGE KENNEDY, Secretary."

Mr. W. A. Sherwood, the painter of the portrait which was presented to the guest of the evening, was then called upon to speak. He referred to the poet's great love of nature—of the woods and the lakes and the rivers. The beauty of Mr. McLachlan's writings was in their simplicity, which, as Angelo had said, was the goal of the painter and the poet.

Mr. McLachlan replied in an eloquent speech, mingled with poetic flights. From childhood up, he said, his aspirations lay in the direction of poesy. He had cared nothing for what Shakspeare termed a bubble reputation, his only ambition being that of Burns.

"That for pair auld Scotland's sake
Some useful thing or book could make,
Or sing a sang at least."

(Applause.) Though only a literary Bohemian—a mere pioneer in the field of poetry—and as he had always before him the fact that his rhyming proposities in a new country, which cared more for the body than for the soul, tended sometimes to get him into trouble, he was glad to realize that his young aspirations had not been altogether in vain. He thanked the contributors from the bottom of his heart for setting him free from those terrible embarrassments that had shattered his body and soul, and made life a burden to him. The presentation had exalted his idea of human nature and what it was capable of doing. (Applause.)

The chairman then gave the toast of "Sister Societies," which was replied to by Dr. Thornburn for St. Andrew's and Mr. Adamson for the Caledonian Society. There were other toasts interluded with songs, and in this way a most pleasant evening was spent.

At the Baptist church on Sunday the Rev. Mr. Gilmour of Orangeville occupied the pulpit and preached both morning and evening. There were large congregations present who derived much benefit from the services.—Guelph Herald.

Our newsy, northern contemporary, the Shelburne Free Press, has completed the fifteenth year of its existence. It is a good weekly and deserves the success which has attended it during the past fifteen years. Continued success, Bro. Mortimer.

A gang of roughs invaded the Elgie house on Monday night and attempted to run it according to their own peculiar fancies. The proprietor "fired" them out, and has laid information before P. M. Pattullo, charging them with disorderly conduct. They will appear at the P. C. on Monday.

GIRL WANTED.—A good general servant wanted immediately. Apply to MRS E. LESLIE, Orangeville.

DUFFERIN LAKE.—Dufferin Lake has changed hands since last season, Messrs. Joseph Daly and B. Conner of Orangeville, having purchased it some time ago. Mr. Daly is down at the lake preparing for the season.

HE SAYS ITS NOT SO.—Chief Shields wishes us to correct an item that appeared in the Advertiser a couple of weeks ago, which accused the chief with not arresting a man when requested to do so by one of the proprietors of the Commercial hotel during the fairday row. He says he was not asked to arrest the man, and, furthermore, if he had there is no provision in the by-law what should be done with him after being arrested.

MORE PEOPLE FINED.—P. M. Pattullo and Mayor Walsh presided at Saturday's sitting of the police court. Jas. Johnston, of Caledon, laid information, charging a young man from East Garafraxa, with assault. The assault took place in a town hotel on fairday, the evidence was clear, and the defendant was allowed to go—after paying $10 and costs. Steve Kennedy, painter, and Alex. Hughson, collector, had a little misunderstanding the other day. Ten and costs also settled the dispute.

THE MOULDERS' STRIKE.—We received the following letter from Mr. Joseph Gordon, which explains itself:—"In reference to the moulders' letter in last week's SUN, allow me to set the matter right. The moulders did strike, the reason was they were not earning their wages on account of bad work, so I put them on piece work and they left, but came back the following morning. As to McMaster renting the shop, I was not aware of it; I made him an offer but he didn't accept it. I am still to be found in the same place."

Inglehart's are building a reputation reputation for good goods and low prices.

GOOD MORNING.—A sensible exchange truly episodic. "Do I know you?" say "Good Morning." And we know, long and stalk a while. "Is all right good, and do your friends prosper? Rest's a kind heaven sent to every thing living," heartily spoken, that helps to make hope brother and heart lighter. Earnestness to make the morning good, and be a prophecy of a good day to come after it. And if this be free of the "Good morning," is in no sense of all kind, heartsome greetings. They cheer the discouraged and the tired out, somehow make the cycle of life run more smoothly.

CLEAN UP.—The time for spring cleaning has arrived and it may not be out of order to urge on all citizens interested in the good health of the town—and who are not?—to not simply obey the letter of the law as to the spring "cleaning up," but in spirit also and further to exercise all such private precautions and adopt all such individual safeguards as will contribute to the general sanitary condition of the community. There are things in and about one's house which do not come within the notice of a health inspector, but yet ought to be looked to in the interest of the health of the family and neighborhood.

A USEFUL INVENTION.—Mr. Giles Bowler, a man who learned his trade as blacksmith here thirty years ago, brought one of his many useful inventions to our office last Thursday afternoon. It consists of a wire cage, which can be filled up with clothes and set into a boiler; a smaller size, can be filled with potatoes and set into a pot, etc. The reader can readily perceive the advantages of this article. It does away with the low practice of lifting the clothes from the boiler to the tub with a stick, and saves the kitchen floor from being an artificial lake on washing-day. Mr. Bowler is the inventor of a "fishplate," which, the authorities say, will be used by all railways in the near future.

A WARNING TO BE HEEDED.—Mr. Simon Kearns, blacksmith, came very near getting killed on Monday evening. He was exercising his stallion "St. Joe," in the yard at the Vegan House, when the animal seized one of Mr. K's hands in his mouth badly lacerating it. When Mr. K. found that the horse was getting him under his feet he shouted for help. Jas. Knight rushed into the yard and got the horse away. It is said that Mr. K. was teasing the horse; if this is so, his narrow escape from a terrible death ought to be warning to him as well as others who have the handling of stallions, to be careful in the treatment of these animals as they cannot be depended on.—Brampton Banner.

MORE LICENSES.—The Dufferin license commissioners met in the court house again on Monday and granted several licenses. Samuel Moore, of Reddickville, and Robt. Gillespie, of Shelburne, whose applications were deferred from the last meeting, were granted permits for three months. They will undoubtedly continue to enjoy a license if their conduct satisfies the commissioners. J. E. Duffy's application was re considered, the charges against him having been proven to be bottomless, and he received a license. It was nothing but an act of common justice that prompted the commissioners to report favorably in this case, as the Elgie house is one of the neatest and best kept hostelries in town.

BADLY BURNED.—A very painful accident occurred at Gordon's foundry last Thursday afternoon just as the men were finishing the day's casting. Mr. C. A. Pierce, one of the moulders, was in the act of plugging up the hole in the smelter, where the iron is melted, when the hole suddenly enlarged and three or four hundred pounds of melted iron rapidly spurted out. The ladle quickly filled and the metal ran over the damp floor which provided an explosion. Iron hail flew in every direction, lighting on the men's backs and running down the inside of their clothes. Mr. Pierce was burned more seriously than any of the rest, his back, legs and arms are in a dreadful state. During the excitement a woman came running in and informed them that the building was on fire. The fire was extinguished before doing much damage.

DEATH OF MRS. FOSTER.—We regret to record the death of Mrs. Jas. Foster, wife of ex Reeve Foster, which occurred at her residence, Mill street, on Wednesday evening. She was a resident of Orangeville for the past thirty years, and was well known and highly esteemed in both religious and social circles, and was 48 years of age. Deceased had been ill for the past ten weeks, and her death has cast a gloom over a large circle of friends and acquaintances. This sad event, however, did not fall with the suddenness of a surprise, because, during her illness, they had been taught to expect it, though still hoping against hope. She died peacefully and happily, in the bosom of conjugal and filial affection. She leaves four children—three sons and a daughter. A feeling of sincere regret is expressed by all and the mourning relatives have much sympathy in their sorrow. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon (Friday) at 2 o'clock, to the Town cemetery.

The C. P. R. having paid no attention to Toronto's protest against the erection of tribbing along the city front, the Aldermen suggest that it should be blown out of Toronto bay with dynamite.

AN AWFUL TRAGEDY!

Murder Morrison, Kills His Three Children

And Then Poisons Himself—Insanity the Cause of the Deed.

A terrible tragedy occurred last Thursday morning about a mile and a half north of Shelburne, at the residence of one Thomas Morrison, a heretofore respectable farmer. Mrs. Morrison had gone away from home for couple of days to visit a sick sister, leaving her husband with five children, the eldest a girl of thirteen years of age, and the others ranging in age down to a bright little lad of a couple of summers. The youngest slept with the eldest sister. When the latter awoke Thursday morning she was surprised to find that he was not by her side. She went in search of him and, to her horror, found the little boy still in death, laid out upon a quilt on the kitchen floor. Beside him lay the body of his sister, aged five, and his brother, aged seven. A barrel half full of water stood in one corner of the room. By the dripping of the water on the floor the tale was told of their death by drowning. Morrison could not be found. On a table in the dining-room was a cup strongly smelling of carbolic acid and an empty bottle of the drug two thirds full. The neighborhood being aroused and diligent search being instituted, the murderer was found writhing in agony on the banks of a creek a quarter of a mile from his house. Here was evidence of a terrible struggle. The poor unfortunate had thrown himself into the water, rolling from bank to bank in his agony, the muddy soil being worked smooth and bearing the deep impress of his body. Morrison, who was speechless, was at once borne to his desolate home. Dr. Norton, coroner, was sent for. Upon his arrival he used the stomach pump and administered antidotes, and he rallied somewhat.

THE CORONER'S INQUEST.

SHELBURNE, Ont., April 25.—The inquest on the victims of yesterday's triple murder was begun last night. J. P. MacMillan, county attorney, looked after the case for the crown.

Mrs. Morrison, the mother of the murdered little ones, was the first witness. She said, after relating what has already been published: "My husband had been ailing for the last five or six weeks, complaining of his head aching. He seemed somewhat gloomy at times, but in his conduct towards us he was always kind. Occasionally, when talking about feeling poorly, he would say he hoped God would provide for myself and his dear children if he was taken away, but did not mention this often, so that I had no reason to suspect him. He had talked this way within the last three weeks, but I thought nothing of it. I know my husband was not in his right mind, or he would not have taken the lives of the little children he loved so well. No other theory can I advance."

The next one to give testimony was Sarah Eliza Morrison, the eldest of the family. She said that after her mother left, her father attended to the chores around the barn. At about eight o'clock a neighbor dropped in and he and her father chatted and laughed pleasantly together for an hour. She noticed nothing wrong with her father during the evening and heard no noise during the night. The remainder of her evidence was merely a repetition of that already known. Both Mrs. Morrison and her daughter were utterly prostrated with their grief while giving their evidence. Several other witnesses were examined and all testified to the pleasant feeling that had existed between Morrison and all the members of his family.

BURIAL OF THE VICTIMS.

The three little victims were carried to their last resting place Friday afternoon, the funeral being attended by a large concourse of sympathizing friends and neighbors, in fact the funeral was one of the largest known in this section for years. The excitement is becoming intense, and groups are to be found at all corners of the streets talking and debating over the awful crime.

MORRISON DEAD.

Morrison died at 7:15 A.M. He made no confession and didn't speak from ten o'clock Monday night to his attendants. Special Constable Chas. Gillespie was present when he expired, and says he died without a struggle.

SHELBURNE, April 29.—The inquest on the three children was resumed to-night in the Town Hall, Shelburne, before Coroner Norton. The only witness examined was Dr. Barr, who swore as follows:—"I visited the Morrison household last Thursday at ten o'clock. I found all three children lying in the back kitchen all dead. Upon examining the bodies I found them well developed. The skin of the face and neck was wrinkled, presenting a goose skin appearance, and their faces were slightly bloated. There was white frothy foam around their nostrils. Their clothing was soaking wet. There were no marks of violence. I am quite sure they met their death by drowning." The jury returned the following verdict:—"That Arabella Morrison, Thomas James Morrison and William Edgar Morrison, on or about the 24th of April, came to their death by drowning, their lives having been taken by their father, Thomas Morrison, now deceased, while the latter was labouring under a fit of temporary insanity." The curtain now falls on one of the most lamented tragedies that ever occurred in this Province.

A Verdict for that Sum Against Atkinson.

The Ward V. Caledon Case Still Going on—We Publish Extra on the Last Page.

The Dufferin spring assizes opened in the court house, here, on Monday morning, the Judge being Mr. Justice McMahon presiding. There was no one criminal case to be tried, and the jurors consequently received a rest which they gloried.

The first case to come up for trial was the much talked of Scott-Atkinson suit. Readers of THE SUN will remember the unfortunate occurrence near Glen Cross about a year ago, which resulted in the death of a man named James B. Scott.

At the last assizes Henry L. Atkinson was tried for the killing of Scott, but the jury brought in a verdict of acquittal. Afterwards Annie Scott, mother of the late Jas. B. Scott, entered a civil suit against Atkinson, claiming $10,000 for the wrongful killing of her son. E. Gordon Bigelow, Q. C., conducted the case for Mrs. Scott, and Elgin Myers, Q. C., acted for Mr. Atkinson. A large number of witnesses were examined, the evidence being much the same as that given last fall. The case occupied the whole of Monday and Tuesday, and after six o'clock, Tuesday evening, Mr. Myers began to address the jury. He spoke upwards of two hours in an eloquent appeal for his client. Mr. Bigelow followed in an hour's review of the case. His Lordship's address to the jury lasted half-an-hour, and was a very impartial charge. The jury retired at 10 p.m., and remained out until 3 o'clock yesterday morning, when they returned with a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $300.

Ward et al vs. Township of Caledon was commenced yesterday morning and is still in progress. This is a case brought by the plaintiffs against the township for damages caused by the Alton flood last fall. Myers & Robb for plff; Mowat, Downey and Co. for Caledon; Hughson, for McClellan, (third parties.)

The following cases are yet to be disposed of:

Algie v. Caledon—Action same as Ward vs. Caledon. W. L. Walsh for plff; Mowat, Downey and Co. for township.

Hardaker et al vs. Scott et al—Action on mechanics' lien. Myers & Robb for plff; W. J. L. McKay for defts.

Bell vs. Gallagher et al—Action to recover purchase money for lands. Fisher & Bell for plff; W. L. Walsh for defts.

Pattullo vs. Knox—Action for settlement of contract. W. L. Walsh for plff; Johnston and Rose for deft.

Simpson vs. Ringrose et al—Action on a will. W. L. Walsh for plff, Myers & Robb and Henderson & Small for defts.

McCoy Bros. vs. Northern Assurance and Commercial Union Insurance companies. Action on insurance policies. Bain, Laidlaw & Co. for plff; McCarthy, Osler & Co. for defts.

Next week's issue of THE SUN will contain a complete report of the remainder of the proceedings.

PERSONAL.

Mr. D. McMorris, of Erin, was in town yesterday.

Mr. W. Lewis, of Mono Mills, called on us to-day.

Mr. Jas K. Paisley, of Toronto, was in town this week.

His Lordship Justice McMahon, is staying at the Queen's.

Mr. Paul Gallagher, of Toronto, gave THE SUN a pleasant call on Tuesday.

Postmaster Leslie arrived home from Patterson, N. J., on Monday, and favored THE SUN with a call.

Miss Mary Scanlon, of Tottenham, accompanied by Miss Brodrick, of Reddickville, are visiting in town.

Mr. C. A. Pierce, who was so badly burned in the foundry, was removed to his home in Toronto on Tuesday evening.

Mr. Jas. Noxon, general manager of the Patterson Bros manufactory works, Ingersoll, was the firm's representative to the funeral of the late G. B. Island.

N. G. Bigelow, Q. C., O. B. Osler, Q. C., Jas. Reeve, Q. C., Langton, Q. C., Laidlaw, Q. C., of Toronto; and Clute, Q. C., of Belleville, are attending the assizes here this week.

Mr. F. Lennox, Barrie; Mrs. Arnold, Essa; and Mr. and Mrs Alfred McGuire, Mr. and Mrs. W. Johnston, and Mr. W. Patterson, Toronto, attended the funeral of the late G. B. Island on Thursday last.

"A Roaring Farce."

is the term we often hear applied to the modern trial-by-jury. The trial of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, by a jury of thousands of women afflicted with "female complaints," has been no farce, for it has established the fact that this remedy is a specific for all chronic weakness peculiar to the sex. The only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee, from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

MELANCTHON STATION.

Well, Mr. Editor, after two weeks' of silence, we once more take up our pen to chronicle a few items of recent occurrence. Smiling spring has once more arrived, and the last two weeks of fine weather has dried up the roads.

WOMEN AND RICH.

The reason why a woman is afraid of a mouse is a profound mystery—indeed, it has never been very clearly proven that she is. Some women are constantly in such a nervous, irritable condition that the slightest thing annoys and startles them. The cause of this unfortunate state of affairs is usually some functional derangement; some distressing or painful irregularity, some derangement or peculiar weakness incident to her sex; or, it may be due to inflammation, ulceration or displacement, of some of the pelvic viscera, or to other organic lesions peculiar to her sex. From whichever cause it may arise, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive remedy, so certain in its curative results that its manufacturers sell it through druggists, under a guarantee of its giving satisfaction in every case, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded. As a soothing and strengthening nervine, "Favorite Prescription" is unequalled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, exhaustion, prostration, hysteria, spasms and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the women. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

THE VERDICT.

After careful consideration of the evidence we published in the issue of last week, the jury soon returned with a verdict as described by Mr. Smith and J. C. Brown, namely, "Suicide while temporarily insane."

Thus on the twenty second day of April, the deceased, George B. Island, was interred at the Canadian Pacific Railway station, Orangeville, and the remains were placed in the centre platform to the place of the northeast side of said railway, being in each attempt struck to the Valley Division of the said Canadian Pacific Railway which carries from the Orangeville station about ten o'clock. Further, in their opinion, the evidence before them, said the deceased while in the said drinking was in a state of temporary insanity to such an extent as to render him incapable of the act of suicide. The jury consisted of the following gentlemen: Thos. Lawson, foreman, Geo. Lawson, Jas. Lawson, Jas. Lawson, Jas. Lawson, Jas. Lawson, Jas. Lawson, Jas. Lawson, Jas.

THE INQUEST ENDED.

The Coroner's Jury Thought the Train ran too Fast!

The inquest concerning the death of Mr. G. B. Island, who met his death by accident at the C. P. R. station on Friday, was continued [illegible] night. Henry in the council chamber [illegible] Thursday evening. Last week's issue of THE SUN contained a full report of the deplorable affair; also a report of Wednesday night's session of the coroner's jury.

On Thursday evening the council chamber was completely filled with people, and inside the railing all the jury were present.

Messrs. Wm. Johnston, Wm. Hill, Hugh Haley, Jas. Dawson, and Walter Dollison were all eye-witnesses. They thought the train was approaching pretty fast, but not over rapidly. They described the accident as occurring the same as described by Mr. George A. Stanton, the young medical student whose evidence we published last week. Dr. Smith and J. C. Brown also gave evidence.

THE VERDICT

After careful consideration of the evidence, the jurymen brought in the following verdict

That on the twenty second day of April, A.D., 1890, the deceased, George Island, died from injuries received at the Canada Pacific Railway station, Orangeville, such injuries being received by deceased while he was attempting imprudently to cross on the crossing from the centre platform to the platform on the northeast side of said railway station, he being in such attempt struck to his injury by the passenger train moving on the Credit Valley Division of the said Canada Pacific Railway which arrives from the South at the Orangeville station about ten o'clock in the forenoon. Further, in their opinion from the evidence before them, said train in approaching the said crossing was running at too great a speed, and they recommend that in future trains be caused to approach said station grounds at a slower rate of speed.

How Is Your Liver?

The old lady who replied when asked how her liver was, "I did likes me, I never heard that there was such a thing in the house," was noted for her amiability. Prometheus, when chained to a rock, might as well have pretended to be happy, as the man who is chained to a diseased liver. For poor Prometheus there was no escape but by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, the disagreeable feelings, terrible tortures of constipation, indigestion, dizziness and sick headache, which are caused by a diseased liver, promptly disappear.

A HAPPY EVENT.—It is with very great pleasure we announce the marriage of Mr. James Edwin Brayley and Miss Jessie Kyle, a young couple who have both until a short time ago been residents of this town. Most of us remember Mr. Brayley as a young man, who by his genial good nature made many sincere friends amongst us, and not a few of us can recall many happy hours enlivened by his merry joke, good song, or by the exercise of the musical talent which he possesses in a high degree. His father was the late James Brayley, of South Molton Devonshire Eng. "Ed." (as his familiar associates called him), came to Orangeville about eight years ago, and removed to Toronto two years since, where he carries on a flourishing concern, is company with Mr. J. Hughes as a real estate and business broker. Miss Kyle is the eldest daughter of Mr. James Kyle, a native of Co. Tyrone Ireland. He came to Canada with his wife and family about eighteen years ago, and lived for some years in Orangeville, but eventually went to reside in the Queen city also. The numerous and costly presents she received are sufficient to testify to the esteem in which the bride was held by her many friends and acquaintances. The nuptials were performed in the church of the Association by the Rev. H. G. Baldwin, assisted by the Rev. R. Bilkey and a number of their friends were invited to attend, and afterwards to dine at the residence of the bride's father, 256 Wellington street, where a recherche repast was served in excellent style by Isbyl Bros. The happy couple started by the 8 P.M. train for Portland en route for Liverpool. They purpose making a three months tour in Europe, visiting London, Paris, and other places of note and returning via New York. We offer them our congratulations and best wishes for a pleasant voyage, happy return, and a prosperous life.—COM.

SHELBURNE.

(From the Free Press and Economist)

Mr. Fred Dunbar, who went to Montana a few weeks ago, is well pleased with the country. He has secured a situation at a very good salary.

A promenade concert and art exhibition, under the auspices of Knox Church, was held in the Town Hall Tuesday evening. In addition to the programme of music, games, &c., refreshments were served. The attendance was good and the proceeds satisfactory.

Last week Mr. Hugh Falconer, of Shelburne, exhibited two mastiff dogs at the Bench Show of the Buffalo Kennel Club and carried off two prizes. Mode, 137, competed in the open class for mastiffs, and carried off first prize. In this class there were ten entries. In the class for mastiff puppies Shelburne Crank, 426, took the second prize. Mr. Falconer sold Shelburne Crank at a good price and refused $150 for the mastiff Mode.

A few weeks ago we noticed in the Toronto papers that Mr. J. P. Marshall, dentist, Shelburne, had been successful in his examination for the degree of Master of Dental Surgery, and in the reports of the recent Toronto University examinations his name appears in the list of those who passed for Doctor of Dental Surgery. There is but one other dentist in the Dominion holding both of the above degrees, consequently Mr. Marshall is deserving of the numerous congratulations he is receiving. They are honors not be despised.

MOVED.—Mr. A. B. Noble has moved his lath mill building this week on to the site formerly occupied by Black's old hotel on Owen Sound street. This move has given rise to a rumor that Mr. Noble intends to make application for a hotel license, so that the building may be profitably utilized. We have every reason to believe that this story is utterly devoid of truth, and we merely give it for the purpose of contradicting it at the earliest possible moment.

Our old friend, James Baird, put in an appearance yesterday. How do you do, Jim?

Jack Backus' men resumed work after being out one day, an amicable settlement being arrived at.

Miss Maggie Roberts has gone to Alton to learn the dress & mantle making with Mrs. Maitland.

Miss Annie St. Croix is reported on the mend, and is expected to be around again in a few days.

Mr. Wm. Thom, foreman of the Caledonia Quarry, has not been able to attend to his duties for several days. A very bad cold is said to be the cause.

The men of Robbins' quarry are still on strike, and no money seems to be forthcoming. The probabilities are that they will wait in vain for their hard earned wages.

The C. P. R. have a large gang of men putting in a switch to their new gravel pit at Cataract, and in a few days they will start the filling in of the Credit Forks trestle.

It may truly be said that our quarries are in full blast, though the striking Toronto has quite an effect on them, the proprietors are taking on all the men who chance to stray to our hamlet in search of labor.

It is getting quite fashionable around here for men who fall behind in their board, to change houses and then complain of the victuals they received but failed to pay for.

Messrs. P. Higgins and Wm. McDonald have arrived home from Sundridge, where they have been purchasing homesteads for themselves and intend moving out to this fall.

Mr. D. Campbell has purchased a 25 acre sand pit at Cardwell Junction, and has partially moved there. It is his intention to supply the city of Toronto with sand. We wish you success in your venture, Dune.

A settlement has been arrived at with the quarrymen at Elliotts' siding. Mr. M. Myers, the railway contractor, has purchased the quarry, paid the men their back money, and intends running the business on a very extensive scale.

To day is the 1st of May and scarcely a stony friend will be left in the streams, for the tourists who come here to angle during the summer months, judging by the number of small boys and growing up men who are trying their luck today.

Mr. Joe Coyne, who left here about two months ago for British Columbia, returned home again last Monday. He states that there are hundreds of men out of employment in British Columbia, and in Seattle, W. T., no less than 2,000 are seeking work, but fail to find it. His advice is, "stay at home, boys, and give the money you would have to spend in travelling to the poor."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Coughs, Influenza.—The soothing propensities of these medicaments render them well worthy of trial in all diseases of the respiratory organs. In common colds and influenza the Pills, taken internally, and the ointment rubbed over the chest and throat, are exceedingly efficacious. When influenza is epidemic, this treatise is the easiest, safest and surest. Holloway's Pills purify the blood, remove all obstacles to its free circulation through the lungs, relieve the over-gorged air tubes, and render respiration free, without reducing the strength, irritating the nerves, or depressing the spirits, such are the ready means of escaping from suffering when afflicted with colds, coughs, bronchitis, and other chest complaints, by which the health of so many is seriously and permanently injured in most countries.

GRAND VALLEY.

The spring show was held here on Friday. A good crowd and good horses filled the bill.

A new tailor shop is the latest acquisition to our village.

The schools remained closed for two days last week to allow the teachers to the annual convention, which was held at Shelburne on Thursday and Friday.

CATARRH,

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS—HAY FEVER

A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N.B.—This treatment is not a snuff or an ointment; both have been discarded by reputable physicians as injurious. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 303 West King Street, Toronto, Canada.—Toronto Globe.

Sufferers from Catarrhal troubles should carefully read the above.

A Seasonable Hint.

During the breaking up of winter, damp, chilly weather prevails, and rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, sore throat, croup, quinsy and other painful effects of sudden colds are common. Hagyard's Yellow Oil is a truly valuable household remedy for all such complaints.

AMONG THE POLITICIANS.

W. Mackintosh Elected by a Plurality of 803 Over Equal Rights May.

OTTAWA, April 30.—The election on Saturday to fill the seat for Ottawa City in the House of Commons made vacant by the death of the late William Goodhue Perley (Con.) resulted in the return of Charles Herbert Mackintosh (Con.) by the vote:

|---|---|
| Mackintosh (Con.) | 2463 |
| Hay (Equal Rights) | 1660 |
| Chrysler (Lib.) | 1251 |
| Plurality for Mackintosh over Hay | 803 |
| " " " Chrysler | 1212 |
| Majority against Mackintosh | 383 |

The Liberal candidate came within four votes of losing his deposit. In the Protestant and English sections of the city the Equal Rights vote was very large and Hay secured a majority. His total vote was made up of Equal Rights, discontented Conservatives and Liberals. The French vote remained practically unchanged, but 500 votes less than last election were polled in Lower Town, the French section.

Among the bills which received royal assent last week, was the one incorporating the Orange Order. On Thursday the House in committee of the whole considered Mr. Chapleau's bill to further amend the Franchise Act. Mr. Chapleau explained that its intention was to simplify the working of the act and to reduce the expenses of its operations. He announced that there would be no expense this year and that the next general elections might be expected to be held on the lists revised between June 30 and Dec. 31, 1891. These would be ready in ample time, as this House did not expire until March 31, 1892. In order to save time and trouble the supplementary lists containing the changes made by the revising officers would be printed for the future at the local printing offices in place of at the Government bureau. The lists would no longer be posted in three places in each electoral district but would be otherwise made readily accessible to all desiring to see them. The work having become less onerous as the act became better known, the remuneration of the revising officers will be diminished or else their number will be reduced and an endeavor will be made to have a greater number of judges act as revising officers.

On Friday the bill was read a third time.

Mr. Charlton drew attention to the provision of the McKinley bill that the United States import duty on lumber was reduced to $1.50 per thousand feet, with the promise that lumber from countries imposing export duty on logs should pay the old duty. He suggested therefore that the Dominion Government should make a proposal to the Government of the United States that our export duty on logs would be removed if the United States Government would reduce their import duty on lumber to $1.50.

Sir John Macdonald said there was no knowing what consequences might be involved in the McKinley bill before it passed the Houses. Representations of Mr. Charlton's suggestions would receive [illegible]

DOUBLE TRAGEDY AND ITS CAUSES.

A double tragedy occurred at noon Monday in the machine shop of Hutchinson Bros., Richmond street west, Toronto, and as a result Nathaniel John Hutchinson, the junior partner, is lying at his boarding house, 204 George street, with a bullet in his head, and Martha McLean is in a delirious condition at the General hospital from the effects of excitement and an overdose of laudanum. Hutchinson, who is about twenty two years of age and unmarried, has been keeping company with Martha McLean, who was engaged as a domestic at the residence of Mr. Thomas Caswell. From the girl's story it seems that Hutchinson seduced her and then refused to do anything for her. She was dismissed from Mr Caswell's employ. About 11 o'clock this forenoon Martha called at the drug store of Geo. A. Bingham, 100 Yonge street, asked for an ounce of laudanum and got it. The Hutchinson brothers were at work a few minutes after 12 o'clock, when the young woman stepped quietly in through the side door, and closed it noiselessly after her. Nathaniel, when she said something in a low voice, turned suddenly round and angrily pushed her away. The girl suddenly drew a revolver from her pocket and placing it close to Hutchinson's head pulled the trigger. The young man fell to the ground on his face, bleeding from a wound in the head near the left ear. William Hutchinson was so horrified that he could not interfere and the girl in a frenzy threw herself upon the man whom she thought she had murdered. A moment later she sprang to her feet and taking the vial of laudanum from her pocket she drank the poison. Recovering from the shock the oldest Hutchinson called for assistance and Constable Young having been notified arrested the girl and removed her to police headquarters. She was by this time in a dangerous condition from the effects of the laudanum, but refused to take an antidote until Dr. Sweetman produced a stomach pump, when she took an emetic which had an immediate effect and probably saved her life. She was removed to the hospital for further treatment.

CATARRH AND COLD IN HEAD HOW CURED

NASAL BALM CURES COLD IN THE HEAD AND CATARRH

NASAL BALM.

A certain and speedy cure for Cold in the Head and Catarrh in all its stages.

SOOTHING, CLEANSING, HEALING.

Instant Relief, Permanent Cure. Failure Impossible.

Many so-called diseases are simply symptoms of Catarrh, such as headache, partial deafness, loss of smell, foul breath, hawking and spitting, nausea, general feeling of debility, etc. If you are troubled with any of these, or kindred symptoms, you have Catarrh, and should lose no time in procuring a bottle of Nasal Balm. Be warned in time, neglected cold in head results in Catarrh, followed by consumption and death. Nasal Balm is sold by all druggists, or will be sent, post paid, on receipt of price (50 cents and $1.00) by addressing

FULFORD & CO., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

A DANGER SIGNAL!

A Cold in the Head may be aptly termed a danger signal warning you that if neglected that dangerous and disagreeable disease, Catarrh, is sure to follow, perhaps leading to Consumption and the grave. At no season of the year is Cold in the Head more prevalent than during the Spring months and at no other season do the people of this country suffer more generally from Catarrh, with all its disagreeable and annoying effects. Do not for an instant neglect either of these troubles, but apply NASAL BALM, the only remedy that will give instant relief and effect a thorough cure. The following testimonials from among thousands in our possession bear witness to its sterling merit.

Alex. Burns, Sudbury, Ont., says: I may state that I have been afflicted with Catarrh seven or eight years, and it was attended by consequent symptoms such as foul breath, constant dropping into the throat, hawking and spitting, partial deafness, ringing in the ears and sickening pains in the head directly over either eye. I have had powders and douches, but all to no effect, the only result arising from the use of such was temporary relief, followed by the usual symptoms in a more aggravated form. The results arising from the use of Nasal Balm: Sweet breath, stoppage of the drowping's into the throat, (consequently less hawking and spitting), clearness of hearing, and not once since I began its use have I had pain in the head. In fact, it is my opinion that a careful and persistent use of the Balm will effect a cure in the worst case of catarrh.

T. D. D. Loyd, 8 Clarence street, Toronto says: I wish here to testify to the unequalled healing powers of your Nasal Balm. I have been troubled for three years by what the doctors call post nasal catarrh, and have tried everything in the city that could be obtained, in the shape of catarrh cures, and found no permanent relief from any of them, till a friend one day advised me to try your Nasal Balm, and I find that even one bottle has done me more good than all the medicines put together that I have persecuted myself with before. I was very much troubled with spitting and hawking, especially in the morning, so much so that my throat was continually in a raw condition, but I am now beginning to know what it is to be able to speak freely. I shall not fail to recommend it to any of my friends suffering from the like disease.

NASAL BALM
INSTANTLY RELIEVES
Cold in Head.

A. W. Mallory, Mallorytown, Ont., says: My daughter suffered for years from a most distressing and annoying Catarrh. Her case was under the treatment of eminent physicians in the United States and Canada. Two months use of Nasal Balm has had more beneficial effects than all former treatment combined.

L. D. Dion, Dept. Railways and Canals, Ottawa, says: I am very glad to give you to-day the testimony that Nasal Balm has completely cured my catarrh, from which I suffered for nearly three years.

NASAL BALM
POSITIVELY CURES
CATARRH.

D. Derbyshire, Mayor of Brockville and President of the Ontario Creamery Association, says: Nasal Balm beats the world for Catarrh and Cold in the Head. In my own case it effected relief from the first application.

Isaac Waterman, Imperial Oil Co'y, Petrolia, Ont., says: Nasal Balm gave me the most perfect satisfaction of any medicine I ever used for Cold in the Head. I found it easy to use, quick in giving relief and effect a complete cure in a couple of hours.

If Nasal Balm is not kept in stock by your dealer it will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 Cent for small and $1 for large size bottles) by addressing

FULFORD & Co. Brockville, Ont.

"Remember always that while I live I am your friend. God sent me here, I believe, to save your life. I must help you all I can. Go home now, and to-morrow I will come over to see you; we will form some plan of cure; you must live, and live happily, I trust. Never say to yourself that you are alone and friendless, because, while I live, you have a true friend in me."

He stood up and raised her from the ground; he held her hand in his.

"Courage, my poor child," he said; "life has a bright side, and the victor shall wear a golden crown. Look up through the clouds and the sky, and there is a crown waiting for you. I shall go home and learn life's grandest lesson—endurance."

She bent her head, and touched his hand with her cold lips.

"I am very grateful to you," she said; and then, as he stood watching her, with slow, uncertain steps she left the pretty green grave-yard where she had so nearly lost her life.

Poetry.

HOUSE-CLEANING.

Sing a song of cleaning house
Pocketful of nails;
Four-and-twenty dustpans,
Scrubbing brooms and pails,
When the door is opened,
Wife begins to sing:
"Just help me move this wardrobe here,
And hang this picture, won't you, dear?
And tack this carpet by the door,
And stretch this one a little more.
And drive this nail, and screw this screw;
And here's a job I have for you—
This cupboard door will never catch
I think you'll have to fix the latch;
And O, while you're about it, John,
I wish you'd put the cornice on.

And hang this curtain; when you've done
I'll hand you up the other one;
This box has got to have a hinge
Before I can put on the fringe;
And won't you mend that broken chair?
I'd like a hook put right up there;
The wardrobe door must have a knob;
And here's another little job—
I really hate to ask you dear,
But could you fix a bracket here?"

And on it goes, when these are through,
And this and that and these to do,
And infinitom, and more too,
All in a merry jingle.
And isn't that enough to make
A man wish he was single? (Almost.)

A FRIEND IN NEED.

Gin ye find a heart that's weary,
And that needs a brither's hand,
Dinna turn thou from it, dearie;
Thou maun help fellow-man.
Thou, too, hast a hidden heartache,
Sacred from all mortal ken,
And because in thine own grief's sake
Thou maun feel for ither men.

Gin there's one 'gainst whom unkindly
Scorn has vent her bitter blows,
Dinna thou join in and blindly
Lend thy doubts to swell his woes.
Thou may'st feel the lash o' slander,
Know the stings o' falsehood, too,
Dinna stop to wait and wonder
If the thing be false or true.

Give thy hand while hand are needed
Give thy trust while trust is scant,
The sma' gifts are doubly heeded
When they come in time o' want.
Pity's blind and faith is blinder,
Hand in hand the brithers go;
Hope is kind, but love is kinder,
Dearie, thou wilt find it so.

In this worl' o'sceaw, dearie,
Grief goes up and joy comes down.
Brows that catch the sunshine cheerie
May to-morrow wear a frown.
Bleak December, dull and dreary,
Follows on the heels o' May,
Give thy trust unstinted, dearie,
Thou mayst need a friend some day.

SUNBEAMS.

She—"Miss Rodney always looks well for one who has so little to dress on." He—"Yes, she is rather thin."

Watchmaker—"These works are very rusty." Soedleigh—"Well, they ought to be; that watch has been in soak for six months."

A dry, hacking cough keeps the bronchial tubes in a state of constant irritation, which, if not speedily removed, may lead to bronchitis. No prompter remedy can be had than Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which is both an anodyne and expectorant.

Watts—"I notice young Brown has dropped into poetry." Potts—"Yes; and from the specimens I've seen I should say his feet were sadly injured by the fall."

"I is—" began Tommy, when his teacher interrupted him. "That is wrong; you should say 'I am'." "All right," said Tommy. "I am the ninth letter in the alphabet."

New Way to Force Your Hens to Lay.—After they are well accustomed to a Reaumur or a Celsius thermometer in the hen-house, remove it and slyly place a Fahrenheit. They will go at once to work.

At the station.—"Dearest Laura, don't cry so! If everything else vanishes, we shall yet have left to us memory!" "Ah, dearest Emma, then perhaps you will remember that I lent you five dollars two years ago."

Easily Ascertained.

It is easily to find out from anyone who has used it, the virtues of Hagyard's Yellow Oil for all painful and inflammatory troubles, rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, frost bites, burns, bruises, sprains, contracted cords, stiff joints, aches, pains and soreness of any kind, it has no superior.

A Man to Avoid.—Gilroy—"There's Snodgrass across the street; let's go over." Larkin—"No, thanks." Gilroy—"Why, I thought you were friends." Larkin—"So we are; but Snodgrass lives in the country now, and I don't care to hear anything about his garden to-day."

Home duties—Mrs. Gabb (ru-bbing in)—"Oh, Mrs. Gabb, why did you leave Silk & Co.'s bargain store so early? They've just opened a beautiful bank rupt stock of ribbons. Come right back, quick." Mrs. Gadd (with a powerful effort of self control)—"I cannot. Indeed, I cannot; I must help my husband to get dinner."

Pectoral Balsam cures coughs, colds, hoarseness, asthma, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles.

CONFIDENCE ALL GONE.

"Well, I'll be hanged!" he ejaculated, as he leaned on the window-sill in the post-office yesterday with an open letter in his hand.

"What's the matter?" spoke his friend with him.

"Why, I advertised for a lady companion last—not over 25—lively—brunette preferred. Here is my first answer."

"Are you married?"

"Yes, Maude, but I know the writer. She says she is 40, and fair, fat, and a blonde, very dull, and over 40 years old! Just think of her cheek in answering such an ad. No wonder our land has lost it's confidence in woman."

Nothing Like It!

Every day swells the volume of proof that as a specific for all blood diseases, nothing equals Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Remember, this is an old established remedy with a record! It has been weighed in the balance and tested during forty years. It has been tested many times in the worst cases with flattering success! For Tumors and Lung troubles, Catarrh, Kidney disease, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache and all disorders resulting from impoverished blood, there is nothing like Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—world-renowned and ever growing in favor!

THE UNDERTAKER AHEAD.

Brown—I learn that old man Takedrop came out ahead in that ten dollar bet he made with Jenkins, the undertaker.

Jones—You are mistaken, it was Jenkins who came out ahead.

Brown—Why, didn't Takedrop drink the half gallon of liquor in accordance with the terms of the wager.

Jones—Yes.

Brown—And didn't the undertaker hand over the ten dollars?

Jones—Yes, but Jenkins came out ahead nevertheless, for he got a hundred dollars for burying him.

High Time to Begin.

After a long winter the system needs a thorough cleansing, toning and regulating to remove impurities and prepare for summer. Thousands of testimonials show that Burdock Blood Bitters is the best spring medicine ever discovered, producing a feeling of buoyancy and strength. It removes that tired, worn out feeling, and restores lost appetite.

A NOVEL ADVERTISEMENT.

The following story which has never before appeared in print, is told about the editor of one of Maine's most prominent dailies: When a small boy, his father, now one of the most prominent men in the State, was then running a printing office and publishing a weekly paper in one of the largest towns in Kennebec County. One day the advance agent of a show came along and ordered some posters printed upon cotton cloth. His order was filled, but for some reason he neglected to call for them, and they were thus left on the printer's hands. The printer's wife ran across them, and as cloth was then high, she took the cloth home and used it to line a pair of pants she was then making for the editor above mentioned, then a boy of about ten years of age.

As the months rolled by the pantaloons grew threadbare, and at school one day he accidentally tore the seat out, leaving about one foot of lining exposed to view. This in itself would have made the boys smile, but they laughed till the tears came when they observed the following words standing out boldly upon the lining in large type:

"Doors open at 7.30. Performance begins at 8."

It is needless to state that the boy was sent home to his mother in tears.

A Mistake in the Animal.—A gentleman, accompanied by a favorite dog, visited the studio of a New York artist one day. There was a picture on the easel and the dog began barking furiously at it. "Nature may be relied upon, after all," said the visitor. "The best evidence of faithfulness with which you have painted that dog in the background is the earnestness with which my dog barks at it." "But that isn't a dog," said the artist, growing red in the face. "Not a dog? What is it, then?" "It's a cow." The gentleman was nonplussed for a moment, but quickly replied, "Well, the dog's eyes were better than mine; he never did like cows."

Truth Stranger Than Fiction.

Miss Jennie A. McNair, of Lion's Head, Bruce Co., Ont., tells the following remarkable experience:—I called upon a poor woman who was very sick. She had not left her bed for weeks. Her friends said she was dying of consumption, indeed she was so low it seemed that it would be but a very short time until she would pass away. I looked around on her little chidren and resolved if possible to cure her, but how to do it was the question. I was well used to the different forms of consumption and knew her trouble all came from the "head," and that her lungs were being destroyed by breathing the poisonous secretions into them. I came home praying that God would give me what was wanted to cure her—and He did in a strange way. A little boy came into the room where I was and wanted me to look at a story on a piece of paper. It proved to be an advertisement of Nasal Balm. I ordered it at once and it proved to be just what I wanted, as to-day the woman's head is all right. She is able to do her own work and is getting strong very fast. This remarkable change was affected by one bottle of Nasal Balm. Enclose 50 cents for another bottle, which is for a young lady here who has had catarrh for a long time. Please send at once and I will try and make its worth known in this place. It is a pleasure for me to work for the suffering and praise the medicine that deserves it.

An artist ought to have a model-wife. Flies want to make spectacles of themselves when they light on a man's nose.

What would be accepted as an apology from a big man might be considered an insult from a little one.

The model cloak girl must have a pretty figure, but the same condition is not necessarily attached to her salary.

In view of the extreme width of the spring style of trousers, it is pertinently suggested that a rule of etiquette be reversed and that the lady precede the gentlemen in going up stairs.

Autumn Anxieties.

I HAD a very bad cough this fall, but Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam cured me completely.

E. ROBERTS, Washago.

MAN AGAINST RATS.

"An extraordinary and brutal spectacle was witnessed recently," says the Paradise Advertiser, "in a blackguardly sheep and a hundred miles from Paradise. The rat, [illegible] in two minutes. The rules (not those of the Marquis of Queensberry or the London prize-ring) were that the man must have his hands tied behind his back, so that he could not possibly use them, and that he could not [illegible] his teeth. The man was Walter Laraty, sports who appreciate this thrilling and very painful [illegible] in other approximate for the combat they resorted to point that you will have Gentlemen Jack. The rats had been kept without food for forty-eight hours, to make them ferocious, and each was fattened by the tying up of the hind leg of a live chicken on a raised board about a foot from each other in a row, and were spit at and fortunately to make them perfectly wild.

"The latter was a man about 30, from Sarnia, and was a wiry, muscular fellow, clean shaved, and as he entered to do his task his eyes glistened with wild satisfaction, that even the spectators shuddered. The rats seemed to realize their fate and he seemed equal to winning the wager. The referee, holding stop watch, now gave the signal to go, and the man, bending over his first victim, clutched it with his teeth and it was all [illegible]. The second however, was bitter for he collared his adversary by the upper lip and the claret slightly trickled down, which only made the human being more ferocious; say how, he did his rat. The next ten rats he disposed of without any apparent effort, but as he with his deadly grip at the twelth the rat caught him in the eye and the excitement grew intense. The man was writhing under the greatest agony and [illegible] the rat eater would not give in and they could not draw him away. At last one of the spectators grabbed an axe-handle and crushed the rat, then liberated his man, who presented a frightful and repulsive appearance, his face being nearly covered with blood and his eye badly lacerated. The sports who lost their boodle were very sore at the result, having confidence in their man, but with good nature, for men of sporting proclivities are famous, chipped in a few bills for the vanquished."

His Intentions Were Good.—She (examining sketch of "Native in Costume of the Country")—"This was drawn from the life, too?" He—"Yes; her brothers were looking over my shoulders while I did it." She—"And yet you say they are a hot-blooded people, quick to resent an insult?" He—"Indeed, they are." She—"How did you escape alive?"

"You are too hard on Mr. Skinflint. You should treat him with more of the milk of human kindness."

"He'd churn it into butter and sell it if I did."

Mrs. Youngwife—Did you ever try any of my biscuits, Judge?

Judge—No, I never did; but I dare say they deserve it.

Robinson—Well, Thomas, I suppose you were beside yourself with joy when Miss Martha accepted you?

Thomas—Not exactly, but I was beside her for some time afterward.

An old maid she wished she was an auctioneer, for then it would be perfectly proper to say, "Made me an offer."

☞ THE SUN for cheap printing.

A little girl, aged nine, called her father to her bedside the other evening. "Papa," said the little diplomat, "I want to ask your advice." "Well, what is it about?" "What do you think it will be best to give me on my birthday?"

The Public Warned.

MANY people are deceived into neglecting bad blood, dyspepsia, constipation, and thus allow these and other diseases to become established. Act promptly by using nature's blood purifying tonic, Burdock Blood Bitters, which regulates the entire system, curing all diseases of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

Doctor—"How are you?" Patient—"No better." Doctor—"You remember I told you to eat plain food." Patient—"That's what I'm doing. I've eaten nothing but plain lobster."

Father—"James, you know I disapprove very much of your fighting, but I cannot help feeling proud of you for whipping such a big boy as that. What did you whip him for?" Son (indignantly)—"Why, he said I looked like you."

Best of All

Cough medicines, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is in greater demand than ever. No preparation for Throat and Lung Troubles is so prompt in its effects, so agreeable to the taste, and so widely known as this. It is the family medicine in thousands of households.

"I have suffered for years from a bronchial trouble that, whenever I take cold or am exposed to inclement weather, shows itself by a very annoying tickling sensation in the throat and by difficulty in breathing. I have tried a great many remedies, but none does so well as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral which always gives prompt relief in returns of my old complaint."—Ernest A. Hepler, Inspector of Public Roads, Parish Terre Bonne, La.

"I consider Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a most important remedy

For Home Use.

I have tested its curative power, in my family, many times during the past thirty years, and have never known it to fail. It will relieve the most serious affections of the throat and lungs, whether in children or adults."—Mrs. E. G. Edgerly, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

"Twenty years ago I was troubled with a disease of the lungs. Doctors afforded me no relief and considered my case hopeless. I then began to use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and, before I had finished one bottle, found relief. I continued to take this medicine until a cure was effected. I believe that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life."—Samuel Griggs, Waukegan, Ill.

"Six years ago I contracted a severe cold which settled on my lungs and soon developed all the alarming symptoms of Consumption. I had a cough, night sweats, bleeding of the lungs, pains in chest and sides, and was so prostrated as to be confined to my bed most of the time. After trying various prescriptions, without benefit, my physician finally determined to give me Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I took it, and the effect was magical. I seemed to rally from the first dose of this medicine, and, after using only three bottles, am as well and sound as ever."—Rodney Johnson, Springfield, Ill.

Rich and Poor,

Prince and Peasant, the Millionaire and Day Laborer, by their common use of this remedy, attest the world-wide reputation of Ayer's Pills. Leading physicians recommend these pills for Stomach and Liver Troubles, Costiveness, Biliousness, and Sick Headache; also, for Rheumatism, Jaundice, and Neuralgia. They are sugar-coated; contain no calomel; are prompt, but mild, in operation; and, therefore, the very best medicine for Family Use, as well as for Travelers and Tourists.

"I have derived great relief from Ayer's Pills. Five years ago I was taken so ill with that I was unable to do any work. I took three boxes of Ayer's Pills and was entirely cured. Since that time I am never without a box of these pills." Peter Christensen, Sherwood, Wis.

Rheumatism

"Ayer's Pills have been in use in my family upwards of twenty years and have completely verified all that is claimed for them. In attacks of piles, from which I suffered many years, they afford greater relief than any other medicine I ever tried."—T. F. Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for a number of years, and have never found anything equal to them for giving me an appetite and imparting energy and strength to the system. I always keep them in the house."—R. D. Jackson, Wilmington, Del.

DOWN INTO THE DUST.

Is it worth while that we jostle a brother
Bearing his load on the rough road of life?
Is it worth while that we jeer at each other
In the blackness of heart? that we war to the knife?
God pity us all in our pitiful strife!

God pity us all as we jostle each other;
God pardon us all for the triumph we feel
When a fellow goes down 'neath his load on that heather,
Pierced to the heart; words are keener than steele,
And mightier far for woe or for weal.

Were it not well, in this brief, little journey
On over the isthmus, down into the tide,
We give him a fish instead of a serpent,
Ere folding the hands to be and abide
Forever and aye in the dust by his side?

Look at the roses saluting each other,
Look at the beards all at peace on the plain—
Man and Beast only make war on his brother,
And laughs in his heart at his peril and pain,
Shamed by the beast that goes down on the plain.

Is it worth while that we battle to humble
Some poor fellow-soldier down into the dust?
God pity us all! Time oft soon will tumble
All of us together like leaves in a gust,
Humbled indeed down into the dust.

CHAPTER VI.

"FAREWELL, MY HOME!"

BACK through the evening gloaming, through the darkning shadows, to the home that had once been Eden, but would never be home again she walked slowly. Her lips trembled, great waves of pain seemed to rise, almost to overwhelm her, then to recede. There was the pretty garden, with its sleeping flowers; the shadows were falling fast; the rosy flush was dying out of the sky. From one of the upper windows a faint light gleamed.

Last evening, only last evening, at this very hour, she had been walking with him, they had watched the sun set; his arm was thrown round her, his loving words making sweetest music in her ear, his lips seeking hers with fondest caresses, his hands lingering on her wealth of golden brown hair—she happier than any other creature living, in the sunshine and warmth of his love.

Now she must return to the home that would know him no more; she must enter the room where the sun of his presence would never again shine; she must take with her the knowledge that she had been deceived, betrayed—that he had mocked her while he loved her, that he had laughed at her when he kissed her—that his love, his truth, his fidelity, was all one grand lie. He had simply made her the dupe of a passing wish for amusement, and she had given him her life.

"I wonder," she said to herself, as she stood at the little gate where so short a time since she had stood with him, "I wonder if there is any truth in men? are they all alike—all treacherous, selfish, and wicked? That old man who saved my life, has he ever broken a woman's heart, or blighted a woman's life? Shall I ever believe in faith, in truth, in honesty again?"

She entered the pretty little house that had been so beautifully arranged for her, the sight of the familiar flowers and pictures, the chair that he had always occupied, the thousand little home treasures, stabbed her aching heart with fresh pain. She went into the room still strewn with the wreck of the jewels and ornaments, and again fierce hot anger rose in her heart

"Did he think to buy my soul with such trifles?" she thought, bitterly.

Then a sudden sensation of faintness came over her. It was growing late, and she had neither eaten nor drunk since morning. Her strength seemed to have left her. She sunk half fainting on a chair, just as Hannah, with curious pity written on every feature, entered the room.

The girl looked at her mistress and some instinct told her, not the whole truth but something like it.

"Has the master gone away?" she asked, but Silvia made no reply.

"You look very ill," said Hannah; "is there nothing I can get for you—nothing that I can do?"

"Nothing," was the brief reply.

"But you have had neither dinner nor tea. Your dress is all wet with dew. Let me, at least, make you some hot coffee."

"I can neither eat nor drink," said the faint voice. "The greatest kindness you can do me is to leave me quite alone."

The woman retired, and Silvia, looking round, said to herself:

"I would not touch the wine or the food his money has purchased—no, not to save my life."

Hannah went up to the nursery where Jennie, the nurse, sat with the child.

"Do you know what is the matter down stairs, Jennie?"

"No; I did not know there was anything wrong; what is it?"

"I leave you to guess. Master was to be home for dinner; he has never come the mistress has never broken her fast—where she has been I cannot tell; her dress is all wet with dew, and she looks like a ghost. The dining room floor is all covered with broken jewels. I tell you, Jennie, there is something terribly wrong."

"Have they had a quarrel?" asked the nurse; "most husbands and wives do quarrel."

"No; for when he went out I saw him kissing her, and I heard him say, 'I shall be back soon, my darling, that does not look much like quarreling, does it?"

"Perhaps he has left her; no one knows who is who or what is what in this world; they say never have been married at all," suggested Jennie with great calm.

"They were married right enough, that I can swear, as sure as my name is Hannah Royden. I know—" but her words came abruptly to a close. Silvia's white face suddenly appeared at the door. She took the child in her arms.

"I shall not want anything more," she said. "You can leave the baby with me, and, when you have had your supper go to bed."

They would have remonstrated, but there was something in the white face that commanded obedience; they would fain have remained with her, have given her what poor comfort was in their power have waited upon her, and made her comfortable, but the quiet dignity of her sorrow overawed them. They withdrew without one word. But Hannah, who was warmly attached to her beautiful young mistress, could not rest; she went back again, and found Mrs. Rymer sitting with the baby on her knee, looking the very image of desolation and sorrow.

"Mrs. Rymer, let me do something for you," she cried, pleadingly. "Let Jennie take the child again; let me find you a dry warm dress, and bring you some tea with some cold chicken; do, pray let me get you something."

"I do not want it. I care for nothing but rest."

"Rest," thought the woman, "with those wild eyes, and that desolate, despairing face. I am quite sure there is no rest for her," but as it was useless staying, she went away.

A woman less pure would have been less proud. A woman whose conscience was not so loyal, so delicate, would have suffered less. Many women would have said to themselves that they were innocent of all wrong, and therefore they would take what remained to them. Many good women, too, would have made themselves comfortable would have kept the pretty house, and lived on the money not so Silvia Rymer. Her faith in him had been so perfect, it had always seemed to her that they had but one soul, one life, one heart, one pulse between them, all that was altered now. If she was not his lawful wife, she had no right to his money; as for taking the wages of sin, the price of her honor, a bribe for her soul, she would have died a thousand deaths rather than have done it; so she sat still and silent in her desolation, waiting until all should be quiet, if the little one wailed or cried she hushed him in a low voice, and as she sat there, faint, desolate, and abandoned, it seemed to her that the whole world stood still

Quiet at last; the voices of the servants had died away. She heard the door of their room fastened, then she rose, and laid the child on the bed. She went to her room and took from her wardrobe the dress she had worn on the day she left home; she divested herself of everything that had been purchased by him. In the pocket of her dress there still remained the little purse she had brought with her, and it contained a few pounds the savings of her girlhood, when sorrow had seemed far from her as the earth from the sun. She dressed herself, and then looked for the last time round the little room where she had been so wondrously happy. She kept back the burning tears, she checked the wild, bitter sobs, she trampled down the wild, terrible grief that would have slain her had she given way

"Good-bye," she said quietly. "Here where I have been so happy—here, where morning and night I have knelt to say my prayers, and have always prayed for him—here I leave my protest against the ruin he has brought on me; here I leave my protest against my lost honor, my blighted life, my broken heart. Let that protest confront him in the day when he shall ask for mercy, and find it not."

She took the baby in her arms, it stirred with a plaintive cry, and she laid her trembling lips on its face.

"Do not cry, my darling," she said. "You and I can stand together alone before the whole world—we have only each other."

She wrapped the little one in a thick, warm shawl, and clasping it in her arms went down stairs. One mute, wistful look at the pretty rooms, one farewell glance at the familiar spot, then she opened the door and quitted the house. She walked rapidly through the garden, when she reached the high road she stood for one moment looking back.

"Farewell, my home!" she said; "farewell, my love! farewell for evermore!"

Then with a passion of tears she clasped the little one more tightly in her arms—she looked up at the blue heavens.

"Heaven bless us, baby!" she said; "we are indeed thrown on the world."

CHAPTER VII.

"SHE SHALL BE MINE."

It had been a cruel deception—a heartless, cruel case; one that cried to Heaven for vengeance; but unhappily so common that the world does not even stop to sigh about it. A beautiful face, a pure, loving, tender heart, a simple country girl, as ignorant of the wicked ways of the world as of Greek, and a rich, titled libertine. How could it end? How could it be other than it was, considering that Basil Ulric Vyner, Lord Dynecourt, had never in his whole life denied himself one single wish?

He would have asked you why should he? He was rich, almost fabulously rich; from his very cradle he had been flattered, fawned upon, cringed to, waited on; with Silvia's adulations; he had never known a request ungratified, a wish refused, or a command disobeyed. The world was at his feet, he had but to speak and he was obeyed. From earliest boyhood flattery and adulation had been floated round him; who had ever spoken the truth to him? Not his foolish, indulgent, vain, worldly mother. She considered truth as ill bred and very unfashionable. Their was no mention of it made in the training of the heir of Dynecourt.

Do such women know there is a God? Certainly, Lady Dynecourt never told her son so. He was taken to church occasionally, beautifully dressed, and amused himself during the sermon by eating bon bons; their his religious training began and ended.

When he chose to express a wish for anything, what was to stand in his way? Conscience? Certainly not; for he considered his whole world made for him. Honor? No; the only kind of honor he understood was, that he must pay all his debts at play. Religion? Less than than anything, for the simple reason that he knew nothing whatever about it.

So that when Basil Ulric Vyner, Lord Dynecourt, saw beautiful, innocent, gentle Silvia Lyndoe, he said to himself that by fair means or foul means he must win her. What was to prevent his doing so? What was to interfere?

The pretty, picturesque little village of Rosebank lies among the Kentish hills, and near it stands the grand, stately castle of Northen, the seat of the Earl of Northenden. Lord Dynecourt was visiting there, and riding one morning through the pretty little village he saw what he considered the most beautiful vision ever granted him. A young lovely girl sitting on an old fashioned stile, that led into the meadows. She was making up bouquets of wild flowers. Looking, he saw a fair, sweet face, innocent, pure, and tender as the face of an angel, lovely beyond all words; sweet limpid eyes, bright and full of poetry; sweet smiling lips, a white and graceful neck, and pretty white hands. A lovely girlish figure that had all the simple grace and poetry of childhood. As he looked at her, all unconscious of observation, the girl began to sing; the musical voice, so clear, so soft, completed the charm.

Lord Dynecourt swore an oath to himself, and he kept it.

He stopped his horse, and, bowing low, hat in hand, asked her if she could direct him to Catingdean To have seen her beautiful confusion; how her face grew crimson with warmest blushes; how she rose from her seat, letting the wild flowers fall as they would. He was obliged to repeat his question before she understood it.

He pretended not to understand, so as to prolong those delicious moments, then thanked her, begged one of her flowers, and rode away. It seemed a very simple beginning to what was to the end a tragedy, but the prologue of a play does not always tell what the end will be.

A few days afterward the earl, with his family, went abroad, and his visitors returned to their homes, with the exception of Lord Dynecourt, who took lodgings in Rosebank, that he might the better carry out the vow he had made to himself.

He contrived to see Silvia often. He would wait whole hours for an opportunity of saying a few words to her. He made the best possible use of his time but for once in his life my Lord Dynecourt was baffled. The girl was shielded from all harm by her child like innocence. She did no wrong, she did not understand it when she heard it. To her simple notions love was beautiful, heavenly, but it ended in marriage, she did not even know anything else. She was pure in soul as the lily was pure in leaf. He propounded his horrible theories to her, the theories used by men of the world who wish to disguise sin in poetry. She heard them with a smile on her lip, for in very truth she did not understand them, they did not alarm her for the simple reason that they were like so much Greek to her.

Lord Dynecourt was baffled—baffled by her innocence, her sinless simplicity her unstudied grace and purity. He had sense enough to see that if he once startled her she would be like a frightened bird, she would flutter her bright wings and soar away out of his sight He was obliged to submit to a charm he had never felt before, the charm of angelic purity.

"It will take time," he would say to himself, "but I shall win in the end. She shall be mine"

He enjoyed the change; he called himself Mr Rymer, he carefully concealed his rank and title, and he learned more of life in that short time than he had ever done before. He, who prided himself on his conquests, who boasted that he had won more hearts than any two men, he who had but to look and to conquer, dare not, positively dare not ask this beautiful innocent girl to meet him unknown to her mother. He knew that she would not.

He was obliged to humble himself still further. He introduced himself to the mother, Mrs. Lyndoe, a simple widow lady; he told her that he was possessed of some small means, and that he wished to marry her daughter. Mrs Lyndoe, who thought no one good enough for her lovely daughter, gave her consent, because she saw that the girl loved him with her whole heart; and it was as Silvia's betrothed lover that he had the privilege of calling at the house when he liked, of spending the greater part of his time with her. How the poor child loved him could not be told, it was as she said, her soul grew to his soul, her heart to his.

They had been engaged some time before he dare whisper to her that he was not quite what he seemed to be—that he had great expectations of fortune, but the time had not passed unpleasantly to him. She was so lovely, so pure, so graceful, that losing her was to the experienced man of the world a novel and piquant sensation. He laid up a store of health during those quiet months that lasted him for some years.

How he deceived her she has told herself. He never hinted the least difficulty on the score of marriage; all he said was that his fortune would depend on the marriage being kept a secret. If she had been a little more worldly-wise, a little more experienced, she would have seen through the matter at once; as it was she never even dreamed of evil. The greatest wrong she ever committed was in consenting to leave home unknown to her mother.

But then, his arguments had been so plausible, he loved her so dearly, and she loved him so well, that she could not refuse.

The rest was easy enough. He was charmed by her so he saw one year and a half with her in Scotland, then he grew tired and left her. That was how—young, beautiful, and desolate—she was thrown on the world.

CHAPTER VIII.

LORD DYNECOURT'S REFLECTIONS.

A BRIGHT May day; the London season was just beginning; everything looked cheerful, bright, and hopeful. The springing fresh and green on the trees; the birds were singing blithest welcome to the beautiful spring; flowers were blooming, the pink hawthorn was shining on the lodges, the parks looked fresh and green. London wore the aspect of a gay rising to a fresh life. Beautiful women, noble men, horses and carriages were to be seen in its magnificent streets and squares. There was a round of gaiety by night and by day; theatres, operas, balls, concerts were all flourishing; fêtes and grand entertainments were on the tapis. It was as though the world had just aroused itself to a new and more enlivening time.

On the steps of a fashionable club house in Pall Mall stood Ulric Lord Dynecourt. He was watching the animated scene around him, but there was neither interest nor amusement in his face; there was something of scornful indifference, as though he had seen it all so often that he was tired of it.

He stood there for some short time, then went into the hall.

"Any letters?" he asked of the porter.

"None, my lord," was the reply.

Then the indifferent expression deepened on Lord Dynecourt's face, while the porter wondered why his lordship seemed to be always expecting a letter that never came.

Exchanging nods and salutations, Lord Dynecourt went into the great bay-windowed room where so many of his friends were assembled. He had gone there purposely to seek society, but there was evidently none that he cared for. He bowed right and left, then went to the great window and sat down in solitary state. He looked on the brilliant panorama flitting before him, but no gleam of interest brightened his face; only cool, calm, cynical indifference, that deepened every now and then into contempt. So he sat for some time in silence. At length he aroused himself.

"What am I thinking of?" he said: "what has come over me? If it were not maudness to suppose such a thing, I should fancy that I was looking back regret to Lake Cottage. Poor little Silvia! I wonder how she took that letter? Philosophically, I should imagine: after the manner of women—making the best of it—enjoying all the solid comforts money brings."

Yet, even as he spoke the false, cynical words, the lovely, childlike face, so innocent so pure, so gentle, rose before him and rebuked him; a thousand memories of her came to him—of her fair face in the morning light, of her happy, buoyant, beautiful pride in the little child; of her loving, gentle, artless ways; her pretty, shy, timid caresses—memories that brought a keen, sharp pain in his heart, cold and worldly as it was.

"What has come over me?" he asked himself again. "I shall begin to think soon that I was in love—positively, truly, actually in love with her, after all."

Silence again; and again the same wearied look at the bright scene outside, as by sudden contrast there rose before him the quiet lake, the pretty cottage embowered in trees, the sunlit garden, and the face that always had sweetest smiles of welcome for him. Then he turned impatiently away.

"I should not be haunted so much by her," he thought, peevishly. "If I had an idea how she was getting on, it is hearing nothing from her that makes me nervous."

As though in answer to his thoughts, at that very moment Mr. Gresham, of firm of Messrs King & Gresham, passed by the club window, and seeing Lord Dynecourt there alone, raised his hat. Lord Dynecourt made an eager sign to him.

"You are just the very man I wanted to see," he cried. "Have you heard any thing from Brae?"

"Not one line," replied the lawyer.

"There must be a considerable sum of money waiting for her," said Lord Dynecourt. "Has she never applied for any?"

"We have never received one line from her, my lord, good, bad, or indifferent."

"But that seems very strange," said Lord Dynecourt.

"I do not agree with you," replied the lawyer, an expression of something like disgust crossing his face. "It never was a case of money, if I understand your lordship right."

"No, no, perhaps not; but then money can do anything."

"Not everything; it cannot, for example, heal a broken heart or soothe wounded honor."

Lord Dynecourt looked up with a sneer on his handsome face.

"I can hardly believe that I am talking to a lawyer," he said, "a lawyer of the nineteenth century, too. 'A broken heart.' It is hard enough to believe in hearts at all, to say nothing of broken ones."

"We see a great deal of our profession, Lord Dynecourt. We perhaps see more of the real disinterestedness of women than you can ever do. We had a case not unlike yours left our management only last year. A beautiful girl she was, deceived by the pretense of a false marriage. We were empowered to make the most handsome provision for her. She refused even to hear from us or to see us; but she starved herself on the step of her betrayer's door."

Lord Dynecourt's face grew very pale.

"How extremely unpleasant!" he said "What a cheerful companion you are, Mr Gresham. Have you made inquiries in the cottage?"

"Yes, but quite without result. The only information we could obtain was, that the lady with her little child had suddenly disappeared. There was a white-haired old minister, Reverend Something Douglas, very much interested in her; but no one had the slightest clew as to her whereabouts."

"Well, we have done the best we can Of course, you will let me know at once when you do hear?"

"That I will, most certainly," replied the lawyer, as he turned away, "and that," he added to himself, "will be never."

"She never can have taken the matter so deeply to heart as to have destroyed herself," said Lord Dynecourt, with a shudder.

"Upon my word, it seems an absurd thing for a sinner like myself to say, but I do begin to wish that I had left the girl alone."

"You are looking very grave, Ulric," said a cheery voice. "What is the matter?"

Looking round impatiently, Lord Dynecourt saw the merry, handsome face of Captain Harry Fraser, his chosen, intimate, and dearest friend.

"What do you think they are saying about you, Ulric?"

"I do not know, and certainly I care little," he replied.

"They say you are making yourself miserable over that affair in Scotland."

"What affair?" interrupted Lord Dynecourt, quickly.

"Nay; how can I tell? You do not trust me with your little secrets, nor do I care to pry into them; only common sense tells us that when the brightest star in our galaxy vanishes for over eighteen months at a time, that particular star is bent on mischief somewhere."

"If I am the 'star,' you are mistaken in attributing any particular mischief to me. I was tired to death of London, so I kept out of it."

"You know your own affairs best; but there is a story going round the clubs of a pretty girl and a little cottage."

"Do not talk nonsense, Harry; such stories are not pleasant. What if lady Clotilde heard them?"

The young captain's face changed its whole expression.

"You ought not even to utter her name, after talking as we have done," he replied. "Lady Clotilde is—well, to speak frankly, she is a thousand times too good for you, Ulric."

"You would like her yourself," said his lordship, sneeringly.

"I should like to be worthy to mention her name," said Captain Fraser, with a deep flushon his handsome face; "and that is what neither you nor I am."

"What humility! I am going to call there now; come with me, Harry; you can do all the talking. I do not feel quite myself this morning, though I can hardly tell why."

"I shall perhaps be in the way," said the captain, modestly. "Lovers do not often require a third party."

"Lovers! nonsense! Lady Clotilde has too much good sense for that kind of thing. When once you have asked a woman to marry you and the day is named, what more is there to say?"

Ah, what indeed? Suddenly before him rose the long hours he had spent in the green lanes of Rosebank, content to look at Silvia's face and listen to her voice. What had they talked of through the long summer hours? Love! only love! How he would have resented the intrusion of a third party there.

What had they talked of in the pretty cottage by the lake, hour after hour, as they sat on the shining shores, or in the sunlit gardens? Love! very love! and he had not tired of it. The music of that sweet voice telling him, over and over again how dear he was to her, telling all her pure thoughts, all her bright, gentle, beautiful fancies.

"Ulric," cried his companion, impatiently, "what are you thinking about?"

And Lord Dynecourt, rousing himself, thought with a deep sigh, "I must have been in love with Silvia, after all."

TO BE CONTINUED.

ADULTERATED CANDIES.

The Board of Trade Journal of Portland Me., is authority for the statement that about 6,000 tons of terra alba were recently imported through the port of New York alone. The only use for terra alba in any quantity is in the adulteration of candies, and when these two facts are put together they become very significant. The substance is mineral, utterly insoluble in the juices of the gastric juice, and the result of eating candies adulterated cannot be otherwise than excessively injurious. The carelessness of the use of such stuff in candies is all the greater for the fact that most of the candies that are adulterated with it are used by children of tender years.

The extent to which it exists in certain candies may be surmised by an incident which occurred within the experience of the editor of the National Druggist. A wholesale grocery house of St. Louis made a claim against the South Shore Line for damages due on a certain lot of lozenges manufactured by a Boston house and shipped in barrels over that line. The owner of the line procured some of the lozenges and had them by a competent chemist examination. The result of our investigation showed them to consist entirely of terra alba, bound together with a little gelatine or gum (we have forgotten which). Further investigation developed the fact that they were simply blocks or forms to be used in preparing compositions, the method of use being simply to immerse them for a few moments in syrups flavored in peppermint, wintergreen etc. The agent, armed with these facts, refused to pay any damages, and the concern, rather than risk the exposure incident upon the lawsuit, dropped the claim.—National Druggist.

ADVICE TO A YOUNG MAN.

Remember, my son you have to work. Whether you handle a pick or a pen, a wheelbarrow or a set of books digging ditches or editing a paper, singing an auction sale bill or writing funny things you must work. If you look around you you will see that the men who are most able to live the rest of their lives without work are the men who work the hardest. Don't be afraid of killing yourself with overwork. It is beyond your power to do that on this sunny side of thirty. They die sometimes, but it is because they quit work at 6 p. m. and don't get home until 2 a. m. It is the interval that kills, my son. The work gives you an appetite for your meals, it lends solidity to your slumbers, it gives you a perfect and grateful appreciation of a holiday. There are young men who do not work but the work is not proud of them. It does not know their names even; it simply speaks of them as old so and so's boys. Nobody likes them; the great busy world doesn't know that they are there. So find out what you want to do and be, and take off your coat and make a dust in the world. The busier you are the less harm you will be apt to get into, the sweeter will be your sleep, the brighter and happier your holidays, and the better satisfied will the world be with you.

ORANGEVILLE, MAY 8, 1890.

IT WAS A MISTAKE.

LAST week we gave it as our opinion that the holding of the Dufferin Conservative convention in Orangeville was a mistake. And we are still futher convinced that such is the case. The fact that delegates from the northern townships will object to travelling to the extreme south end of the county is very apparent. Why not have called the convention at Shelburne, the place where it has always been held? Shelburne is a more central point, and, therefore, a more representative meeting would be insured. The northern men are a little put out in consequence, and, we believe they have determined to nominate a candidate at that end of the county.

The Shelburne Free Press, a Conservative journal, expresses itself thusly:

"From the feeling at the present time there is likely to be much dissatisfaction in Dufferin over the holding of the Convention. It is well known that Shelburne is the most central place in the constituency, and ever since the organization of the County the convention has been held here. Three years ago Mr. Joseph Foster, of Orangeville, was elected president of the Association, and it is his intention to hold the convention in Orangeville, against the wishes of the northern townships. The editor of this paper held the position of secretary to the Association for some years, and when we were requested to go to all the meeting for Orangeville, we entered a protest against it and tendered our resignation. The matter is now in the hands of the president and we hope our friends in the north will acquit us of any blame in the matter."

EDITORIAL NOTES

THE Reformers of Dufferin are seriously thinking of running a candidate for this constituency.—!—!!—!!!

THE captain of the American fishing schooner Howard Holbrook, seized at Harbor Breton, has been fined $500, and has appealed the case to the circuit court, which sits in September.

THERE seems to be some dissatisfaction in the Conservative ranks in Peel. It is said that a straight Conservative candidate will be nominated. The Brampton papers have donned their old time campaign garb.

SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT made his final effort to defeat the Tariff bill yesterday. On the motion for the third reading he moved in amendment that, seeing that there is a surplus present and prospective, and increased taxation proposed by the bill is unjustifiable and unnecessary. The amendment was defeated.

THE Ontario Legislature paused and thought awhile about Mr Dryden's dog bill. The New York Legislature didn't. They passed a stringent dog bill a year ago, which was to go into force this summer. Last month they repented and repealed the bill. Caution as to overburdening the statue book with troublesome interferences is a virtue very much needed.

THE meeting under the auspices of the Young Men's Liberal Conservative Association in the Pavillion at Toronto Tuesday evening was a great success. Mr. W. R. Meredith, who spoke eloquently and at length, was given an enthusiastic reception. Messrs. E. F. Clarke and H. E. Clarke also made speeches, and a resolution endorsing Mr. Meredith's platform was carried unanimously.

CANADA'S New Party, advertised as an intermixture of Equal Rights and Prohibition, intend holding a meeting in Orangeville to-morrow for the purpose of bringing out a sacrifice for Dufferin. De Gaviller, of Grand Valley, is president of the society, and it is said he would do almost anything to get to parliament. THE SUN asked a prominent Equal Rights official if "Canada's New Party" were connected with the original Equal Rights. He replied that it was not, and that he believed "Canada's New Party" originated at Grand Valley and existed there only. Next Party!

Twelve hundred carpenters and joiners and 750 mill workers struck at San Francisco on Friday for eight hours.

MR. MEREDITH has justly earned his right to rule Ontario, at least for a time. The electorate cannot go wrong or make any mistake by entrusting the affairs of government to Mr. Meredith. He is sound on the ballot, and he is sound on the great question of education. He is sound on the question of the just relation that any church and every church should possess in reference to the state. He is an honest and capable statesman, and worthy of the people's highest confidence. We shall use our best efforts to replace Mr. Mowat with Mr. Meredith, and consider such effort our duty to the public.—St. Thomas Times.

It looks as if the concession which the young Kaiser's labor conference seemed to imply to the demands of the extremists had effected the workmen's organization all over Europe. The agitation in Italy, Austria, Hungary, Germany, France, and looks like an antagonist international movement. It may be, of course, that the Emperor felt the first hot breath of the approaching storm and determined to anticipate it by counteractive measures. But that view would be giving him credit for more foresight than the world will be disposed to ascribe to him. A third explanation is that the prevailing unrest so soon after the conference is a mere coincidence. But there is some reason to believe—even when allowence is made for local causes of discontent—that the announcement of the conferencent created an impression that in Germany the government had become alarmed at the growing power of socialism, and that, by persistent agitation, the more radical wing of the host of labor might bring all the constitituted authorities to its feet. If this conference was a mistake that would be a still greater mistake. Even republics (as the United States showed in the case of the Chicago anarchist,) will not be tamely defied.—Montreal Gazette.

EAST GARAFRAXA COUNCIL

Council Room, March 22nd, 1890.

Council met to-day according to adjournment of 26th January. Members all present. Minutes of last meeting read and adopted.

A petition was received from a number of ratepayers, of School Sec. No. 11, praying for a division of the Section, also from Eli Southorn and others requesting the appointment of an arbitrator for the purpose of taking into consideration the forming of a union school with a portion of the township of Caledon.

Mr. Turner moved, seconded by Mr. Fearns, that all the lots from lot 10 to the townline, on concession 15 be taken from school Sec. No. 12 and added to school Sec. No. 5, and that the clerk notify the trustees, of Sections No. 12 and 5, to attend the next meeting of the council and make their objections, if any.—Carried.

Mr. Simpson moved, seconded by Mr. Carroll, that the petition of school Sec. No. 11, be granted.—Carried.

A by-law was introduced and passed dividing School Section No. 11, and forming a new section. Also a by law appointing the following gentlemen a board of health, viz:—William McPherson, John Legate, Wm. Cornelius, Samuel Woolner, Robert Donaldson, and Dr. Lewis medical health officer.

Mr. Turner moved, seconded by Mr. Fearns, that Messrs. Hamilton, Simpson and Carroll be a committee to meet a committee from Amaranth to examine the townline at the end of gravel road.—Carried.

Mr. Simpson moved, seconded by Mr. Turner, that the council go into committee of the whole on the auditors' report.—Carried Committee rose and reported the accounts correct, and that the report be received and adopted.

Mr. Carroll moved, seconded by Mr Simpson, that the offer of Mrs. Robinson to take at the rate of $120 per acre for a right of way around the Grand river hill on line 12 be accepted, and that the engineer be instructed to go on and make a survey of the same.—Carried.

Mr. Fearns moved, seconded by Mr Turner, that this council do now adjourn until the 31st day of May next as a court of revision on the assessment, and all parties having appeals will please attend.—Carried.

JOHN PRESTON, Clerk.

CARE OF NEW MILCH COWS.

The manufacturer who is careless about keeping his machinery in order is pretty sure to make a poor showing at the end of the year. And this is equally true of the dairy man, who is indeed, a manufacturer, as well as the maker of woollen and cotton goods. If he is in different with regard to the condition and needs of his milk making machines, the effort will be sure to be seen in diminishing profits and heavy losses. The following hints from the American Cultivator should be carefully considered by such careless dairymen:

This is the time of year when a majority of new milch cows are due to calf. They will need care and attention at this period if they are to go through the dangers of parturition with safety. A little neglect or carelessness may destroy much of their value through the season if it does not kill them outright. In the first place they should have cooling food, not concentrated, but of a kind to relax the stomach, and cause any evacuations. At calving time they should be given bran mashes mixed with milk warm water. All the water for at least a week after calving should be slightly warmed, and it will do no harm if the warm water drink is continued so long as ice is found in the troughs or ponds where they drink. Ice cold water given when a cow is feverish from parturition, is the cause of more losses than anything else in the care less farmer's dairying. It is not best either to give rich, heating food for a few days after calving. Bran is better than grain or corn meal, as the latter is too heating, and by making too rich milk will often cause caked bag. The better the cow is, the more care must be taken in feeding her.

A violent wind storm did considerable damage in Jackson and Natchez, Miss, on Monday. A number of roofs were blown off and the Methodist church at Natchez was wrecked.

Local Intelligence.

Fine day for the fair to day.

There was a heavy frost on Tuesday night.

The Montreal horse buyers are at the Commercial hotel to day.

Every person is satisfied who buys their Shoes at Inglehart's.

A slight fall of the beautiful (?) snow fell in this section on Tuesday.

It will pay you to read MacAdam's advertisement, which appears in another column of this issue.

The new front in the building which is to be occupied by the Bank of Hamilton is about finished.

A letter from the monkiem in reply to Mr. Gordon's letter of last week has been held over for want of space.

See the latest styles in Ladies' Summer Shoes at Inglehart's.

An aged couple applied to Chief Shields for lodgings on Monday night. The chief could not grant their request.

Last year only three canines could be found in the South ward. This year the number 34 stands out in bold relief!

Messrs. McKim and Donner are preparing to erect a brick storehouse in the rear of their stores on east Broadway.

Inglehart's are building a reputation for good goods and low prices.

Rev. A. Henderson preached the funeral sermon of the late Mrs. Hannahson at St. Mark's church last Sunday evening.

Chief Shields makes the gang of toughs "move on" every Sunday night from in front of the S. A. barracks on Mill street.

Bill Ricks, the auburn-haired printer who worked in Orangeville a short time ago, is visiting "Castle Crawford" at Brampton for ten days.

Talking about an eight-hour day, we imagine the editors and reporters of daily newspapers of the country would be glad to compromise on nine hours. And yet they are not threatening to strike.

Mr. Harry James, one of last year's Dufferins' best lacrosse players, will play with the Capitals, (seniors), of Ottawa. Jack Ashcharst, formerly the Dufferins' crack goalkeeper, is with the same club.

Mr. Christopher Maguire, who has been connected with the Brampton Banner, for the past twenty one years, died at Toronto last week. His wife and family and aged parents have our heartfelt sympathy.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Foster, wife of ex-Reeve Foster, took place on Friday afternoon, to the town cemetery, and was very largely attended. The pallbearers were John Kearns, John Gilchrist, J. C. Fox, Marshall Green, R. Ritchie and James May.

A man who doesn't advertise and take advantage of the columns of a local newspaper is no good to his few customers or anybody else. Who in the world ever heard tell of a live business man not advertising? Patronize merchants who tell the public what they have to sell.

The good editor was dying, and as the doctor placed his ear to the patient's heart, he sadly muttered, "Poor fellow! Circulation has gone." The editor raised himself up and gasped, "'Tis false! We have the largest circulation in the country!" Then he sank back upon his pillow and died with a triumphant smile upon his face. He was consistent to the end.

AT REST—The death occurred at Hillsburg on Sunday of Annie Homes, beloved wife of Mr. James Hurst, of that village. She had been ill but a short time with inflammation and and was 29 years of age. She leaves a family of four young children—three sons and a daughter. The funeral took place on Tuesday to the village cemetry and was numerously attended attesting the esteem in which she was held.

FIRST OF JULY CELEBRATION.—A meeting will be held in the council chamber to-morrow (Friday) evening to make arrangements to celebrate Canada's natal day in a suitable manner. The celebrations held here during the past three years have all been successful, and that of each year is away ahead of the previous celebration. It is intended to make this year's fete the "daddy" of them all, and everyone should lend a helping hand and attend the meetings

WERE YOU MARRIED BY A SUPERANNUATED CLERGYMAN?—A writer in the Canada Law Journal, for April, contends that marriages by superannuated clergymen are voidable. He quotes the revised statutes of Ontario, 1887, Chap. 40, sec 7, reads: "Every clergyman, teacher, minister, or other person authorized by law to baptise, marry or perform the funeral service in Ontario, shall keep a registery, showing the persons whom he has baptised or married, or who have died within his cure, and belonging to his congregation." "Surely," says this correspondent, "no uninterested reasonable and law abiding person will support the claims of these superannuated clerics—who are without cure or congregation—and admit that they have authority, under the law, to solemnise marriage."

MORE REVENUE.—The police court industry seems to be about the best paying business in town these dull days. A few weeks ago the police court coffer was entirely empty, when Mayor Walsh kindly lent a helping hand by conveying "tips" from two street fighters. Ever since that memorable day a continuous stream of shekels gently flows into the town treasury. The first victim on Monday morning was an old and well-known citizen of the town, who played a very unbecoming prank on Sam Broadway last Thursday morning. He paid $5 and costs—$10.20 in all—for his return ticket. John Manning, Tom Irwin, Joseph Meredith and Jas. Sanderson were summoned up for breaking a disturbance on Broadway. Sanderson was fined $5 and costs, and McGuire $3 and Costs. Irwin played the Arab act and Joe was acquitted. Wm. Nelson and W. J. Ashcroft, of Mono, and Alex Patterson, of Amaranth, will be given a chance on Saturday to explain why they like to make a free ride when they come to town. More anon is expected.

CALLED HOME.—On Thursday morning last another resident of the township of Mono passed away to her long home. Mary Hannahson was born in Cipela in the Canton of Berne in Switzerland, in the year 1827. In 1837 she together with her father and only sister left their fatherland, and traveling by wagons through France took shipping at Havre, and after thirty one days sailing arrived at New York, thence traveling by canal and otherwise on the 16th of November they reached Michigan and settled about seven miles from Detroit, where her father and sister both died. In the year 1843 she made her home in Ontario, in the county of Welland about two miles from Fort Erie, but this home was soon broken up, and again in 1847 she removed to the city of Buffalo. Leaving there in 1850 and comming first to Toronto and from thence through an almost pathless country to the township of Mono, to her late home, which was then in unbroken wilderness, arriving there in February. Where during the course of forty years she did her duty so far as she was able, until God chose to call the weary one from this world of anxious cares, to a far brighter land, where there shall be no more tears. She leaves ten children—five sons and five daughters, all of whom were present with her during her last hours. The funeral took place to the Forest Lawn cemetry on Friday, and was largely attended.—Com.

PERSONAL.

Mr. John Paisley, of Toronto, is in town.

Postmaster Leslie returned to Patterson, N. J., on Friday.

Mr. J. E. Booth, of the Revere house, Toronto, is in town.

Mr. R. E. Hamilton, clerk of East Luther was in town on Tuesday.

Mrs. Doherty and Mrs. Beasley, of Clinton, have been visiting their sister, Mrs. Wm. Hall.

Mr. T. L. Cranston, of the Bank of Commerce, will leave this week for Walkerton, where he goes to fill a similar position.

Mr. J. F. Ewings, who was injured in a runaway accident a couple of weeks ago, is recovering as rapidly as can be expected.

Misses Nellie and Maggie Turner, of Tara, who have been spending a few days with friends in town, returned home last week.

Mr. P. J. Foster, of Ingersoll, and Mr. Fred Foster, of Toronto, were in town last week attending the funeral of their mother.

Mr. George Griffith, agent for Dr. Barnado's Orphan Home, has been visiting their boys, located with farmers in this neighborhood, for the past few days.

CARDWELL.

The quarries still continue to boom. The farmers have about completed this spring's seeding.

Mr. W. E. Hall's general purpose stallion, Tam O'Shanter 11., is on the road.

Mr W. E. Hall sold two head of cattle to an Orangeville drover last week for $95.

Mr Hugh Bracken has disposed of his celebrated trotting coachhorse, John, to Mr. Adam Jones, of Orangeville.

Contractor Faloon, better known and perhaps more appropriately dubed "Dick," has completed the erection of a lime-kiln on "Limestoneview Farm." He celebrated the event by a banquet which lasted three days.

The far famed Cardwell Ranger foot ball club held a meeting on Saturday last and reorganized for the current season. From present indications, we can safely prognasticate that football will boom here this year as it never has boomed before. A great deal of interest was manifested when the officers were being elected, which resulted as follows: Deputy reeve Island, president; Councillor Reid, vice-president; Hugh Bracken, 2nd vice-president; John McMaster, captain; James E. Anderson, field captain; Mik Leighton, umpire; John M. Still, treasurer; Wm. G Jenkins, secretary; F. Huston, J. Lundy, R. Neil, committee of management. The boys would like to hear from any other club who want to arrange a match. First come, first served.

GRAND VALLEY.

Division court was held here on Thursday.

The cricket club has reorganized for the season.

Mr. John Hendry has recovered from his recent illness.

Constable Pinbow, of Laurel, has been appointed bailiff of the fifth division court, Grand Valley, to succeed Robt. Beals, who has resigned.

The school teachers of Grand Valley and vicinity will meet at that place on Saturday next to appoint officers for a convention which will be held there shortly.

Mr. Thos. Greenwood, who has been section boss here for some time and who is about to remove from town, was presented with an address the other night by the foresters of this place.

$1800 FOR STREETS!

Mill Street to be put in Good Shape for $800.

How the Road & Bridge Committee Intend to Spend the Ratepayers' Money this Year—The New Waterworks Report to be Submitted at the Next Meeting—Reeve Lindsay tries to Reduce the Mill Street Estimate, But is Retrieved by the Mayor's Casting Vote—Rising Legislation.

The half-past seven arrangement don't appear to strike the town aldermen very forcibly of late, for at that time Monday evening there were not enough councillors in the chamber to form a quorum. But before the gong tinkled off 8 o'clock, Mayor Walsh, Reeve Lindsay, Deputy-reeve Endacott, Ald. Coleman, Bailey, Gillespie, Green, Pinkney, King, Ketchum and Youmans were prepared to air their sentiments on any or all questions that came up.

The clerk, as usual, read the minutes of the last meeting, which were, on motion adopted.

The mayor read

ACCOUNTS

from T. MacAdam, $8.28; Jos. Irwin, $10.50; W. Fremlin, $1.25; Wm. Ryan, $1.50; Nightwatchman Parkin, $5.50; C. P. R. $2 20; ordered to be paid; R. Fearns, 30c.; R. Penalton, $31.80; Geo. Gray, $9.25; D. Suggitt, $9.12½; D. McDonald, $53.02; referred to the R. & B. committee, with power to order payment, if found to be correct.

THEY WANT A CROSSING.

W. W. Ruthven, the manager of the Orangeville branch of the Bank of Commerce, and others sent in a communication, hinting that they would like a crossing built across Broadway, opposite the postoffice. The R & B. committee will carefully consider this case, as the matter of crossings appears to be a very delicate question, and often leads to trouble.

Reeve Lindsay read Treasurer Irwin's statement for the month of April. An amount of $1023.82 remains overdrawn at the Bank of Commerce.

DRY EARTH CLOSETS.

Deputy reeve Endacott read the T. P. committee's report on the board of health's communication regarding the system of dry earth closets. A by law will be introduced at the next meeting of the council, compelling the adoption of this system. The limits are the same as laid down in the fire limit by law which appeared in THE SUN a few weeks ago.

The deputy reeve also read a report in reply to Dr. Smith's communication regarding the bad state in which the mill race was in. The people who own the property through which the race runs will have to clean it out once a year.

Ald. Gillespie brought down the first monthly waterworks report. He said everything was found to be in good order, the engine being well-cleaned and everything else in its right place.

The captain and the lieutenant of the fire brigade also sent in their first monthly report of things in general at the engine house. They recommended that the flues of the boiler should be repaired; that a larger stock of wood should be kept at the engine house; and that the firemen should be provided with a new hose reel.

Ald. Bailey read the R. & B. report, which recommended the payment of an account. It was adopted.

A $2000 ESTIMATE.

Ald Bailey, the energetic chairman of the Road & Bridge committee, arose and remarked that the committee had decided what repairs to make on the streets and had estimated the cost thereof, which they put $2000.

It was proposed to spend $800 on Mill street. The committee were of the opinion that the best way to do the work was to lay a quantity of stone nine feet wide and nine inches in depth on the roadbed, then lay a coating of gravel nine inches deep on the stone. The North ward would require $210; South $150; East, $150; West, $110 (not including what has been done); and $580 for general repairs. The council went into committee of the whole on the report, Mr. Bailey in the chair. A great deal of time was spent in debating on which was the best way to perform the work on Mill street. Ald. Ketchum thought it was better to get out specifications and ask for tenders. Reeve Lindsay thought that if the road was well drained and a good coat of gravel put on it would answer the purpose. He also thought that the estimate was greatly in excess of what the work could be done for, and moved that the estimate be cut down to $600. The reeve demanded the yeas and nays, and his motion was defeated by the mayor's casting vote. The vote stood:

| YEA. | NAY. |
|---|---|
| Coleman | Endacott |
| King | Bailey |
| Pinkney | Gillespie |
| Ketchum | Green |
| Lindsay—5 | Youmans |
| | Walsh—6 |

A discussion took place on the subject of where some of the South ward money should be spent. Some wanted a sidewalk on the west side of Mill street and others a sidewalk on John street. John street got the plum. The amount of the ward grants remain as the estimate, but the general repair estimate was cut down to $380. The committee rose and the council adopted the report.

MINOR LEGISLATION.

Messrs. Walsh, Lindsay, Endacott, Youmans and Green will compose the court of revision for this year.

The free use of the council chamber is vouchsafed to the 1st of July celebration committee.

The "Room" committee has done a lot of corresponding in regard to get manufacturies to locate here, but that's about all they have done.

The collector has done his duty, was ordered to be paid his salary of $80, and $7 for postage.

Deputy-reeve Endacott asked if the assessor had returned his roll yet. The clerk replied that it was returned this (Monday) evening

Ald. Bailey says he will report on his new waterworks scheme at the next meeting!

The mayor said he had received a letter from President Tate, of the C. P. R., regarding the old C. V. R. claim. The only thing binding in the agreement was that the company should build a grain warehouse. Mr. Ketchum thinks that the property would make a very good public park. The special committee will try to make a compromise in the matter.

The council adjourned at 10:10.

SPRING ASSIZES.

Judgment in Ward v. Caledon Reserved—Other Cases Dealt With.

The first case to come up after the Scott-Atkinson action had been finished was the great Ward et al v. Caledon suit, which grew out of the disastrous results of the Alton flood last fall. His Lordship dismissed the jury and tried the case himself. A number of witnesses were examined. The plaintiffs brought witnesses to prove that the road by McClellan's mill had been elevated a number of feet, and McClellan's dam was not substantial enough to stand the increased pressure of water. O. B. Osler, Q.C., conducted the case for the defendants; while Elgin Myers, Q. C. (Myers & Robb), acted for the plaintiffs. His Lordship reserved judgment.

The Pattullo vs. Knox action for non-fulfilment of contract was settled out of court.

Simpson vs. Ringrose, a will case was referred to Osgoode hall for argument.

The case of McCoy Bros. against the Northern Assurance and Commercial Union Insurance companies was withdrawn, and will be tried at the Toronto summer assizes.

Hardaker vs. Scott was settled out of court.

The court finished up the business on Friday afternoon Judge McMahon left for Toronto on the evening train.

GRAND JURY'S PRESENTMENT.

To His Lordship, Judge McMahon:

We, the grandjurors of her Majesty, the Queen, beg leave to make the following presentment. This being your first official visit to our county, we take this, the first opportunity, of congratulating you upon your elevation to the bench. We wish also to express our pleasure at the apparent absence of crime through out the county. In regard to your suggestion that we take into consideration the abolition of grandjurors, we have to say that while the present system may be defective in some particulars, yet with the data before us we do not feel that we are in a position to make intelligent suggestions either as to its entire or partial abolition. In regard to prison reform, we would recommend that provision be made for the separation of those young in crime from more hardened criminals. We have visited the jail and find fourteen prisoners—ten males and four females. Of these, one male is in for larceny, one for selling liquor without a license, one idiot, seven vagrants; one female insane, three vagrants. We also found everything in neat and clean condition.

JAMES HUXTABLE,
Foreman

MELVILLE.

The farmers of this section are about through with their seeding.

The Skyrockers will hold their first practice football match on Saturday evening.

We are glad to see that Mr. David Watson is recovering from a severe attack of measles.

The building boom will commence shortly. Several new barns will be erected this season.

Mr. John Dawson has removed from his farm on the centre road to another farm of his on the 1st line.

Bob Delaney, the famous sport of Melville, is reported to have shot a fox. If true, success to you, Bob.

The people of Melville would like to know what attraction their is down here for Bob L——, of Orangeville.

Some time ago your Cardwell scribe made a most glaring, intentional mistake, when he said "Cardwell could boast of having more handsome girls to the acre than any other hamlet its size in Ontario." He must have a great interest in some of the fair sex of that insignificant place, or else he has never been down the line as far as Melville. Why, we have girls and girls here, and we will wager dollars to doughnuts that the Cardwell lasses can't hold a candle to them for good looks. It is very likely that that bold, bad man is looking for the girls that wear a "cheque."

Rev. Father O'Connor, parish priest of Maidstone and Essex Centre, died on Sunday of inflammation of the lungs succeeding la grippe. The remains are to be interred at Pickering, Ont., his native place. Deceased was popular with all class and creeds.

Mr. Levi Beamer, a farmer, 90 years old, living near the village of Rosedene, Monck, was gored by a bull a few days ago while watering his cattle and has since died.

The Belgian Government will give a credit of four million francs for a sea canal to Brussels.

IF YOU WANT the very best value in Groceries go to MacAdam's.
DO YOU USE a cheap tea, we mean a 25 cent Japan or Young Hyson Tea, if you do MacAdam has the best value we ever saw for that money.
DID I HEAR you say you wanted a Dinner Set, then straight you go to MacAdam's, headquarters for everything in that line in this town. They have just opened out some new ones and Harry is just dying to show them.
OF COURSE if you want anything in Wines or Liquors, Ale or Porter, MacAdam's is where you get them pure. Nothing else kept in stock, and Tinn, the boy who knows all about them, will give you just what you want without a mistake.

Catch Me!

The Fine Bred Imported Clydesdale Stallion, And one of Scotland's Prize-winners,

Will make the season of 1890 as follows:

TUESDAY, May, 8th, he will leave his own stable, Commercial Hotel, Orangeville, and proceed to F. Norris', Lot 2, Con. A., East Garafraxa, for noon thence to Mr. Young's Lot 21, Con. 11, Frin, for night.

WEDNESDAY, he will proceed to Cataract, for noon thence to Burrell's Hotel, Charleston, for night.

THURSDAY, he will proceed to the Royal Hotel, Mono Mills for night.

FRIDAY, he will proceed to his own stable, where he will remain till the following Tuesday morning

CATCH ME will also make a Fall Season at Wattribw's Hotel, Owen Sound, commencing July 12th.

For further particulars see bills or cards.

Proprietor.

EVISON'S OPINION.

To the Editor of THE SUN.

SIR,—No doubt you have noticed the course pursued by the Post in the Scott Atkinson case. Could anything be meaner? Now, Mr. Editor, I am one who took no part in it whatever, but being in Orangeville at the time of the trial I overh ard a little talk that I hope you will publish in your valuable paper I heard Mrs. Fraser tell one of her party that she was going to give the Post a couple of dollars to give her a lift in his paper, and that it must be kept a secret. She did not know that I overheard that remark. You know the way the Post has acted from the first. I think the Post has done itself a great injury by upholding such an untruthful party as the Scotts and Marks.

Thanking you, Mr Editor, for valuable space in your esteemed paper,

I remain,
Yours truly,
WILLIAM EVISON.

Heckley, May 5th, 1890.

CREDIT FORKS.

Mrs. St Croix is still very low.

Judge Scott was in town to-day.

Mr. Wm. Thorn is still suffering from la grippe.

Our old friend Mr. Price was visiting around here last week.

Billy Lowe, a stone-cutter, has left here to take up his residence in Orangeville.

The bishop of Niagara was here Sunday, and held confirmation in the English church.

Fourteen miners and their quarrymen arrived here by the 10 o'clock train Thursday last.

It is thought that Robbins has followed in the footsteps of Hartley and others who have left their quarry men minus their hard earned wages.

Mr. Samuel Hunter has packed his trunk and bid his friends adieu. We don't know where he is going to pull up, but we wish him success wherever he goes.

Another strike has occurred at Myers' quarry. The trouble this time seems to be over whether the men will have to work ten hours on Saturdays or nine hours, as is the custom.

The Cataract woolen mills have ceased operations. Mr. Acheson, who for some years has been running them, has, we are informed, gone to Brampton to start a carpet factory.

The finest string of fish we saw on the evening of May 1st was that of Mr. Mathias Morris. He had one trout that turned the scales at one pound and two ounces, and several that went four ounces.

Mr. Frank McEnney has a gang of masons at work veneering his hotel with brick, which will very materially add to its appearance. It is too bad that he will have to wait until after the elections for his license.

The new siding at Cataract will be completed in a few days, and ere another new moon appears the steam shovel will be tearing up the gravel, and hundreds of yards of the earth will have found its way down through the Credit Forks bridge.

Billy Britner put in an appearance here last Saturday. There were quite a few of his old creditors at the station, and their spirits went up several degrees as they thought Billy had returned to pay up, but no such good luck was in store for them. It is said he wants another quarry.

Mr. James Curry, of Toronto, and a friend of his, were here on the first of May fishing, and secured two large basketfulls. As James paid $1 50 for three of the speckled beauties the name of carrying a full basket of trout from Credit Forks to Toronto must have cost him considerable hard cash.

Since the dissolution of the Underwriters' Association, two weeks ago, insurance rates have been cut at New Orleans 50 to 75 per cent.

MONO CENTRE.

The village can now boast of having two blacksmith shops, which will undoubtedly prove advantageous to the farmers of this vicinity. We believe there is business enough for two shops.

The farmers are all busy with their seeding. Parties are all over for the season, but we believe taffy-pulls are on the carpet, notwithstanding the advanced stage of the year

A very successfull interesting and beneficial examination was held in S. S. No. 10, in charge of Miss B. McNaughton, last Wednesday. The classes displayed well-developed reasoning ability in every particular. The exercises were coupled with choice vocal selections, recitations, glees, calisthenic drill, etc. Truly, Miss McNaughton in every respect as an educator well-merits the praise so lavishly bestowed upon her by the ratepayers.

The Public Scared.

MANY people are deceived into neglecting bad blood disorders, constipation, etc., and thus allow fever and other diseases to become established. Act promptly by using nature's blood purifying tonic, Burdock Blood Bitters, which regulates the entire system, curing all diseases of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

Fifteen thousand trees from Nebraska have arrived for the experimental farm at Indian Head.

Easily Ascertained.

It is easily to find out from anyone who has used it, the virtues of Hagyard's Yellow Oil for all painful and inflammatory troubles, rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, from bites, burns, bruises, sprains, contracted cords, stiff joints, aches, pains and soreness of any kind, it has no superior.

The love affairs of Mr Tull and Mrs. Goodrich, of South Caradoc, have terminated, it seems, in her entering the action of breach of promise, claiming $10,000 damages.

Autumn Anxieties.

I HAD a very bad cough this fall, but Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam cured me completely.

High Time to Begin.

After a long winter the system needs a thorough cleansing, toning and regulating to remove impurities and prepare for summer. Thousands of testimonials show that Burdock Blood Bitters is the best spring medicine ever discovered, producing a feeling of buoyancy and strength. It removes that tired, worn out feeling, and restores lost appetite.

The Shelburne [illegible] our Dramatic club intend holding a concert on the evening of May 20th.

On Saturday last says the Free Press we were informed that a Mr. Simon Jelly's house, in the kitchen, to be started in the kitchen, to which it was fortunately confined. Mr. Thomas Marshall, of Honeywood, was coming into town with a small load of wood, and he gave the alarm as he drove past. The chemical engine was hastily got out and attached to Mr. Marshall's team, and was soon on the premises. A stream was turned on from the engine, and when the hose burst in several places, making it of little use. A crowd of willing hands, however, soon extinguished the flames, after the roof had been partly destroyed. The cause of the fire is not known, but is supposed to have originated around the chimney. The hose belonging to the chemical engine is thoroughly rotten and should be replaced at once.

THE SNOW-PLOW DUEL.

The Rotary Fully Sustains Its Reputation as a Reliable Machine.

St. Elmo, Colo., April 17.—[Special.]—The eventful day of the great duel among the mountain peaks in which brains and mechanical skill are testing two of their products, was ushered in in lively style, beginning early in the morning and closing at sundown.

The greater portion of Wednesday's contest had been devoted to testing the merits of the Jull plow. Under the rotary came to the front and proved a great success. The party of interested spectators was joined early in the day by Editor Warman of the Daily Railway and Traveling Mechanic [illegible] of the Denver & Rio Grande. The day was a type of [illegible] a beautiful week, and dawned bright and clear. Headquarters had been established at St Elmo and at 10 o'clock on the morning the process was started. The rotary pushed by two locomotives led the van, the Jull and a special train following.

The labors of the preceding day had opened up the route as this half a mile of Hancock. At this point the snow averaged a depth of three feet for a half mile stretch. The rotary struck the compact mass and a lively scene was witnessed. The machine threw its snow over in the winds in beautiful arches, at times hanging it as a compact cylinder for a distance of [illegible] feet. The snow was thrown far back and the train at the right-hand side. The rotary had made an continuous and steady progress and the [illegible] kept up its motion. Hancock was reached.

The distance was accomplished in twelve minutes. At Hancock a rest was taken in order to get up more steam. The attempt at navigation [illegible] was tried. The rotary is a continual success. It proved a rigid test of the ability of a snow clearing machine to hold the track.

It was generally admitted by the assembled experts in the party that the trial under the present conditions is one of the most severe on a line made to see that has ever been attempted. The snow has been on the ground for the past three months and has grown to an average of [illegible] in many places. The immediate covering of the track is from [illegible] to a mantle ranging from two to [illegible] in [illegible]. This material obstructing to a machine is progress from a crate of ice, but the rotary was very successful in opening with this difficulty. A trial motion was attempted, however, upon clearing away from the troubled, which was [illegible] in depth, it jumped the track and a stopping of operations was in order. Investigation showed that ice to the depth of five inches was obstructing its action. At this point it being made 2000 feet was added to the distance already cleared. A sharp curve and the ice combined to again place the rotary off the rails. After slight delay, caused by a broken ring-bolt being repaired, the signal was made. The clear of the all [illegible] found the rotary way up in the mountains about two miles and a half from the Alpine tunnel.

On the return to St Elmo four side-tracks below Hancock were cleared by the rotary. The operation of throwing the snow to the left over the track, [illegible] to the right, was performed easily and satisfactorily.

To-morrow the [illegible] will open its side of the light, and take up the line of march where the rotary left off yesterday. The opinion among the assembled [illegible] commenting upon the day's work was to the effect that the rotary had a decided [illegible] in its favor, being an effective and [illegible] machine and that its present [illegible] was highly creditable, especially as the [illegible] were an instance. Mr. Jackson and Mr. McIlvin, the photographers, [illegible] taking a number of excellent views of the rotary while at work. The [illegible] contest [illegible] greatly enjoyed by the visitors present and all endorse the trip as one [illegible] both novel and instructive. Mr. [illegible] of Denver, has signified his intention of investing in the rotary.—Denver Col. Republican, April 18.

[FROM THE VERY AGED.]

Hymen, Tenn., [illegible] Dear Sirs: I feel [illegible] to recommend your Celtharin Pills to all [illegible] who may be troubled with Constipation, Sick Headache, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Costiveness, and Piles. Yours respectfully, [illegible]

O'Donovan Rossa has been convicted of criminal libel at New York for selling one P. S. Cassidy, a British spy, in his newspaper, and is now awaiting sentence. Very little interest attaches to this person, now as respectable Irish men everywhere have turned their backs on him and his [illegible] of dynamite. However, his statement that Fenianism has caused Ireland many, may be of some humorous value. Had a dozen witnesses against me, he said, "not all that are left of the Fenian Brotherhood." The rise and triumph of the moderate constitutional party under Mr Parnell is one of the best signs of the times in connection with the Irish movement. Another good sign is that Russia's paper has suspended for want of support.

At Gravesburst on Monday an old man named George Tibbett, a well known character in that town, committed suicide in his own house by nearly severing his head from his body with a razor. The cause of the suicide is supposed to be drink, as Tibbett had been on a protracted spree for some days.

IT IS SEEN IN IOWA.

Mason City, Iowa, May 3.—About 1.15 yesterday afternoon a meteor the largest ever seen here, passed through the heavens going in an opposite direction to the sun. It was plainly seen at Bonnesburg, Algona Ruthven and Forest City. The report made as it passed through air resembled the noise of cannon, and many people rushed to their doors, thinking it was an earthquake. The meteor left behind it a long streak of fire and smoke.

Sioux City, May 2.—About 5.20 last evening a meteor of large size was seen by a number of citizens passing north west of the city. When first seen it was on an elevation of about 25 degrees, and three explosions or flashes of light were seen before it passed out of sight. Advices from several points report the passage of the same phenomena.

Parsons' Purgative Pills are a gentle but thorough cathartic, mild in their action, yet sure in their effect. They are the result of long study and experience in the treatment of those disorders which they are intended to remove. They are compounded from the purest and most efficacious vegetable cathartics, and are so combined as to act with certainty upon the liver, bowels, and digestive organs, without griping or any other disagreeable effect. They are sugar coated, and are the most agreeable cathartic in use. Price 25 cents per box. Sold by all druggists.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—Soldiers and Sailors.—These well-known and really need remedies are especially serviceable and convenient for those who, like soldiers and sailors, are exposed to great changes of climate, and the hardships inseparable from their calling. Many of the diseases engendered in the system from these and other outward causes can be checked and controlled by attention at their onset, and in Holloway's remedies will be found a ready means of relief, without hindrance from duty. Many a man is invalided and rendered more or less a burden to himself and friends from neglect of the early symptoms of his complaint, which calamity might be averted by timely resort to the use of Holloway's Pills and Ointment.

Ask For Ayer's

Sarsaparilla, and be sure you get it, when you want the best blood-purifier. With its forty years of unexampled success in the cure of Blood Diseases, you can make no mistake in preferring Ayer's to any other. The fore-runner of modern blood medicines, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is still the most popular, being in greater demand than all others combined.

Sarsaparilla

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is selling faster than ever before. I never hesitate to recommend it."—George W. Whitman, Druggist, Albany, Ind.

"I am safe in saying that my sales of Ayer's Sarsaparilla far excel those of any other, and it gives thorough satisfaction."—L. H. Bush, Des Moines, Iowa.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla and Ayer's Pills are the best selling medicines in my store. I can recommend them conscientiously."—C. Buckhaus, Pharmacist, Roseland, Ill.

"We have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla here for over thirty years and always recommend it when asked to name the best blood-purifier."—W. T. McLean, Druggist, Augusta, Ohio.

"I have sold your medicines for the last seventeen years, and always keep them in stock, as they are staples. 'There is nothing so good for the youthful blood' as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—R. L. Parker, Fox Lake, Wis.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla gives the best satisfaction of any medicine I have in stock. I recommend it, or, as the Doctors say, 'I prescribe it over the counter.' It never fails to meet the cases for which I recommend it, even where the doctors' prescriptions have been of no avail."—C. F. Calhoun, Monmouth, Kansas.

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Price $1; six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

The most agreeable, restorative tonic and mild stimulant is Milburn's Beef, Iron and Wine.

HE MARCHED WITH SHERMAN TO THE SEA;

Trudged all the way on foot, over mountain and through morass, carrying knapsack and gun, slept on brush heaps to keep out of the mud, caught cold, from the effects of which his friends thought he would never recover. Lingering with slow consumption for many years, he saw Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery advertised in a country newspaper, and he determined to try it. A few bottles worked a change; six months' continued use cured him. Always too independent to ask his country for a pension, he now says he needs none. He helped save his country, he saved himself! Consumption is Lung-scrofula. For scrofula, in all its myriad forms, the "Discovery" is an unequaled remedy. It cleanses the system of all blood-taints from whatever cause arising, and cures all Skin and Scalp Diseases, Salt-rheum, Tetter, Scaly Eruptions, and kindred ailments. It is guaranteed to benefit or cure in all diseases for which it is recommended, or money paid for it will be refunded. Sold by druggists.

A DANGER SIGNAL!

A Cold in the Head may be aptly termed a danger signal warning you that if neglected that dangerous and disagreeable disease, Catarrh, is sure to follow, perhaps leading to Consumption and the grave. At no season of the year is Cold in the Head more prevalent than during the Spring months and at no other season do the people of this country suffer more generally from Catarrh, with all its disagreeable and annoying effects. Do not for an instant neglect either of these troubles, but apply NASAL BALM, the only remedy that will give instant relief and effect a thorough cure. The following testimonials from among thousands in our possession bear witness to its sterling merit.

Alex. Burns, Sudbury, Ont., says: I may state that I have been affected with Catarrh seven or eight years, and it was attended by consequent symptoms such as foul breath, constant dropping into the throat, hawking and spitting, partial deafness, ringing in the ears and sickening pains in the head directly over either eye. I have used powders and douches, but all to no effect, the only result arising from the use of such was temporary relief, followed by the usual symtoms in a more aggravated form. The results arising from the use of Nasal Balm: Sweet breath, stoppage of the drowping into the throat, (consequently less hawking and spitting), clearness of hearing, and not once since I began its use have I had pain in the head. In fact, it is my opinion that a careful and persistent use of the Balm will effect a cure in the worst case of catarrh.

T. D. D. Loyd, 8 Clarence street, Toronto says: I wish here to testify to the unequalled healing powers of your Nasal Balm. I have been troubled for three years by what the doctors call post nasal catarrh, and have tried everything in the city that could be obtained, in the shape of catarrh cures, and found no permanent relief from any of them, till a friend one day advised me to try your Nasal Balm, and I find that even one bottle has done me more good than all the medicines put together that I have persecuted myself with before. I was very much troubled with spitting and hawking, especially in the morning, so much so that my throat was continually in a raw condition, but I am now beginning to know what it is to be able to speak freely. I shal lnot fail to recommend it to any of my friends suffering from the like disease.

NASAL BALM

INSTANTLY RELIEVES

Cold in Head.

A. W. Mallory, Mallorytown, Ont., says: My daughter suffered for years from a most distressing and annoying Catarrh. Her case was under the treatment of eminent physicians in the United States and Canada. Two months use of Nasal Balm has had more beneficial effects than all former treatment combined.

L. D. Dion, Dept. Railways and Canals, Ottawa, says: I am very glad to give you to-day the testimony that Nasal Balm has completely cured my catarrh, from which I suffered for nearly three years.

NASAL BALM

POSITIVELY CURES

CATARRH.

D. Derbyshire, Mayor of Brockville and President of the Ontario Creamery Association, says: Nasal Balm beats the world for Catarrh and Cold in the Head. In my own case it effected relief from the first application.

Isaac Waterman, Imperial Oil Co'y, Petrolia, Ont., says: Nasal Balm gave me the most perfect satisfaction of any medicine I ever used for Cold in the Head. I found it easy to use, quick in giving relief and effect a complete cure in a couple of hours.

If Nasal Balm is not kept in stock by your dealer it will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 Cent for small and $1 for large size bottles) by addressing

Poetry.

THE HAIRPIN

What is home with no a hairpin,
When the glove hook can't be found,
And the dress on stairs ascending
To the northern depots bound?
Or the paper cutter's missing,
As the thrilling tale she reads;
And the lover's planned elopement
'On an uncut page succeeds?

What is home without a hairpin
Deftly best upon the floor;
When one finds it, walking barefoot—
Hark, was that a voice that swore,
Sending echoes through the darkness,
With a swift profane despatch,
Till they swarmed upon a toothpick
And became a parlor match?

O! the wicked little hairpin—
Treacherous wire of dual point—
You were better bid in tresses
Than in wrenching out a joint!

THE BEAUTIFUL.

Beautiful faces are those that wear—
It matters little if dark or fair—
Whole-souled honesty printed there

Beautiful eyes are those that show,
Like crystal panes where each first glow,
Beautiful thoughts that burn below.

Beautiful lips are those whose words
Leap from the heart like songs of birds,
Yet whose utterance prudence girds.

Beautiful hands are those that do
Work that is earnest and brave and true,
Moment by moment the long day through.

Beautiful feet are those that go
On kindly ministry to and fro,
Down lowliest ways, if God will it so

Beautiful shoulders are those that bear
Cheerfully burdens of homely care
With patience, grace and daily prayer.

Beautiful lives are those that build—
Silent revealers of happiness—
Whose hidden fountains but few may guess.

Beautiful twilight at set of sun,
Beautiful goal with race well run,
Beautiful rest with work well done.

Beautiful graves where grasses creep;
Where brown leaves fall, where drifts lie deep
Over worn-out hands—oh, beautiful sleep

IN THE SOUTH.

BUREAU OF SOUTHERN NEWS,
Raleigh, N. C.

A PINE FOREST IN NORTH CAROLINA.

The Pine tree grows in all parts of the globe, but in the largest forest, and to the largest size in northern Europe and North America. The pines of Europe are often called fir. The pines of North America may be divided into two great families, viz. the white or soft pines of Maine, Canada, Michigan and Wisconsin, and the pines of the Southern States. These may be generally divided into long and short leaf pines. Both good for lumber, but the long leaf pine the more valuable for lumber and naval stores.

It is a long leaf pine forest of North Carolina and Georgia which we wish to show to our readers in this letter. Many if not all of you know what a pine forest is. You have seen the pines with short trunks and long lateral branches near the ground. You have seen the ground beneath them well covered with dead twigs or branches, without anything green growing upon it. You know it would be impossible to drive a team through such a forest, except where roads are cut. You know that the thick tops of nearly if not quite exclude the sunshine for the whole day. A long leaf pine forest is very different in all of its possibilities and appearances. Many of the trees grow to the height of fifty feet without a branch. Then a bush-like top is formed with no twigs or small branches. The limbs grow in all directions and in all shapes; and do not make a handsome top or a thick shade. And yet the long leaf pine is a beautiful tree. With trunk as straight and perfect as a Corinthian column, and top gracefully nodding to the breeze, this tree always presents a work of Nature pleasing and attractive to the eye. A forest of these trees which has not been touched by the axe is a sight, once seen, never to be forgotten. For fifty feet from the ground, the vision is almost clear in all directions; obstructed only by the trunks of trees, beautiful columns in Nature's great temple. The ground green with tufts of the emerald hued wire grass, the white sand gleaming between those tufts of grass in the shafts of golden sunshine, falling between the swaying tops of the trees.

Instead of being compelled to cut a road through such a forest no roads are needed. No stones or stumps or fallen trees encumber the ground, no dead branches endanger the eyes of the incautious traveller, but wherever, in any or all directions, it is not only possible but pleasant to drive the largest team, the finest pleasure carriage, or to ride horseback on the hottest day without let or hinderance. There are few highways, and and no fences in these forests. The whole ground is as good a highway as could be made; and fences are not needed. The traveller has only to be sure of his direction and go as he will. To an observant person riding or walking in a long leaf pine forest, the trees themselves present a very interesting and ever changing study. Occasionally a tree with knobs on the trunk is seen, these trees are likely to make the celebrated cat faced or curled pine lumber. Again we may see a long slender tree bent over until a large part of its trunk is parallel with the ground. Such trees never recover their lost straight and upright position, but live and grow as they are bent. Sometimes we see a very large, tall, straight tree inclined like a tower Pisa. It has stood so for centuries perhaps, and will continue to stand in that position for centuries, unless the axe of the cutter drops it to the ground.

The long leaf pine forest furnishes almost as much for a man as the Oriental bamboo and palm. It furishes hard and handsome lumber, strong and durable timber; the best possible fuel; rosin and and spirits of turpentine, and a life and health giving home to overworked and prostrated bodies, and to people afflicted with any diseases of throat or lungs. And they grow in the most desirable and healthful climate within the confines of America.

A Seasonable Hint.

During the breaking up of winter, damp, chilly weather prevails, and rheumatism neuralgia, lumbago, sore throat, croup quinsy and other painful effects of sudden colds are common. Hagyard's Yellow Oil is a truly valuable household remedy for all such complaints.

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS—HAY FEVER

A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N.B.—This treatment is not a snuff or an ointment; both have been discarded by reputable physicians as injurious. A pamphlet explaining the new treatment is sent free to any address on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 West King Street, Toronto, Canada.—Toronto Globe.

Sufferers from Catarrhal troubles should carefully read the above.

Rheumatism is caused by an acid in the blood; therefore external treatment affords no permanent relief. To eliminate the poison and make a thorough cure of the disease, nothing else is so efficient as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Give it a trial. Price $1, Worth $5 a bottle.

Long-Standing

Blood Diseases are cured by the persevering use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

This medicine is an Alterative, and causes a radical change in the system. The process, by some one, may be as quite so rapid as laxatives; but, with persistence, the result is certain. Read these testimonials:—

"For years I suffered from a very painful leg, and had other troubles caused by bad blood and dyspepsia. After giving several medicines a fair trial without a cure, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was greatly benefited by the first bottle, and after taking six bottles I was completely cured."—John W. Benson, 10 Lawrence st., Lowell, Mass.

"Last May a large carbuncle broke out on my arm. The usual remedies had no effect, and I was confined to my bed for eight weeks. A friend urged me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Even then there seemed little hope. In this my experience with medicine, I never saw more

Wonderful Results.

Another marked effect of the use of this medicine was the strengthening of my child."—Mrs. Carrie Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

"I built up my sickly husband for years with Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, as my mother and sister were similarly afflicted, I presume the malady is hereditary. Last summer the disease, called Fernandina, fastened upon me. I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and continue it for a year. For five months I took it daily. I have not had him so well in my life for the last three months."—T. P. Whley, Esq., Chief Justice, Norfolk, Va.

"Last fall and winter I was troubled with a dull, heavy pain in my side. I had quite lost all much at first, but it gradually grew worse, until it became almost unbearable. During the latter part of this time, disorders of the stomach and liver increased my troubles. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after faithfully continuing the use of it three months, the pain disappeared and I was completely cured."—Mrs. Augusta A. Furbush, Hampden, Maine.

WORSE THAN MARRIAGE.

A bachelor, old and crusty,
Was sitting alone in his room;
His toes with the gout were aching,
And his face was o'ercrept with gloom.

No little ones' shoes littered the floor,
From noise the house was free,
In fact, from the attic to cellar
Was quiet as quiet could be.

No medical aid was lacking;
The servants answered the ring,
Respectfully heard his orders,
And supplied him with everything.

But still there was something wanting,
Something he couldn't command;
The kindly words of compassion,
The touch of a gentle hand.

And he said, as his brow grew darker,
And he rang for the hireling nurse,
"Well, marriage may be a failure,
But this is a blamed sight worse."

CHAPTER IX.

A SLIP OF THE TONGUE.

ONE of the grandest and most beautiful mansions in Hyde Park is called Stansfield House, the town residence of Lord and Lady Voyse. Everyone knows the Stansfield House from the magnificence of its architecture, the splendor of its interior, the beautiful view obtained from the windows, over Park. On this bright May morning a young girl stands at the open window of a balcony looking shyly every now and then at the grand entrance gates. A girl, fair to look, with a delicate, wild rose bloom; a graceful, noble head, resting on one neck of unrivaled whiteness—a head that, for statuesque beauty and perfection, might have worn a diadem of a queen. From head to foot she was a patrician. She had a calm, lovely, high bred face—refined, eloquent, as though the soul shone through it; a figure of perfect symmetry, full of curves and lines that would have enchanted a sculptor, white, slender hands, with a pink flush on the finger tips, little feet, that might have worn Cinderella's slippers. If you had met her in an African desert you would have known her for what she was—an aristocratic, high born woman. Disguise her as you could, she could never be taken for anything else.

People say that kind of thing in nonsense—that in the country villages of England you find greater beauty than the higher classes can boast. That may be, but it is the cultivation and refinement. To those high born English girl beauty descends, cultivated, improved in each generation. The difference is the same as in between a fair, rare flower grown wild on the hedges—that is blown by the wind and bumped by the dew—and the garden rose, upon whose comfort, shape and preservation all the gardener's skill has been brought to bear.

Lady Clotilde Voyse was such a garden rose. The Voyses were one of the oldest English families, their beauty of face and form, for the superior noble mind, for high intelligence came to her from generations of heroes. She was the only daughter of the present Lord Voyse, and greater care could not have been expended on her had she been heiress to the crown of a great kingdom. From her earliest infancy love had shielded her from even the breath of care or evil. She only knew one side of life—its beauty and brightness. She only knew one phase of humanity, and that was the noblest and best.

Dazed as she seemed the fact that far away from her bright, beautiful world there dwelt untaught savages who knew that sin and death, sickness and crime were in the world, they had never touched her, had never been near her. More dimly still she understood that there were sin and evil, those she had never seen. What does the queen rose of a conservatory know of the faded flowers trampled underneath the hedge? Heaven shone above her, the love of father, mother and friends surrounded her; she lived among all that was most beautiful and refined; how was the knowledge of evil or of sin to creep in? Even as Eden so was her home. Loved, cherished, guarded carefully as some most precious exotic, she had grown up lovely, refined and intelligent, but proud scarcely enough from her face one would have thought it. Accomplished, fitted to take any place in society, no matter how high, Lady Clotilde Voyse was what Captain Fraser called her—a perfection. All the instincts of her proud race were strong in her—she would have preferred any kind of death to dishonor, any kind of torture to shame, any punishment to untruth. She was the ideal of a pure and noble lady, not frank of speech, as was Silvia. She could never have clasped her arms round a lover's neck, and have poured out her love in warm words, as did Silvia. She was more reticent. Where Silvia would have wept aloud, Lady Clotilde would have folded her grief to her heart and have died of it rather than let it be known. And this girl loved, and was pledged to marry Basil Clive Vyner, Lord Dyncourt, who had won a woman's heart, broken it, and flung it away, with even more indifference than he had flung down a faded flower.

On this May morning Lady Clotilde wore a dress of rich Indian muslin, elaborately trimmed with blue ribbons, that harmonized well with her fair face and soft brown hair. Her white hands were filled with flowers—they were a passion with her; she never was happier than when among them.

Suddenly, over the fair, high bred face there rises a warm, beautiful blush. She leaves the balcony hastily; not for worlds would she have allowed Lord Dyncourt to know that she had been looking or waiting for him. She went into the drawing room, where Lady Voyse sat at her writing table.

"Mamma," she said, "here is Basil."

Lady Voyse looked up with a smile. She touched her daughter's fair face.

"These roses are blooming in his honor. He would be very proud if he saw them blushes, Clotilde."

The girl looked in her mother's face with a wistful expression on her own.

"Do you think, mamma," she asked, "that he loves me as very much?"

"How could he help it, my darling? Of course he loves you."

"Sometimes I think he is proud, silent and reserved. He talks to me, but he seems to be thinking of something else."

Lady Voyse laughed.

"Tom is one of Irene's fancies," she said. "Lord Dyncourt has a proud, stately manner that I like. I think his fashion of making love quite whimsical."

The girl bent her beautiful, flower-like face over her mother.

"You know best," she said. "If you are satisfied mamma, so am I."

Lady Voyse had no time to answer, for the two gentlemen were announced, and entered together.

If Lord Dyncourt had but understood the beauty, the grandeur of the love given to him, if he had but looked with a lover's eye at that beautiful face, he would have been a wiser, better man. As it was he remained perfectly indifferent; he never saw the light in those proud, frank eyes, lowered at his approach lest he should see the happiness shining there.

He addressed a few words to Lady Voyse, and then seated himself by Lady Clotilde's side.

The young soldier looked with longing eyes, he would have given much to have been in his friend's place. His love was worth that of a thousand men like Lord Dyncourt; but there was no hope for him. He was but a younger son—a captain in the guards—deeply in debt. Lord Voyse's heiress was not for him.

He was hopelessly and most infatuatedly in love with her. In other society the captain held his own most gallantly, he could be cool, sarcastic, witty, gay, amusing; in her presence he was literally dumb, content to sit and watch her.

The conversation was not very brilliant between the two lovers. Lady Voyse had taken the gallant captain in hand, and was cross-questioning him briskly about the last review. Lady Clotilde looked once toward the flower filled gallery, and wondered slightly why her lover did not ask her to go out among the flowers.

"It is a wonderful bright morning," said Lord Dyncourt, at last. "You are going out, I suppose?"

"Yes, I am going to ride."

She half thought he would offer to escort her, but he never even thought of it.

"How fond you are of flowers, Clotilde?" he said, suddenly, watching the white fingers among the blossoms.

She looked up at him.

"You cannot guess how dearly I love them, Basil," she replied.

"I am half inclined to be jealous of them," he said, languidly.

A lovely smile crossed her lips.

"Nay, she said, there is no need; I do not love them one half as dearly as I do you."

"Is that true, Silvia?" he asked. Then his face grew crimson as he remembered the terrible blunder, he had made. What possessed him to mention that name?

She looked up again quickly.

"Silvia!" she repeated. "What a pretty name! But why do you call me Silvia?"

"Did I do so?" he asked, with a horrible feeling of guilt. "I beg your pardon. I did not know it."

"But why was the name in your mind? Do you know any one named Silvia, Basil?"

"No," he replied, slowly, as though trying to remember, "I am not quite sure I do. Silvia—no, but I remember now why the name was in my mind."

"Will you tell me," she asked quietly.

"Most certainly. I read a story last night. What was it called?—It must think—Silvia's lovers. I was very much struck with it."

"Will you get it for me?" she said. "I will send it to you to-day," he replied.

She smiled brightly, perfectly satisfied. When he rose to take leave she held out her pretty white hand.

"You like the name of Clotilde better than Silvia, do you not, Basil?"

"Of course I do," he replied, and he laughed to himself as he quitted the house—a laugh that Lady Clotilde would not have liked to hear.

CHAPTER X.

DOUBLE TREACHERY.

"I have to be married," said Lord Dyncourt to Captain Fraser, "and the sooner it is over the better."

The captain looked at the handsome, wearied, indifferent face.

"You take things very coolly," he said. "I should be more than half mad with such a prospect as you have before you."

"I am not given to raptures. I am thankful to say that it would require an immense amount to drive me mad."

"Well, there is one thing I must say, Basil—whether it offends you or not I do not care; I would not be so indifferent, so used up, so tired of everything as you are, not even to have your title and fortune."

Lord Dyncourt laughed.

"I am not at all offended," he replied, "not in the least. In fact, I consider you have paid me a compliment. I may say in return that I wish you all possible joy of your capability for rapture. I consider that a man has attained the chief object of existence when he is neither affected by joy nor sorrow—when, in fact, he has ceased to feel."

"But you were not always so, Basil. I can remember when you were excited about trifles, angry without cause, just like other men."

"I was not a lotus-eater in those days, Harry, and now I am one of the idlest."

The captain smoked away furiously at his cigar.

"As I was saying, Harry, it has to be done. I tell you in confidence, I consider the whole matter a most horrible nuisance, but it has been done, so the more quickly it is off my mind the better I shall enjoy my life."

"So it seems," said the captain, drily.

"A wedding in the country I could not survive," he continued. "Perhaps the recollection of country, fields, and lanes and flowers, was bitter to him. I could not go through it. Villagers' children strewing flowers, church bells pealing. I have not the strength for that kind of thing, nor have I the patience."

"Which is more to the point," murmured his friend.

"There is more dash, something lively about a wedding in town; it seems the very thing to finish up the season with. Will you do my best man, Harry?"

"Have you no relations—no one whom you might ask?"

"No, I have no one to please but myself," replied Lord Dyncourt. "I shall go to Stansfield House this morning and suggest the middle of June for the wedding. Spend as much time with me as you can, Harry, until the event comes off. I have been out of sorts lately."

As he said, so he did. He went that very morning to Stansfield House, and asked to see Lady Clotilde. He spoke hurriedly when he did speak; his lips were hot and dry. Once during the interview he astonished Lady Clotilde by turning very pale and asking for a glass of water. Surely rumors was never busy with such a student, heartless, cynical man of the world, or had memory carried him back to that humble little cottage at Rosebank, and the sweet face that would smile there no more.

She looked timidly at him, her face crimson with blushes.

"Basil," she said, gently, "do you prefer being married in London? We have such a beautiful old church near us, and a wedding at the Park would be really a treat for all our tenantry."

"It would not be a treat for me, darling. I prefer the town."

It was the first time during their courtship that he had used such a loving term to her. She looked at him, her eyes wet with happy tears.

"I will try to make you so happy, Basil," she continued. "I shall learn all your likes and dislikes, study all your tastes, ask your wishes."

She spoke so earnestly, so fervently—and such demonstrations were rare, for her—it was like a shock jarring on each nerve when he answered carelessly.

"You are very good, Clotilde, we shall get on all right, I am sure."

Her eyes lingered on his face wonderingly. Was it only that he was reserved in his manner, or did he not love her? He caught the glance, and the wistful pathos touched him, he took her hand in his.

"There are different kinds of men in the world, Clotilde," he said. "Some say more than they mean, others mean more than they say. I belong to the latter class. I have not the art of expressing my feelings eloquently, but you must never doubt that the feelings are there."

"I will remember," she said, gently, but she still looked puzzled.

"What is it, Clotilde?" he asked; "there is a question in your face."

"I was thinking over what you had said," she replied. "Basil, do not all men speak the truth?"

Her conscience, her purity, her truth smote him like a sharp sword. How little, dear Heaven! how little she knew of this world, wherein truth is held of so little account, and bought even less! Did all men speak the truth? What was he speaking when he sat there holding her hand in his, and talking about the time when she should be his wife?

All things are accomplished in time. Lord and Lady Voise, who both cordially approved their daughter's choice, gave a most free and happy consent to the union of the marriage. They had known Lord Dyncourt from his earliest boyhood, they knew him as a peer of the realm, as a worthy nobleman, as a large landed proprietor, as a man with a career before him that he might make famous if he would, a man whose name was ancient as their own. They had never heard anything against him, indeed, all that his worst enemy ever said was that he had been a "little wild," and those words are interpreted by different people according to their disposition.

Everything was settled and arranged. Costumes Royal was returned; dressmakers upholsterers, confiners, people of all kinds were busy at work there. The future Lady Dyncourt's jewels were on view at the celebrated establishment of Horton Brothers. Madame Clotilde exhibited the trousseau to a crowd of admiring spectators, the carriages and horses were to be seen at Falconer's. There had not been so great a sensation over a wedding since the lovely Blanche Seymour was married.

The happy day dawned at last, the twentieth of June, and a grander ceremonial had never been witnessed, even in St. George's, Hanover Square. The very cream of the elite were present. A royal duke and a royal princess were among the invited guests.

The papers gave a long list of gorgeous wedding presents, a long list of the invited guests, an elaborate description of the superb wedding breakfast at Stansfield House but they did not tell of the most touching incident at that magnificent ceremonial. It was when the travelling carriage stood at the door, and Lady Clotilde Dyncourt had gone to change her dress.

Lady Voyse called the bridegroom to her.

"Basil," she said, "I have gained a son, I hope, not lost a daughter."

He made some kind reply, but Lady Voyse hardly seemed satisfied.

"I have given you this day," she said, "the greatest treasure that I have on earth—money and lands are nothing in comparison. Oh, Basil, you will be kind to her? She has never heard an unkind or careless word; she has been so tenderly loved and cared for. You will deal gently with her?"

The mother's tears touched him as nothing else that day had done.

"I will be kind to her," he said. "You may trust her safely in my hands."

Then, amidst the shower of good wishes, congratulations, and blessings, they departed to begin that new life that seemed to Clotilde, Lady Dyncourt, like heaven below.

The treachery was accomplished, yet the heavens did not fall; the sun shone on and the flowers bloomed fairly, as though no taint of sin or falsehood had rested on the fair earth.

CHAPTER XI.

THE FRIENDLESS WANDERER.

On the very day that the wedding of the Right Honorable B... Ulric, Lord Dyncourt was celebrated, a solitary, desolate, heart broken girl entered London, alone, and on foot. A girl half crazed with despair—half mad with the bitterness of her pain, clasping in her arms a little child, only saved from seeking her own death because she had given a promise to keep her life sacred.

A young girl with a white, desolate face, weary and beautiful, whose tender eyes looked in vain among the crowds that passed by for one kindly face, for one sympathetic look. She was a woman, alone, and in a crowd. She met the usual fate of such a one. Some pushed rudely by her, others hurt the tender arms by knocking against her; some looked into the beautiful face with an ugly smile; some laughed, and some scoffed and jeered; but not one, dear Heaven! not one among the vast crowd gave her a kindly glance or word. She stood alone on the great bridge. Day was dawning to a close there, the sky was covered with great flashes of crimson, on the broad flowing stream there was a reflection of the rose-colored glare; little boats gilded down the river, noisy steamers went smoking under the bridge, the tall masts of the numerous ships looked dim in the evening light; and still that great stream of humanity flowed on and on.

A great stream of men, women and children; of good and bad, of rich and poor, of rogues and honest men, until one's eyes ached with the never-ending change. She had found a place on one of the stone seats of London Bridge, and there, hour after hour, she sat watching the passers by. Sometimes the little child in her arms would stir and then fall asleep again.

Occasionally one, warmer hearted than the others, would look sadly at that desolate, beautiful face, and wonder what had brought her there; again, some one would address a kindly word to her, but the white lips were never parted. She watched the crimson fade from the sky; she heard the sound of innumerable clocks; she noted the never-decreasing crowd, but she made no offer to move. Where was she to go?

Far down the river the lights began to gleam. Suddenly there came to her mind some sad, sweet lines that she had read not many months back with him. They were sitting in the shade of a great drooping lime tree on the borders of the beautiful lake, and she asked him to read to her. Among other poems he read this:—

"Where the lamps quiver
Far down the river,
Houseless and homeless
She wandered by night."

She could remember how her heart ached as she listened, and a shudder had passed over her, she remembered, too, how he had stopped to caress her, how he had kissed her face, half laughing, half scolding, because she was so tender of heart and so sensitive, the whole scene rose before her as though she had taken part in it but yesterday. How little had she thought then that such a fate would ever be hers. The tree was still standing, the beautiful, calm lake was glistening in the evening sun, but where was he, and where was she?

A low moan that she could not suppress came from her lips, and a woman passing by bent down and asked her if she were ill.

"Ill?"

She repeated the word with a vague feeling of wonder. What was physical pain compared to the torture eating away her life? Ill—why, all the illness in the world put together could never cause the anguish she was suffering then. She was not ill—only desolate, forsaken, betrayed.

She answered with such a vague manner—such an absent look in her fair face—that the woman thought she must be mad, and passed on.

Still that vast crowd hurried on, never growing less. Darkness had fallen over the city and the river; the lamps gleamed in the distance like golden stars; there was a low, sullen murmur as though the waves of the stream were rising and then the crowd hissed. It was dark now, and she had been sitting there since noon. Others would have remembered that they were cold, faint, hungry—not she, she remembered only that she was deserted and alone.

The great towers and steeples of the city loomed darkly before her; the myriad murmurs filled her ears. Where in all that vast babel was there refuge for her? Where was a roof to shelter her—a face to look kindly into her—a voice to shield her?

The dark, running river seemed nearer to her than anything else. The stars were shining bright and calm, they were reflected in its clear depths. At what a refuge was there!—what peace, what oblivion! It was only to stand on the parapet for one half moment—to spring over—perhaps one minute of agony, and then—peace.

She looked with yearning eyes, she rose, and something in the forlorn movement attracted the attention of the policeman on duty. She looked again at the river, when the memory of her promise rose before her like the flaming sword of an angel, and drove her back.

"Nay," said a voice behind her, "you must not do that, life may be very hard with you, but you must not do that."

She raised her white face and saw a policeman standing beside her.

"I was not going to drown myself," she said simply.

"That's right; there's many a poor girl—young as you comes here for that purpose and no other."

"Not I," she repeated, with a shudder. "I did not."

"So much the better."

Then he appeared to see the beautiful, white face more clearly.

"Why," he cried, in astonishment, "you were sitting here this afternoon, I saw you."

"Yes," she replied, drearily. "I have been here a long time."

"It may be no business of mine," said the man; "but I should like to ask you how it is?"

"I have no where else to go," she replied.

A peculiar expression came over his face.

"I was not out in my guess, after all," he said to himself.

"What has brought you to London?" he asked.

She looked around on the dark river and the vast city. Ah! what indeed? Could she tell him that she had been deceived, betrayed?—that her heart was broken, and that she had wandered here, hardly knowing why she came? No, he would not understand; she would not tell him that.

"Why did you come to London?" he repeated.

"I came to find something to do—some kind of work."

"And have you no money?"

"Yes, I have some money," she replied.

"Is that a little child you have under your shawl?"

"Yes, it is a very little boy," answered she.

"Then for the poor child's sake you must go somewhere. You can not remain on the bridge all night."

She drew her shawl closely round her.

"It looks so vast and so dreary. I do not know where to go," she moaned.

"You have money—why not go to a respectable coffee house? You could get supper, a night's lodging and breakfast, all for very little."

"I should not know where to find one," she said.

"I will take you to one you will like. There are several not many steps from here."

"You are very good," she said, gratefully. "I am tired, and I should like it."

"You came to London to look for work," said the policeman; "that is what every one does. You are a lady, and not accustomed to work, I should say."

The delicate, refined face and white hands told him as much.

She made no reply.

"Are you quite alone?" he continued. "Is your husband dead?"

He had seen the wedding ring shining on her finger.

"I am quite alone," she replied.

"A widow! Ah, well, trouble comes to all of us. You must cheer up. I am not what people call a religious man now, but I never forget these words: 'I am the God of the widow and the fatherless.'"

She started as though a sharp sword had pierced her. Did those words apply to her? She was not a widow, because she had never been a wife, but Heaven knew," she moaned to herself. "Heaven knew."

They reached a quiet, respectable coffee house. The policeman pointed to it.

"You go in there," he said, "and ask if you can stay the night; then, in the morning, look in the papers; there is always something to be found—there is always something to be found. Take my advice—good, honest advice—do not go back to the bridge; it does not do for such as you."

Then he went away, but there was a grave look on his face.

He had seen many such cases, and they all ended badly, he said to himself—very badly. She had such a beautiful face, so innocent, so poor, so girlish.

"What has gone wrong with her, I wonder? Ah! it must be the old story—a loving woman, a wicked man. I cannot think she is a widow, her trouble does not look to me like that kind at all."

And, throughout all the disturbances of that night, the man's mind dwelt on that fair, wistful, desolate face.

CROPS IN ORCHARDS.

Owners who set out young trees for the production of fruit often lose them or obtain a feeble growth by the after treatment. The worst place they can select to set them is a timothy and clover meadow. Much better is a pasture, kept cropped short by sheep, or a lawn closely shaven with a lawn mower, to which an annual top dressing of manure is given. Best of all is a clean mellow surface with no growth but that of the trees, but the owner does not wish to lose the ground between young trees. Hoed crops may then be planted, and kept clean by thorough cultivation. Corn is one of the best crops, the partial shade of the stalks is no detriment, potatoes are equally good, with the additional advantage that may be sown on sward land without ploughing, as soon as the potatoes are dug, to be ploughed in the following spring as green manure in time to plant corn or sow corn fodder.

A Long Standing Case Settled at Last.

T. W. Hunt, Post Hope, Ont., writes: I was a sufferer from a long standing case of eczema and losing nail up in years. I tried everything but to ever obtain anything that would give me material permanent relief. At last I tried a box of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, and it gave me immediate relief. It is now about two months since I used the oil, and I am happy to say I am now free from the disease. I feel very thankful to the proprietors of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for the great benefit I have received from its use.

A COOL SUMMER.

On the principle that the average temperature for a whole year will not differ greatly from that of former years, it is predicted that the coming summer will be an unusually cool one. As a matter of fact it is said that since weather records first began to be kept with anything like their present accuracy and completeness the range of variation, comparing one year with another, has not been so large. The coldest year recorded by the weather bureau was 1884, the average temperature of which was 45.6 degrees, the warmest 1887, which averaged 54.9 degrees. But from January 1, 1890, to the present date, the average temperature has been nearly 7 degrees higher than the recorded average for that period in former years, and the inference is drawn, with apparently very good reason, that the summer now approaching will be one of relatively low temperature. There is no such thing as certainty in weather predictions; but there is in this case a degree of probability which is at least entitled to respect. The wise man, taking note thereof, will not be in haste to forsake his flannels.

The most prominent experts in dog in the United States, says the New York Sun, are firm in the belief that thoroughbred dogs are less intelligent than mongrels. Nearly all the dogs exhibited on the stage are cross-breeds and dogs of low lineage, if they can boast known parentage at all. Dogs that turn somersaults, walk on their fore legs, jump through hoops, waltz, sing and perform other standard tricks, are never crossed with a strain of thorough blood. So, too, the dogs which are most thoroughly admired and cared for in private life are apt to be lowly born. Aristocratic dogs, like the aristocrats of the human species, are often distinguished by a plentiful lack of brains.

AMERICANS IN PARLIAMENT.

(London Free Press.)

IT was tritely remarked by Mr Davin in the House the other night, that any one hearing Mr Charlton speak would suppose that the American citizen had surreptitiously worked his way into Parliament and was advocating the interests of his native country. He would never suppose for a moment that Mr Charlton was a British subject speaking in a British Parliament. This remark was well founded and it is a reproach on the party system in Canada that it has developed such a miserable specimen of our citizenship as one sees in the member for North Norfolk. It brings shame to loyal Canadians to read the annexation sentiments of a man who has been sent to Parliament for the purpose of promoting the interests and independent destiny of the Dominion. One can only come to the conclusion, when he hears Mr Charlton on other occasions speak about "the old flag" that he is strongly tinctured with hypocrisy. For his insincerity he has been rebuked by Mr Blake, by Mr Mills and Mr Laurier of his own party and he is thoroughly despised by the Conservatives. It is to Sir Richard Cartwright's credit that with all his ultra free trade utterances he has never openly advocated annexation. He has bordered dangerously near the border, but he has, nevertheless, kept himself free from the taint which attaches to Mr Charlton in that regard.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE town assessor's roll is said to be in a "medibly mixed" condition, and appeals are being thickly filed at the clerk's office. The Assessment committee are going over the roll, and any property assessed too low will be appealed against. If it's the other way, however, matters will be left as they are——so far as the committee is concerned.

DR. GAVILLER must hold a mighty high opinion of himself—a great deal higher than anybody else—when he imagines he has even a ghost of a show to represent Dufferin. The Equal Rights'ers of this town have denounced him, and think he is a claim of the first water. If he goes to the polls on the 5th of next June—well, his hour has come.

IN another column will be found an interesting letter from "Vox Populi" on the approaching Ontario elections. "Vox Populi" has not mentioned the names of our late member, Mr. F. C. Stewart, and Dr Lewis, two very strong men who will go before the convention. Up to date the names of those who will go before the convention are F. C. Stewart, W. L. Walsh, Dr. Henry, Dr. Lewis (Orangeville) and Dr. Barr (Shelburne).

THE Conservatives of Peel seem to be in a very dissatisfied state. Editor A. F. Campbell of the Conservator and Mr Hughes, right-hand man, has accepted the Conservative nomination in Eastern Algoma and has gone thither. Mr E. D. Rutman, president of the Brampton Conservative Association, has resigned his position, and things seem to be very much mixed. On the other hand the Reformers are en masse for K. Chisholm.

THE Dufferin Reform Association intend to hold a convention in the near future for the purpose of choosing a candidate to attempt to wrestle Dufferin from the Conservatives. From what we can learn, Mr. George Bailey, reeve of Melancthon, is spoken of as the probable candidate, while other reports would lead the unsuspecting to believe that the "Little Premier" will contest Dufferin himself. Should a quadrangular fight take place, what a chance a Grit would have of slipping in!

Good roads attract population as well as good schools and good churches. Good roads increase the valuation of property, so that it is said that a farm situated five miles from market connected by bad roads is less valuable than one ten miles from the town connected by a good road. Farmers should take this matter into consideration and when they work on roads make good what they do if it is not more than a rod a year. Poor roads in the spring and fall, and this section knows something about that, are a great detriment to prosperity.

AT a recent meeting of the Shelburne Liberal Conservative Association, the following resolution was passed:

Whereas, after hearing the correspondence between the president and secretary of the Liberal Conservative Association of Dufferin read, we, the members of the Shelburne Branch of said Association concur in the opinion that when the Secretary refused to act and send out notices for a convention for the reasons stated in his letter to the president, that the president was out of order in appointing the time and place of meeting, without first calling a meeting of the executive together and having a majority of them agree as to when and where the convention should be held. Therefore, on account of the misunderstanding and irregularities, it is moved by Major Douglas, and seconded by George Rutherford, that we hereby request the matter to be reconsidered and respectfully ask the president to call the executive together, that they may agree as where the convention shall be held, and thereby make it more representative and successful and cause unity and harmony to prevail.

LOCAL ELECTIONS.

Vox Populi Advances His Arguments to His Fellow Electors.

To the Editor of The Sun:

SIR,—I thought the date of the election for the Local House has been fixed and the old warriors are buckling on their armor for the coming conflict, there still appears to be much doubt who shall be the standard bearer in Dufferin. One thing is sure there are plenty of aspirants, consequently it will require more care in making a selection. The way in which delegates to conventions are generally chosen is open to much objection. Very often two or three men, who are more officious than others of their municipality, meet and appoint delegates who are always ready to obey the lack of them by whom they were appointed. Under such circumstances honest voters can not honestly be censure for not abiding by such conventions. There should be no wire pulling or log-rolling allowed.

I understand the new aspirants are likely to be W. L. Walsh and Dr. Henry. The first of these gentlemen stands well as a professional man, is a good sensible platform speaker, and is doing honor to himself as first magistrate of the town. His municipal experience has not been great but he has undoubtedly shown that he has plenty of legislative ability. He is a young man and will no doubt make his mark in life. Dr. Henry needs no commendation where he is known. He has had a very extensive experience as a municipal man—having been elected mayor of this town for five years—in fact, holding the office till he voluntarily resigned. He stands at the head of his position as a professional man. He possesses plenty of energy and has always had courage equal to his convictions. Some would probably object to Dr. Henry for the stand he took on the disallowance of the Jesuit Bill as he was one of those who went to Quebec to present the petition to the Gov. General asking that it be disallowed. But Dr. Henry has nothing to fear on these grounds. Again some would probably say Dr. Henry is a renegade Grit. In answer to those it may be said that wise men sometimes change their views but fools never do. The great Earl Beaconsfield began life as a Liberal while W. E. Gladstone was a Conservative. Dr. Henry is a member of the Orange order and would undoubtedly be strongly supported by the members of that body.

None of those who formerly represented this county did anything to recommend them very highly to the electors and it is not likely that they will again be entrusted with such a responsible position. We want a live active man in the House, not a mere voting machine.

It is rumored that Dr Barr is in the field against all comers. With all due respect to the Dr. we do not want a member who will furnish us (as you said some time ago, amusement for the funny men on the evening papers).

Let the delegates be chosen without wire-pulling and the nominee of the convention will be elected, whoever he may be.

Yours truly,
VOX POPULI.

Orangeville, May 12th, 1890.

GRAND VALLEY.

Rev. H. Bowers will be leaving here on the 19th inst.

The members of the mechanics' Institute held a meeting on Monday of last week and appointed officers for the current year.

Canada's New Party are going to make things hot in Dufferin at the coming Ontario elections. A few of our citizens accompanied Dr. Gaviller, the acknowledged head of the party, to Orangeville, where they held a convention. Of course the doctor was the choice of the meeting. The ratepayers are preparing a coffin to give him a political funeral, which will take place at five on Thursday evening, June 5th.

SHELBURNE.

Mr. Robt Allen has purchased two lots on Owen Sound street.

Councillor O'Flynn was slightly hurt in a runaway accident one day last week.

Dr. Norton is at present having plans prepared for a new residence which he intends to erect this season.

Messrs W. A. McKee and John Large went out fishing last week and caught 109 fish, which weighed 100 lbs. Some of the fish weighed two and a half pounds each. Pretty good!

The new waterworks system seems to be a greater source of trouble than it appeared at first sight. It is now rumored that the mains will not stand the guaranteed pressure, and the village council are testing them to see if such is the case.

At a meeting of the Mechanics' Institute the other evening, the following officers were elected for this year: R. A. Rocky, president; Rev. T. J. McClelland, vice president; R. L. Mortimer treasurer; Alex. Smith, secretary; C. Mason, G. Rutherford, Jas. Chalmers, Dr. Norton, J. Palmer, J. Hamilton, directors. The library contains about 800 volumes.

At 5 p. m. on Friday a sad accident happened in Tara at the Grand Trunk station, by which a young man, Henry Brown, lost his life. At the time of the accident he was on top of a box car putting on the brakes when the train shunting brought the cars together with force as to knock him off. He fell between the cars. Two wheels passed over his body, causing instantaneous death. He was the son of a widowed mother, and has only been in the service of the Grand Trunk a few days.

CONCLAVE OF TORIES.

Orangeville Conservatives Elect Officers and Appoint Delegates.

WHO'LL THE CONVENTION CHOOSE?

Ex-Mayor Gilchrist Elevated to the Presidency—The Equal Rightsers Satisfied with Mr. Meredith's Equitable Platform.

As advertised, the Orangeville Liberal Conservative Association held their annual meeting in the town hall on Tuesday evening. A very small number of Conservatives were present, however, and what business was before the meeting was speedily rushed through. Mr. F. C. Stewart took the chair at 8:40, and the election of officers was proceeded with, which resulted as follows: Ex. Major Gilchrist, president; James May, vice-president; J. M. Bennett, secretary-treasurer. It may be said that Mr. Stewart did not wish to be selected president; and J. S. Leighton, ex secretary, said his connection with the Equal Rights Association would not allow him to act. He also said Mr. Meredith's platform, as far as it went, was the same as the Equal Rights' platform, but that Mr. Meredith didn't go far enough, and if any other man went further he wanted to be free to vote for him.

Then came the choosing of delegates. It was moved that the North, East and West wards send four delegates each, and the South five. After a few amendments had been made, the result was: North ward——Dr. Henry, J. Kearns, J. S. Leighton, J. C. Fox; A. A. Hughson, J. M. Bennett, substitutes. South ward—James May, J. Bailey, H. Crozier, Jos. Foster, Wm. Fildes; Jno. Perdue and J. H. Hulse, substitutes. East ward—John Gilchrist, W. Fleming, Alf. Cobean, D. J. Mungovan; T. L. Mercer and Jno. Crozier, substitutes. West ward—F. C. Stewart, Dr. Lewis, W. L. Walsh, H. Endacott; Jos. Riddell and Wm. Judge, substitutes.

A vote of thanks was moved and unanimously carried to F. C. Stewart, ex-M. P. P. Mr. Stewart replied in a very pithy speech. He thanked the association for the kindness shown him, and said he would give an account of his stewardship at the convention, which is to be held next Tuesday.

WHAT WE MAY EXPECT.

The thermometer to take a jump.
A public park in ——A.D. 1901.
Four candidates to run for Dufferin.
The town debt to be paid off by police court fines.
Postmaster Leslie to be a millionaire in a short while.
Journals that sneak items from THE SUN to give us credit therefor.
Some dissatisfied Conservatives to fall into line without further notice.
A first class roadway on Mill street after $800 of good money has been spent thereon.
The health inspector to make an example of a few persons who refuse to clean up their premises.

Port Arthur Sentinel:—"Why are not the Port Arthur licenses issued? The most careful inquiry fails to bring any response. Are the commissioners holding back the licenses at the 'suggestion' of the Toronto or Port Arthur end of the Mowat machine? Do they expect they will get any more money out of the saloon keepers by dangling the license over them? Do they think they will be able to 'pull' them for more stuff?"

Duty requires that his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught shall be in England the 21st June, and all his arrangements in Canada shall be governed by this fact. The party, which includes the Duke and Duchess, Sir John Macneill, Colonel and Mrs Cavage, and Dr. Kilkelly, with the usual retinue, are expected to arrive at Victoria, B. C., on the 23rd inst., and will leave the coast on the 25th. On the overland journey a stop for a few hours only will be made at Banff and Winnipeg. From the latter city they proceed to Toronto by rail, thence to Niagara and back by rail to Kingston, where the steamer will be taken for Montreal, the intention being to arrive there on the 5th or 6th of June. From Montreal, where they will be the guests of Sir George Stephen, the party proceeds to Ottawa, where they will lunch with Sir John Macdonald. Leaving Ottawa they go to the lower St. Lawrence for a few days' fishing. At Quebec, on 11th they will be the guests of the Governor General, and will sail on the Allan steamer Sardinian on the 12th of June. It will be seen from this programme that there will be no opportunity for extended official courtesies or public demonstrations of welcome at any of the points the distinguished party stop at, and though a different state of things would have been preferred there will be a general acquiescence in the arrangements made the visit of their Royal Highnesses being non official in character and merely an incident on their homeward journey from India.

In the Monette murder trial before Judge Rose at L'Orignal, on Saturday, while the jurors were at luncheon, one of them slipped away from the constables and only eleven returned into court, and although the missing man came in a few minutes after, the judge said he had no option but adjourn the trial till next assizes.

A Marvellous Recovery.

I was so ill with inflammatory rheumatism in 1882 that I was given up, and had all my earthly business out in order. One of my sons begged me to get Burdock Blood Bitters. After the third bottle I could sit up alone and eat a good meal, and in six weeks I was out of bed feeling better than I ever felt. I take three bottles every spring, and two every fall.

DR. GAVILLER'S PARTY.

He Musters a few of His Troops, Who Offer Him as a Sacrifice for Dufferin.

"Canada's New Party," the political offshoot of which is Dr. Gaviller, of Grand Valley, held a convention in the council chamber, Orangeville, on Saturday afternoon last, to pick a standard bearer in the interests of that party to contest Dufferin for the Local House. The convention was called for 1 o'clock, but at that hour only two or three people were in the hall.

Two o'clock came, but still the pretentious medical practitioner from Grand Valley had not put in an appearance. Things began to look blue for the few assembled delegates, and people thought the doctor was playing a huge joke on them. At about 3 o'clock, however, the leader of the so-called new party arrived, and he and the handful of delegates ambuscaded themselves in the chamber. Several citizens dropped in to see what was going on, but were requested to withdraw, which they smilingly did. When THE SUN's representative walked into the room, a chubby, good natured youth was treating the delegates—some twenty-five in number—to an oration (?). He said he did not think it advisable to bring out a candidate, as the number of supporters was so small. While the youth was delivering the speech of his life, the Gaviller was busily engaged whispering to Secretary Parsons. Then he exchanged a few words with another person in the front seat. All this time we were enraptured with the speaker's eloquence. At last the medical man got through with his whisperings and a young man with light-colored hair, parted in the centre, and a baseball moustache advanced towards us and politely whispered to the press representative, "Excuse me, Sir, but I come to tell you that this is a private meeting." We took the hint and left the edifice.

We learned afterwards that "Dr." Gaviller was the "unanimous" choice of the convention; and we believe he intends to remain in the field until his political head is chopped off at 5 o'clock on the afternoon of June 5th.

Dr. Gaviller has changed his coat too many times to suit the intelligent electors of Dufferin. He has been a Grit, turned Tory, and now he is endeavoring to gain popularity and votes by his dabbling in Equal Rights and Prohibition affairs. If this cheeky aspirant from Grand Valley don't get buried good and deep on the evening of June 5th, we will believe Mowat is still in power!

ONE MORE UNFORTUNATE.

A Woman's Rash act—Suicide of Ida Torrance on Saturday—Sketch of a Chequered Career.

TORONTO, April 12.—A sensation was created on Saturday afternoon on Yonge street by the news that a woman had suicided in a suite of rooms over No. 89, on the east side of the street, near King street. The victim was a dissolute woman of the town, who passed under the name of Mrs. Ida Torrance.

Mrs. Torrance was one of the finest looking members of the demi monde in the city. She came of respectable parents in Boulder Creek, California, and her true name was Ida Rutherford. She was very refined and highly educated, and it is said that she at one time held a high social position in her native state.

Tall, handsome in face and form, with soft brown eyes, brown gold hair, tapering hands that might have furnished models for a sculptor, attractive in manner, refined vivacious in speech, she always found plenty of lovers, and appeared sadly out of place among her associates. She was just the woman to attract masculine attention and admiration, and along with it the sensuous dangers that she failed to avoid.

Some months ago she came to this city from Montreal, and entered a notorious house on Richmond street west. She had not been there very long when she met a young man, an American, by the name of Frank Moore. Moore became enamoured of her, and gave up his room in the Rossin house and furnished a suite of rooms over 89 Yonge street. These apartments he furnished in luxurious style, spending over two thousand dollars in furniture, carpets, and curtains. When he moved into the apartments Ida Rutherford gave up her old associates, and went to live with him as his wife. This was about New Year's. They lived happily together ever since. Moore was a dead game sport and knew a lot of young men about town, and they used to call on him at his rooms. But the woman pined for companionship of her sex, and although Moore furnished her with books and magazines she was so much alone, as business took him away, that she often felt gloomy and downcast. Whether it was remorse or jealousy that prompted her, at any rate about five o'clock Saturday morning she swallowed two ounces of laudanum. Moore had been very late on Friday night, and did not get to his rooms until one o'clock in the morning. What passed between the two no one knows. When she took the poison Moore rushed over to Bingham's drug store, and Dr. Thorburn was sent for. When he arrived he sent for Dr. Riordan, and they both did everything in their power to save her life, but without avail. She died about one o'clock.

Moore says that he was about to take a trip to British Columbia with her, and that he could not account for her rash act.

Moore hails from Indianapolis, where he used to work in a bank. He came to Toronto a year ago with about $35,000, with which he purchased the schooner St. Louis.

There were many seamy passages in the life of the deceased. Her aliases were "Leslie," "Edwards," "Billings," and "Torrance." The latter name she took from a gambler living in Buffalo. She has lived at Los Angles, San Francisco, Cuffy's Cove, Albion, and Bear River, California; Virginia City, Nevada; Duluth, New York, Buffalo and Montreal. The father, mother, and brother live at Boulder Creek, California, and it is said to be the only daughter in the family. She had a very fine wardrobe, worth thousands of dollars.

The funeral of the unfortunate girl took place Tuesday morning to Mount Pleasant cemetery. The casket was surrounded with flowers, and the plate, by order of Frank Moore, bore the inscription Ida Torrance, he having known her by that name alone. She was buried without the usual service, whether by the choice of her lover or because no Christian minister was charitable enough to perform the last rites, is not yet ascertained. Frank Moore was the only mourner, and indeed few besides curiosity seekers attended the funeral.

A telegram has been received by Inspector Stark from E. A. Goldsby, barrister, of Santa Cruz, Cal., requesting that the effects of the girl, Ida Torrance, who committed suicide at 89 Yonge street on Saturday, may be forwarded them. The request, which is made at the instigation of the deceased's mother, will be complied with.

The Pick of March.

LAST March mother caught a severe cold, terminating in a very bad cough. Everything we could hear of was tried without avail. Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam was at last recommended and procured. The first dose relieved, and one bottle entirely cured her."

...ial legislation on Mo... night.

...Conservative convention next Tues...

The government engineer inspected the pavilion on Monday.

The firemen held their regular monthly meeting on Tuesday evening.

The Gordon House has not changed hands, the Streetsville man having failed to come to time.

The Citizens' band has been engaged for the 24th by the Alton Queen's birthday celebration committee.

Correspondence and other news that has been crowded out of this issue will appear in next week's SUN.

We believe the lacrossiers will have to procure new grounds for this year, as the present quarters are being fenced off.

Miss Clara Kennedy, of the South end, was thrown from a buggy the other evening and had her shoulder dislocated.

Rev. C. E. McIntyre preached the funeral sermon of the late G. B. Island in the First avenue Methodist church on Sunday evening.

Messrs. Turnbull and Wm. Cruick have sold the United States patent of the Turnbull binder to a Chicago firm for $50,000.

A new electric light company has been formed in town. Messrs F. Frank, Dr. Lewis, D. McDonald and J. S. Leighton constitute the company, we believe.

We would direct the attention of our readers to A. & W. Johnston's advertisement in this week's issue. Those desirous of securing bargains in dry goods and groceries would do well to call.

Chief Shields arrested J. B. Reid on Saturday for nonpayment of a fine, recently imposed upon him by P. M. Pattullo. He remained in the "cooler" until early Sunday morning before he consented to pay the fine.

In exchange made the suggestion, by way of reminder to its subscribers, that for those who want to remit small sums, such as subscriptions, post office orders for amounts up to $4.00 may be obtained for two cents, and when such a order is obtained, registration of letters, which costs the absurd sum of 10 cents, is unnecessary.

In The South.—Our next letter will be a description of a long-leaf pine forest in the high sand hills of North Carolina. Many northern people have recently moved there and being benefited in health, they are building up handsome settlements. We have received a specimen of the long pine needles, and our readers are invited to call and see them.

Another Candidate.—Just as we are ready to go to press this morning, the President of the Dufferin Farmers' Institute dropped into our sanctum and informed us that a convention of the above association will be held at Shelburne next Wednesday at 10 o'clock, to select a candidate to represent them in the Ontario Legislature. All farmers are requested to attend.

Parlor Concert.—A parlor concert in aid of the organ fund of the Methodist church will be held at the residence of Mrs. R. W. Ritchie, corner of First street and Third avenue, to-morrow (Friday) evening. A good programme, consisting of solos, duetts, quartettes, reading, recitations, etc., will be rendered in the usual good style. A large crowd will undoubtedly turn out on this occasion.

"Canada's New Party."—A meeting of the supporters of "Canada's New Party" was held in the town hall on Friday evening last. A very small number of people were present, and they nearly all left before the meeting concluded. Dr. Gaviner, the man of many exploded arguments, and W. Munns, of Toronto, were the speakers. If the small audience that was present is any index to the future of "Canada's New Party" we may expect never to hear of it after June is six days old.

The 24th at Shelburne.—The pushing village of Shelburne is going to hold the best Queen's birthday celebration of any place between Toronto and Owen Sound. The turf club have hung up some good sized purses, which will be the means of drawing a number of outside horses. Foot races, goat races and dog races are amongst the programme. The G. T. R. will issue return tickets at single fare from all stations, good until the 27th. Orangeville people who want to spend a good day should give Shelburne a call.

Hard on the Editor.—The following item, which hits the editor of our East Luther luminary rather hard is taken from the Mt Forest Representative. "The Grand Valley Star has opened a matrimonial agency and the Editor acts as a go between for silly girls and whoever of the male sex is shallow enough to answer the girls' advertisements in the Star for correspondents with a view to matrimony. Our brother of the Star, if he takes the Rep's advice, will set up no such unprofessional and unbecoming use of his position.

Died in Jail.—George Irwin, aged thirty-four, formerly of Markdale, died in the jail here on Friday morning last. He had been suffering from consumption for some time previous to his coming to Orangeville a month ago. It is said his friends tried to get him into different hospitals, but failing in their mission they sent him to Orangeville, where he remained at a hotel over night and had to be carried to jail the following morning to end his days. Coroner Henry held an inquest on the remains, and the jury returned the usual verdict. The body was interred in the potter's field in the town cemetery.

Lacrosse this Year.—The delegates of the different lacrosse clubs that compose the northwestern district met in the Paisley house last week and arranged the schedule of games for 1890. The dates are:

|---|---|
| Fergus at Mt. Forest | June 6th |
| Orangeville at Shelburne | "6th |
| Mt. Forest at Orangeville | " 13th |
| Shelburne at Fergus | " 20th |

| Orangeville at Mt. Forest | July 11th |
| Mt. Forest at Shelburne | " 18th |
| Shelburne at Orangeville | " 25th |

Don't be a Loafer.—If you have no business of your own, don't loaf around the place of another. Nothing gives a business man a poorer opinion of a place than to see half a dozen loafers sitting or lounging around every time he goes in. The owner or proprietor may be too polite or forbearing to order you away, but inwardly he will wish you at at the bottom of the sea. If he hires hands he expects them to work in business hours, and the man who hangs around the place of business, hour after hour, talking to the workmen, is never a welcome visitor to the proprietor. In this busy world there is work enough for all, and no man or boy should be content to lie around and loaf.

Free to Our Lady Readers.—The Canadian Queen is now having its annual free distribution of choice imported flower seeds, a large package containing an immense number of rarest varieties, together with The Queen on trial for three months will be sent free to each of our reader, forwarding her address and only 13 2c. stamps to cover actual expense. Five trial subscriptions and five packages by mail or express, (free of expense) to same address in Canada or U. S., for only $1.00. The Queen is one of the finest illustrated ladies' magazines on this continent, it is devoted to Fashion, Art, Literature, Flowers, the Toilet, Household Matters, and contains the Latest Imported Designs for Fancy Work and Home Decoration. The Seed Distribution for 1890 continues for this month only. No lover of beautiful flowers can afford to miss it. Address The Canadian Queen, Toronto, Canada.

And Still They Come.—Notwithstanding the repeated warnings that street-fighters have received from Mayor Walsh and P. M. Pattullo, the disturbers of the peace do not seem to profit by the lessons taught by the aforesaid magistrates. Saturday's police court consisted of six cases of disorderly conduct; and fines were imposed in each case. A short time ago Jonah McKitrick and Alex. Patterson, farmers living in Amaranth, had an alteration and proceeded to decorate each other's faces. They danced to the tune of $5.00 and costs, each. Bill Nelson and W. J. Acheson, two agriculturists from the banner township, played a similiar game and were summoned to the P. C. Nelson had the alleged pleasure of paying five and costs, and Acheson was mulcted for two and costs. Jack Irwin and "Soldier Billy" Graham, who participated in the Crimean war, were having a jollification all to themselves, when they were rudely stopped by the big "peeler." They each paid a fine of two and costs and left the court seemingly pleased.

The Orangeville Driving Association.—A number of lovers of fleet-footed horses met in the Queen's hotel last Monday evening for the purpose of organizing a turf club. The name of the new society is the "Orangeville Driving Association," the membership fee is fixed at $2. Some time ago Mr. J. C. Fox conceived the idea that it would be a good act to keep the driving park track in some kind of decent shape. He thought if an association could be formed the difficulty would be overcome. All receipts will be expended in improving the track. Heretofore, when the course required repairing a subscription list would have to be circulated to raise the necessary cash. It is not the intention of the association to hold general races this year, but they may next year. The officers elected are:

|---|---|
| H. Cromer | President |
| R. T. Haun | Vice President |
| C. W. Sydie | Secy.-Treas. |
| H. Cromer, R. T. Haun, C. W. Sydie, Dr. Smith, Wm. Johnston, J. C. Fox | Managing Committee. |
| General Committee J. Ketchum, Ald. Green, Ald. Youmans, T. H. Henry, J. C. Fox, Ald. Gillespie | |
| Special Attraction Committee, J. C. Fox, J. H. Shaver, J. Ketchum, Ald. Gillespie | |
| Printing Committee | |

Citizens' Celebration Committee.—A meeting to arrange to celebrate Dominion Day was held in the market room of the town hall on Monday evening. There was not a large attendance, however, owing to the wet state of the evening. Harry Ketchum's wonderful trotting dog, "Doc," was engaged as one of the special attractions, along with the Tuscarora Indian lacrosse club. From present indications, it is quite evident that this year's celebration will eclipse any previous attempt. After the following officers had been elected the meeting adjourned until next Tuesday evening:

|---|---|
| Ald. Green | Hon. President |
| Ald. Youmans | President |
| W. Wallace | Vice President |
| J. C. Fox | Treasurer |
| T. H. Henry | Secretary |

Messrs. H. Gillespie, J. Ketchum, W. Kearns, J. Foley, F. King, T. Donner, A. G. McKenny, B. McGuire jr., J. J. Hubbard, C. W. Sydie, M. Grey, P. McConnel, Ald. Cubean, Jos. J. Kelly, D. Stewart, R. Fitzgerald, J. Galbraith, ..... General Committee J. Ketchum, Ald. Green, Ald. Youmans, T. H. Henry, J. C. Fox, Ald. Gillespie, ..... Special Attraction Committee, J. C. Fox, J. H. Shaver, J. Ketchum, Ald. Gillespie ..... Printing Committee

PERSONAL.

Miss Eva Paisley, of Toronto, is visiting friends in town and vicinity.

Deputy-reeve Simpson, of East Garafraxa, gave us a pleasant call last Thursday.

Mr. A. Clarke, editor and proprietor of the Erin Advocate, was in town on Monday.

Mr. John McPherson, the illustrious editor of the Grand Valley Star, spent a pleasant half-hour in our sanctum on Saturday.

Mr. John Tweedy, of Grand Valley, called on us last week and renewed his subscription. Mr. Tweedy has been a subscriber to The Sun for over twenty nine years, and would not be without it for five times the subscription price.

A CROWNING VICTORY

Leslie's Plow Knocks its Rival Sky-High.

A Great Machine in a Great Bank of Snow—The Track Cleared in Very Short Order by the Rotary.

St. Elmo, Colo., April 16.—[Special.]—The special train bearing a party from Denver interested in the contest between machines for clearing a snow blockade, arrived at St. Elmo at 4:30 this morning. It was composed of J. S. Leslie, president of the Leslie Bros' Manufacturing Company of Patterson' New Jersey; Daniel Houston, the company's representative between the Missouri and the Rockies; A. L. Humphreys, general master mechanic of the Colorado Midland road; W. H. Jackson and George Mellen, photographers, and representatives of the News and Republican. When Denver was left at 6:30 p. m. Tuesday a blinding snow storm was raging, which lessened in intensity after the mountains were reached.

After having eaten breakfast at the Clifton house the Denver party were met by Mr. Jull of the Jull Centrifugal Excavator Company of Patterson, New Jersey; J. B. Gilchrist, assistant superintendent of the Colorado division of the Union Pacific system; M. F. Eagan, division master mechanic, and W. C. Sanders train master. The object of the trip was more to determine the merits of the rotary steam snow shovel, manufactured by Leslie Bros., and those of the conical snow plow operated by the Jull company, than to open up the Gunnison division of the South Park road.

At 8.15 a. m. the Jull machine, pushed by four locomotives, gave the first exhibition. The grade was 212 feet to the mile. A temporary delay was brought on a short distance from St. Elmo in order to adjust ice cutters to the machine. The Jull plow is conical in form with five blades similar to those of an auger. Its motion resembles the boring of such a tool. The one slants diagonally toward the right and attacks the snow from that side of the track, scooping it into the blades and throwing it out through a shaft on the right side. It is capable of doing 300 revolutions per minute. The entire weight, including car and boiler, is sixty seven tons.

A quarter of a mile stretch of road, having an ice bottom, was the first snag struck. The snow at this point raised in depth from two to four feet. The Jull plow slipped the track and its work was abruptly stopped. The ice seemed too much for the machine and but little was accomplished. Mr. Jull stated that the boiler, which was a brand new one, was not sufficiently broken in to accomplish what was expected of it.

The rotary, as Leslie Bros' machine is familiarly called, then had an inning. It scored its first triumph by conquering the ice and clearing the road for more than a half a mile. Both machines were run by employes of the Union Pacific road. Mr. Gilchrist superintended the operations. The rotary is constructed on a plan entirely different from that of its rival. Two series of steel plate rectangular blades do most of the work. Twelve of these are in the outer circle and six in the inner. They are set at angles suitable to cut and remove the snow rapidly, and with reasonable surety. As in the Jull, the snow is ejected from a shaft in the right side of the machine. The spray of snow thrown by both machines frequently formed an arc of from fifty to seventy feet in length.

During the morning snow storms and sunshine alternated in rapid succession. At noon the weather cleared and the balance of the day was warm and bright. The photographers took a number of instantaneous views as the machines were at work. The afternoon was occupied by the Jull plow and much time was lost through the machine persistently jumping the track. The snow encountered was about four feet in depth and the real tests between the rivals will not come off until to morrow, when heavier drifts will be met higher up in the mountain. When night came on the Jull plow was at work a quarter of a mile from Hancock.

The rotary appeared but once during the day, and then did good work. This machine has been used on other branches in the State and in other sections of the country with good success.

Mr. Jull having made the claim that his apparatus was superior to the rotary, the present contest was brought on. Opinion is somewhat divided on the merits of the contestants, but to day the rotary certainly displayed superior qualities. Early to-morrow morning the rotary will open the ball, and a lively day's work is expected.—Denver, Col., Republican, Apr 17, 1890.

They Back It Up.

The superior merits, as a blood-purifier and invigorating tonic, possessed by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical discovery, warrant its manufacturers in selling it (as they are doing through druggists) under a positive guarantee that, if given a fair trial, it will cure all diseases arising from a deranged or torpid liver, as indigestion, dyspepsia, and all humors, or blood taints, from whatever cause arising, as skin, scalp and scrofulous affections. The terms are, a benefit or cure, or money returned.

Mother Purification, daughter of W. A. Murray, of Toronto, died in Ursuline Convent, Quebec, on Wednesday. She had been in the convent 12 years, and was aged 20.

$500 Offered for an incurable case of Catarrh by the proprietors of Dr Sage's Remedy. 50 cents, by druggists.

HORSE NOTES.

SOME OF THE GREAT HORSES THAT ARE ON THE ROAD.

The following is a list of some of the great horses that are travelling in this district this season:—

Dugald.—This pure bred prize-winning Clydesdale has recently been purchased by Mr. Wm. Jackson, of Cardwell. He is a dark bay, stripe on face, fore legs black, little white on hind legs, and is three years old. He has taken first prizes at Brampton, Bolton, Woodbridge and Toronto, and Diploma and silver Medal for the Best Pretious Bred Horse of any age. He will stand this season at his own stable, lot 11 Centre Road, Mono.

Tam O'Shanter, II., was sired by that noted horse Tam O'Shanter, owned by the late William Patterson, of Marsville. He possesses all the good qualities of his sire and is a first class general purpose stallion. His route is:

MONDAY, leaves his own stable, Lot 8, Con. 1, E. Mono, and proceeds by way of Glenwood, to D. G. Buchanan's, for noon; thence to Joseph Henry's, Mono Centre, for night.

TUESDAY, proceed to Thos. Fearn's, for noon; thence to Shelburne, for night.

WEDNESDAY, proceed down 3rd line of Amaranth to ———, for noon; thence to John Renn's, for night.

THURSDAY, proceed to Laurel, for noon; thence to Geo. Renn's, for night.

FRIDAY, proceed to ———, for noon; thence to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

W. E. HALL, Proprietor.

Royal Clear Grit.—A well bred Trotting Stallion.—We referred to this horse in a previous issue of The Sun. The route he will travel is:

St. Joe.—Everybody knows or has seen that celebrated trotting coach stallion, St. Joe. St. Joe is a beautiful black, 9 years old, stands 16 hands 3 inches high, and possesses all the qualities of a first class trotter. Messrs Dwyer & Kearns, of Charlestown, can pride themselves on owning such a stepper. His route is the following route

MONDAY, he leaves his own stable, Charleston, and proceeds to Orangeville, for noon; thence to Moore Mills, for night.

TUESDAY, to Connor, for noon; to Palgrave for night.

WEDNESDAY, will proceed by Lockton, to Gott's, for noon; thence by Claudon East, to Sand Hill, for night.

THURSDAY, proceed by Campbell's Cross to Claude, for noon; thence home for night.

FRIDAY, proceed to Alton, for noon; thence to Cataract, for one hour; thence to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

Cleveland Hambletonian is a beautiful coach horse, the property of Mr. John White, Caledon. He has sired some of the best coach horses in America, one pair of which were sold to Philadelphia, before they were four years old, for the big sum of $3,700. His route this season is:—

MONDAY, he leaves his own stable, lot 29, 2nd line East, Caledon, at noon, and proceed to Moore Mills, for one hour; thence to Galbraith's Hotel, Hockley, for night.

TUESDAY, proceed to Henderson's Hotel, Rosemont, for noon; thence to Primrose, for one hour; thence to Witter's Hotel, Shelburne, for night.

SATURDAY, he will proceed to Edward Atkinson's, 1st line, Albion, for noon; thence to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

A famous quartet—John Gilkinson & Son are proprietors of four of the best stallions in Canada. Catch Me is a recently imported heavy draught, and is the genuine stamp of a horse of the first water. His pedigree would take up too much space here, and we will have to refer the reader to his route bills for particulars. The firm still own that famous coal black trotter, Prince, which took first prizes all over the country. The great Irish Thoroughbred, Aniline, and Fergus Raleigh, have recently been added to this stable. Prince and Aniline will make the season as follows:

MONDAY, they will leave their own stable, Commerce, Hockley, for night.

TUESDAY, they will proceed to Mono Centre, for noon; thence by Primrose to Witter's Hotel, Shelburne, for night.

WEDNESDAY, they will proceed to Whitington, for noon; thence to Gale's Hotel, Unionville, for night.

Beauty

Is desired and admired by all. Among the things which may best be done to enhance personal beauty is the daily use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. No matter what the color of the hair, this preparation gives it a lustre and pliancy that adds greatly to its charm. Should the hair be thin, harsh, dry, or turning gray, Ayer's Hair Vigor will restore the color, bring out a new growth, and render the old soft and shiny. For keeping the scalp clean, cool, and healthy, there is no better preparation in the market.

"Time free to confess that a trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor has convinced me that it is a genuine article. Its use has not only caused the hair of my wife and daughter to be but it has given my rather stunted mustache a respectable length and appearance."—B. Britton, Oakland, Ohio.

Abundant and Glossy,

"My hair was coming out (without any assistance from my wife, either). I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor, using only one bottle, and I now have as fine a beard and as any one could wish for."—E. T. Submitton, Dickson, Tenn.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor in my family for a number of years, and regard it as the best hair preparation I know of. It keeps the scalp clean, the hair soft and lively, and preserves the original color. My wife has used it for a long time with most satisfactory results."—Benjamin M. Johnson, M. D., Thomas Hill, Mo.

"My hair was becoming harsh and dry, but after using half a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor it grew black and glossy. I cannot express the joy and gratitude I feel."—Mabel C. Hardy, Delavan, Ill.

A DANGER SIGNAL!

A Cold in the Head may be aptly termed a danger signal warning you that if neglected that dangerous and disagreeable disease, Catarrh, is sure to follow, perhaps leading to Consumption and the grave. At no season of the year is Cold in the Head more prevalent than during the Spring months, and at no other season do the people of this country suffer more generally from Catarrh, with all its disagreeable and annoying effects. Do not for an instant neglect either of these troubles, but apply NASAL BALM, the only remedy that will give instant relief and effect a thorough cure. The following testimonials from among thousands in our possession bear witness to its sterling merit.

Alex. Burns, Sudbury, Ont., says: I may state that I have been affected with Catarrh seven or eight years, and it was attended by consequent symptoms such as foul breath, constant dropping into the throat, hawking and spitting, partial deafness, ringing in the ears and sickening pains in the head directly over either eye. I have used powders and douches, but all to no effect, the only result arising from the use of such was temporary relief, followed by the usual symptoms in a more aggravated form. The results arising from the use of Nasal Balm: Sweet breath, stoppage of the drowpin; no more into the throat, (consequently less hawking and spitting), clearness of hearing, and not once since I began its use have I had pain in the head. In fact, it is my opinion that a careful and persistent use of the Balm will effect a cure in the worst case of catarrh.

T. D. D. Loyd, 8 Clarence street, Toronto says: I wish here to testify to the unequalled healing powers of your Nasal Balm. I have been troubled for three years by what the doctors call post nasal catarrh, and have tried everything in the city that could be obtained, in the shape of catarrh cures, and found no permanent relief from any of them, till a friend one day advised me to try your Nasal Balm, and I find that even one bottle has done me more good than all the medicines put together that I have persecuted myself with before. I was very much troubled with spitting and hawking, especially in the morning, so much so that my throat was continually in a raw condition, but I am now beginning to know what it is to be able to speak freely. I shall lost fail to recommend it to any of my friends suffering from the like disease.

NASAL BALM INSTANTLY RELIEVES Cold in Head.

NASAL BALM POSITIVELY CURES CATARRH.

A. W. Mallory, Mallorytown, Ont., says: My daughter suffered for years from a most distressing and annoying Catarrh. Her case was under the treatment of eminent physicians in the United States and Canada. Two months use of Nasal Balm has had more beneficial effects than all former treatment combined.

L. D. Dion, Dept. Railways and Canals, Ottawa, says: I am very glad to give you to-day the testimony that Nasal Balm has completely cured my catarrh, from which I suffered for nearly three years.

D. Derbyshire, Mayor of Brockville and President of the Ontario Creamery Association, says: Nasal Balm beats the world for Catarrh and Cold in the Head. In my own case it effected relief from the first application.

Isaac Waterman, Imperial Oil Co'y, Petrolia, Ont., says: Nasal Balm gave me the most perfect satisfaction of any medicine I ever used for Cold in the Head. I found it easy to use, quick in giving relief and effect a complete cure in a couple of hours.

If Nasal Balm is not kept in stock by your dealer it will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 Cent for small and $1 for large size bottles) by addressing

FULFORD & Co. Brockville, Ont.

SPRING.

Sweet Spring with joy is ushered in,
Beneath her touch the wild flowers spring
From winter's sleep, and all land ...
Are clothed with her enchanting veil.
The trees put forth their thousand leaves,
The wind a softened murmur breathes
Upon the birds and flowers, and grass,
Which lift their heads as it doth pass.
All nature springs to life again
And bursts grim winter's icy chain;
In softened tones it lifts its voice,
And in new life now doth rejoice.
The Spring—the season for the young,
Which like them into life has sprung.
O yes, in its quiet simple way,
A lesson to us, day by day,
Each day some budding leaf or flower
Expands or withers in an hour.
How oft, we see, fair childhood bright
Cut off, as it were, in morning light.
Then let us learn this lesson well,
Which sweet-toned Spring doth ever tell,
That Spring is childhood's balmy day,
While many live—some fade away.

HOUSE CLEANING.

The melancholy days have come, the saddest of the year,
Of scrubbing, paint and scrubbing floors and scouring tin and pewter.
Heaped in the corners of the room the ancient dirt lies quiet,
Nor rose up at the fatal broom to meet the children's riot.
But now the carpets all are up, and from the dusty lair
The moth-eaten tackings and mold of years are thrown the door.
Where are those rooms those quiet rooms, the house but now possessed,
Where no sound, save the ticking of the clock, disturbed the rest?
Alas! they are turned upside down, that spot is scene of strife,
With pails and mops and brooms and pans and furniture and wife.
Where are the cobwebs usually around in the corners in the house?
The parlor and the chamber floors are [illegible]
The mantelpieces, mantlepieces washed (you all know what that is, if you have children know.)
But still the sun has not escaped—the fabled [illegible] with books,
Pens, ink and paper all about, papers in the very books—
Tell it the woman on them all as [illegible] idiots on me.
And then, the vanished all away—books, paper, ink and pens.
And now about the house home comes the most complete,
To find all things are "put to rights" that they have "set to rights."
When the sound of pots and pans is heard the loud strange echoes fill,
And the carpet woman's on the stairs (with tackings in her mouth)
He looks for papers, books or bills that all [illegible] before,
And goes to find them on the desk and finds the drawers in store.
And he is greatly thinks of her who at this [illegible] affect,
Also wishes she were out at sea in a well-leaky boat,
He meets her at the parlor door with hat and cap on,
With she was tucked up and broom in hand defiance in her eye;
He is hospitable small, and knows full well there's nothing to be said,
He finds her tongue and drinks his tea, and sneaks away to bed.

SUNBEAMS.

Lady of the house (sharply)—No, sir, I don't want any soap. Peddler (suavely opening another valise)—"Elements of grammar, ma'am! Only 15 cents."

Guest—What is the reason for all that racket in the kitchen? Waiter—Hard times has struck for more pay, salt, and the boss has struck the cook for doin' so that's all.

"I cannot marry you," said the bride to the bride, "but I will be a——" "Not a sister to me, I hope, say that." "No, I was going to say that I will be a grand mother to you."

Gamin (to street peddler)—Say, mister, are you really blind? Peddler—No I don't. Gamin—Then what makes you wear those smoked glasses? Peddler (suavely) "Well, sonny, you know it is very hard for a poor man to naturally delighted to have his say about some thing.

Aunt Mary—Bertha, how would you like to have another little sister? Bertha—I think it would be well enough, only I wouldn't be the elder sister I am. Aunt Mary—Why? Bertha—Because then I would have to give up some nice things to her.

"I see that a man in Illinois has been sent to the penitentiary for making an engagement." "Guilty of the engagement?" "For making change." "Did he make it come out?" inquired the [illegible]. "It is when you make it up [illegible] lead," explained the [illegible].

"I passed a burning statue [illegible] market a lady that [illegible] and the city [illegible] and [illegible] Monday on Saturday [illegible] Smith & Smith [illegible] at noon [illegible] at dinner only. I know [illegible] I went down to get Saturday afternoon and found the place closed. I was [illegible] provoked to anything.

"You have no objections to accepting a treat, have you my young friend?" said the kind old gentleman to the boy on the corner. "No sir," answered the youth, accepting the proffered gift [illegible] I was hungry enough to eat a horse and chaser, and I don't care if I do take some candy and a cigar to boot, I'm a sucker at the theatre."

Still Ground for Hope.—"But, Clara, what could you have been thinking of to engage yourself to such an absent minded man?" "I repent my word every minute, but my hope is that when we get to the church he will forget, and say 'no' instead of 'yes'."

Distracting Customer.—"Well, Shears what did you think of the Bishop's sermon on Sunday? I saw you in church." Barber—"Yes, sir, but to tell the truth there was a man sat in front of me whose hair wanted cutting so badly that I couldn't hear a word."

"Shall we marry, darling, or, shall we kiss?" was the short and witty line an ardent lover dispatched to the idol of his heart. But, where the strangeness of the matter comes in, the girl replied: "I shall not? You can do as you please."

A Seasonable Hint.

During the breaking up of winter, damp, chilly weather prevails, and rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, sore throat, croup, quinsy and other painful effects of sudden cold are common. Hagyard's Yellow Oil is a truly valuable household remedy for all such complaints.

CELERY.

Probably no class of people suffer more with rheumatism than farmers, and yet the remedy for this dreadful disease is, or should be, right at hand. If celery were eaten freely, sufferers from rheumatism would be comparatively few. It is a mistaken idea that cold and damp produce the disease; they simply develop it. Acid blood is the primary and sustaining cause. Celery is eaten largely, and alkaline blood is the result, and where this exists there can be no ... rheumatism nor gout. It should be eaten cooked. Cut it in bits and boil till soft in as little water as possible. Add to this as much milk as there is water on the celery, thicken with flour and season with butter, pepper and salt. If you cook it nicely and give it a fair trial, I am sure you will as soon leave potatoes out of your daily bill of fare as celery. It is also an excellent dish of cold meat or fowl, or for roasted poultry or game of any kind. Children will like it poured over boiled potatoes, or it may be drained from the sauce, mixed with mashed potatoes, formed into little cakes and browned. A really skilled woman will find numerous ways of serving it.

The Ides of March.

"LAST March mother caught a severe cold terminating in a very bad cough. Everything we could hear of was tried without avail. Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam was at last recommended and procured. The first dose relieved her greatly, and she entirely cured her."

THE ROTARY WON!

The Dull Plow Knocked Out in the First Round.

MAJOR LESLIE'S GREAT INVENTION.

Trial and Victory Heavenwards by the Canadian Pacific—A Dandy and no Mistake.

The Rotary plow, the great snow plow, which was tested yesterday in the parlors of the Windsor hotel. The disabled Dull plow had arrived in Denver crippled, disfigured and somewhat seriously damaged, after its encounter with the South Park line. As a final knock out in the famous fight to a finish that had been waged up in the clouds around Alpine tunnel, the Dull machine had gone into the ditch on the west descending grade, and nothing but the wreck remained to those who were desirous of seeing to place the contrivance on the market. The rehearsal of the mechanical prize fight afforded an opportunity for a series of anecdotes on bucking snow in the Sierras, on the Sellers range crossed by the Canadian Pacific and the Rocky Mountains. The gentlemen interested in the conversation were representatives of the Rotary, and all their words sounded the praises of their little pet which had gone into the fight without any special preparation and had come out ahead in such glorious style as to prove to the outside world that their boasting had not been in vain. The rehearsal was not without interest, and it was only after an animated conversation lasting through several hours that the gentlemen [illegible] "[illegible]." [illegible] U. S. [illegible] only wanted to see some snow to show you what we could do. At the tunnel there was only ten feet of snow, hardly enough on which to make an impression. Now over in the Sierras we were looking snow that ran all the way from fifteen to fifty feet deep, and the way it was distributed over Oregon and Washington was a caution to all observers. When you get some snow here in Colorado we will show you what the rotary is capable of. [illegible] Colorado snow blockade which had stuck the Col. N. Ry. in her trip around the world.

Read this extract from the scientific papers of Great Britain and Europe:

The four greatest medical centres of the world are London, Paris, Vienna and Munich. These three large cities hospitals teeming with suffering humanity. Crowds of students throng the wards attending under the Professors in charge. The best remedies are tried and tried and practised here, and the institutions are storehouses of medical knowledge and experience. With a view of making this experience available for our patrons we have secured the prescriptions of these institutions, covering the ailments of humanity, which would cost from $25 to $100 to secure the attention of their distinguished originators, but we can now offer these prepared specifics are offered at the price of the quack patent medicines that flood the market and absurdly claim to cure everything from dandruff to [illegible].

Newspaper Decisions.

1. Any person of persons who take a paper regularly from the post office, whether directed in his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment.
2. If a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken or not.
3. The courts have decided that refusing to take a newspaper or periodical from the post office or removing and leaving them uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intended fraud.

Ask For Ayer's

Sarsaparilla, and be sure you get it, when you want the best blood-purifier.

With its forty years of unexampled success in the cure of Blood Diseases, you can make no mistake in preferring Ayer's to any other. The forte-runner of modern blood medicines, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is still the most popular, being in greater demand than all others combined.

Sarsaparilla

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is selling faster than ever before. I never hesitate to recommend it."—George W. Whitman, Druggist, Albany, Ind.

"I am safe in saying that my sales of Ayer's Sarsaparilla far excel those of any other, and it gives thorough satisfaction."—L. H. Bush, Des Moines, Iowa.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla and Ayer's Pills are the best selling medicines in my store. I can recommend them conscientiously."—C. Bickham, Pharmacist, Roseland, Ill.

"We have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla here for over thirty years and always recommend it when asked to name the best blood-purifier."—W. T. McLean, Druggist, Augusta, Ohio.

"I have sold your medicines for the last seventeen years, and always keep them in stock, as they are staples. 'There is nothing so good for the youthful blood' as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—R. L. Parker, Fox Lake, Wis.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla gives the best satisfaction of any medicine I have in stock. I recommend it, or, as the Doctors say, 'I prescribe it over the counter.' It never fails to meet the cases for which I recommend it, even where the doctors' prescriptions have been of no avail."—O. P. Calhoun, Monmouth, Kansas.

A PLEA FOR THE OLD MAN THAT SMOKES.

There daughter, stop scolding! Don't worry and fret,
And work yourself into such fits!
Just about all the comfort your father can get
Is a smoke by the warm kitchen fire
Let him smoke in the corner in peace if you can,
Though the clouds of tobacco may choke;
There is no one can tell but a lonely old man
How much comfort there is in a smoke.

Like a free bird that flieth from limb unto limb
Your routine of joys you go through;
And some of them look just as foolish to him
As smoking looks foolish to you.
Were none of us perfect—all this you may believe—
Our lives should with charity shine,
Like the golden threads that the weavers weave
In and out of the dark design.

Should you live to be old—though you may never smoke—
Yet I'll wager a penny or two
You will have some strong habit to tease other folk,
Bad as this that is worrying you.
Let him smoke in the corner in peace if you can,
Though the clouds of tobacco my choke;
There is no one can tell but a lonely old man
How much comfort there is in a smoke.

Do I smoke? No, not I; nor will I advise
Any youth the bad habit to get;
But when one is old and can't stop it he tries,
Is it wisdom to worry and fret?
Let him smoke in the corner in peace, if he can,
Though the clouds of tobacco may choke,
There is no one can tell but a lonely old man
How much comfort there is in a smoke.

Not long will tobacco smoke daily annoy,
Soon the pipe on the mantel will lay,
And father will rest where time shall destroy
The tenantless body of clay.
Let him smoke in the corner in peace if he can,
Though the clouds of smoke may choke!
There is no one can tell but a lonely old man
How much comfort there is in a smoke.

CHAPTER XII.

THE PARTING.

SILVIA soon found herself in a most comfortable room, where in a short time she was served with a cup of hot tea. She did not know how much physical weakness, faintness, and hunger had to do with her feeling of utter weariness. A good-natured maid-servant came in, who began to admire the baby, to praise him, to call him all kinds of pet names. That cheered her. After all, the possession of that beautiful baby was a gleam of light in the darkness that surrounded her.

When the little one had gone to sleep, she laid it down and went to the window; she looked out on the busy streets, still so full of people; the noise seemed to reach her and greet her—to remind her that she was not alone in the world; then the clear heavens seemed to smile down upon her. After all there was something to live for.

"I can work," she thought, looking down on her little white hands, "and I have my baby."

But she was such a child, so inexperienced still, so utterly ignorant of the world and its ways, so untrained, in all matters of fact, to means of life. As she sat there deciding that she must work, she had no more idea how to see about than a little baby sleeping so soundly would have had.

After a time she laid her head down on the pillow, and slept too. She did not wake until morning, and then the cold, bleak world lay before her again.

It so happened that the mistress of the house, hearing of the beautiful baby and its fair young mother, felt some desire to see both. When the time came for presenting the bill, she took it in herself.

Her heart was touched; she took the child in her arms, kissed the little blooming face, then turned to the young mother.

"You are very young," she said; "and you look like one who has had a deal of trouble."

"I have had most bitter trouble," replied the girl—"so great that it has almost killed me."

The landlady's eyes fell upon the plain, gold wedding ring.

"Why are you alone?" she said. "Where is your husband?"

There was a moment's pause. Those pale lips had never spoken falsely.

"I have lost him," she said, in a low voice.

"Poor child! I thought as much. And now you come here in search of employment—is that it?"

"Yes, she replied. "And I do not know—I am so ignorant—I have no idea even how to begin to find employment. Ah! how I wish you would tell me!"

The landlady looked at her keenly.

"You are a lady," she said, "and if you will excuse me saying so, you know as little as the rest of them."

"I am afraid I do not know much," was the meek reply.

"You could teach, of course?" said Mrs. Carson, with the least possible shade of contempt in her voice.

"I do not think so—I am not clever. It requires great skill and talent to teach well, does it not?"

A dry laugh, that Silvia did not understand, answered her.

"Would you like to go into a shop?" she asked.

"I would do anything. I am willing to do anything."

"Well," said the landlady, candidly, "in my opinion you are far too good looking to go into a shop. Your life would be a burden to you."

The beautiful face fell.

"Do you know of anything that you could get your living by at home—lace making, or anything of that kind?"

"No; I am very ignorant."

"If I were in your place," said Mrs. Carson, "I would go to an office—there must be plenty in London. You might get a situation as governess to young children, or as companion. Would you like that?"

"Very much, indeed, if I could manage it."

"You could manage it well enough," was the hearty reply. "Then you would have to consider what you would do with your baby."

The young mother's face fell.

"Shall I have to leave my baby? I cannot do that."

"You will be obliged to do it if you wish to make money," said Mrs. Carson. But it will be easy to find a comfortable home for it—not here in London—but out in the country, where it can get fresh air, and good, cheap milk. You will pay so much a week, and may be sure he will be kindly treated."

"Are you sure I can get such a home?" she asked.

"Yes; let me think. I have a married sister who lives in Hampstead; she is not too well off, poor thing, and she would be glad of a child to nurse; that is, of course," she added, somewhat awkwardly, "if you can pay."

"I will do that," she cried—"You give me a fresh life. Before I do anything else I will see about a nice home for my baby. I never thought of that—indeed, I have been almost in despair whenever I have thought of it, for I did not see how I was to get work with my baby."

"You do not know much of the world," said Mrs. Carson, kindly. She, too, like the policeman, had been looking at the lovely young face, and thinking that the sorrow there was not like the sorrow that follows death. Perhaps some idea of what the truth actually was flashed across her; but she was a compassionate woman, and heart was full of kindness for the girl.

"You have lost your husband," she said, slowly, "and it has been a great trial to you, I am sure. You were married, I suppose, and had not time to get your mourning?"

A sudden, hot flush burned the fair face.

"I did not think of it," she said, humbly. "I was too much grieved even to remember it."

"I can easily believe that, for I know what trouble is," said Mrs. Carson, "but the rest of the world may not do the same. It is a cruel, hard world, seeing you so young with this dear little baby—hearing you call yourself a widow, without wearing widow's weeds—they would say uncharitable things of you.

"I never thought of it," she replied, briefly.

"I am glad I thought of it for you. Can you afford to buy good mourning? It would go so much in your favor."

"Yes—I have money," she said, slowly.

"Then, if you take my advice you will do that first thing. I should like you to do it before you go to my sister's, even. I will see that the baby is well taken care of, if you like to go now. All these curls must be put aside," and you must have a proper widow's cap."

The girl shrunk back, evidently not liking the idea. "How could she," she said to herself, "how could she act so falsely?"

Mrs. Carson noticed her hesitation.

"You, perhaps, think you are too young," she said, "for such a gloomy dress; but for the baby's sake you must wear it."

"I will go out at once," she said, "and see about it."

A few hours afterward, when she stood before the glass, she hardly knew herself; the beautiful, rippling golden hair was brushed back and hidden by the widow's cap, the beautiful, girlish figure was hidden by the heavy mourning dress. There was no resemblance between her and the bright, lovely girl whose brief span of happiness had been spent by the lake side.

"That is right," said Mrs. Carson; "you look ten years older at least. Baby is good as gold. Now, if you have money enough with you to pay for him, better to take him to Hampstead at once, then you will be at liberty to look out for something to do. If you can arrange that I shall think we have managed very creditably."

"I shall be grateful to you as long as ever I live," said Silvia. Then Mrs. Carson asked her name.

"You are so young," she said, "you look so friendless, so forlorn, it would be a hard heart indeed, that did not turn to you."

"I hope I shall find others as kind; but I hardly expect it."

"God is good, and the world is wide," said the landlady.

That same day Silvia went to Hampstead, and found Mrs. Tate, the landlady's sister, a kind, patient, motherly woman, one whose life had evidently been full of toil and care; she was even thankful for the employment, and promised to take good care of the child.

"I am fond of children," she said, "though I have had but little comfort with my own."

They agreed upon terms, and Silvia paid two months in advance.

"Whatever happens to me," she thought, "my little boy is provided for, for some time at least. It will be strange indeed if I do not find something to do, for my whole heart is bent upon work."

She little knew how many others had in the same way every capacity, every willingness to work, yet could not find work to do.

The next day Mrs. Rymer went to Hampstead and took the baby with her. What it cost that gentle heart to part with her child only Heaven knew.

CHAPTER XIII.

MRS. THORNTON'S FANCY.

"I am going to the agency office," said Silvia, when she returned from Hampstead. "I do not wish to lose a single hour."

Mrs. Carson laughed at her eagerness.

"That is right," she replied. "You will get on in the world if you show such energy. You must not mind disappoints you are sure to have plenty."

"I shall not let them oppress me," said Silvia.

"You will get a nice situation, I feel sure," said Mrs. Carson, looking at her approvingly. "You see, you have all the advantages of youth, while that widow's dress gives you a look of experience. You will have to give good references."

"References?" cried Silvia.

"Yes; that is easy enough. You simply refer some one or other who has known you at some part of your life. Some one who is very respectable, and whose name is a warantee for you."

"But," she said, growing pale and frightened, "I—I cannot; I have left my friends."

"Surely there is some person to whom you can write. You must think it over."

"I know a clergyman," she said doubtfully. "A good, religious gentleman."

"You could not do better," said Mrs Carson. "Ministers always carry great weight with them. I wish you God speed on your search."

Silvia went, and the kind hearted landlady watched her, as she walked down the narrow, gloomy street.

"Poor young creature," she said. "She has had a hard lot. Some one is to blame for it."

Something of the fortitude that contact of the world always brings came to Silvia Rymer; she felt nerved to meet and bear disappointment.

"That which I have gone through," she said to herself, "is so much worse than death, it seems as though nothing now had the power to hurt me."

She found the agency office. At first its size and extent somewhat dismayed her. She shrunk back half-timidly.

"I must be brave," she thought; "brave for my little baby's sake."

Just as she entered the door a carriage stopped there, and a young lady descended.

In some fashion or another, she half-stumbled as her feet touched the ground and would have fallen, but that Silvia ran forward to help her.

"Thank you," said the lady; "you have saved me from a very awkward fall."

Then she looked up into the sweet, pale face with a smile. When once she saw that face her eyes lingered there and did not leave it.

"I am going to the agency office," she said, "unless I am mistaken, you are going there too?"

Silvia answered, and the sound of her voice seemed to have some great charm for the lady's ear. They entered the spacious hall together, and were met by the suave proprietor, who bowed low as he looked at the lady's card.

"Mrs. Thornton," he said, with great empressement; "I am most delighted, most honored; pray walk this way, madam."

Then he turned to the girl by her side.

"Your name?" he said briefly.

"I wish to put my name down on your list," she said.

"An applicant? Will you go to the room on the right, there?"

"Pray stay one moment," said the clear, sweet voice of Mrs. Thornton. "I have taken a fancy to this young lady's appearance. You know what I am seeking for, Mr. Loader—a companion—a nice, lady-like, elegant girl, who would charm me as well as do what I want done."

"I quite understand," he replied, with another profound bow. "I have no doubt that we shall be able to meet Mrs. Thornton's requirements; our books are quite full."

Still the lady did not seem satisfied; she turned to Silvia.

"I am difficult to please," she said. "I am not like other people; I am nervous and sensitive. I might see twenty people, and not like any of them after all; but I have taken a fancy to this young lady, and I should like to know if she is seeking an engagement?"

"I am looking for a situation," replied Silvia.

"As a companion?" asked Mrs. Thornton.

"Either, as companion or nursery governess," was the reply.

"You are seeking a situation and I want a companion," said Mrs. Thornton. "It seems to me a fortunate thing that we have met each other. Will you allow me to see this lady, Mr. Loader?"

"Certainly, madam. I am delighted that you should be pleased. There are a few forms that the lady must comply with. Your name first," he added, turning to her.

"Silvia Rymer," she replied.

She answered every question in rotation. Then Mr. Loader led the way to a handsomely furnished room, and left the two ladies together.

"I have taken a fancy to you," said Mrs. Thornton; "I can hardly expect that you will do the same to me. Sit down and we can talk at our leisure."

Mrs. Thornton took a seat on a sofa, and Silvia sat down by her side; she threw back her veil, and Silvia looked in mute wonder at her. It was such a wonderful face—not beautiful, though she must have been pretty; it was pale, thin, and worn, full of suppressed eagerness and suppressed fire—a face almost terrible when one contrasted its youth and the pain written there.

"You are startled at me," she said; "every one seems so surprised when they look at me. I always notice keenly the face of a stranger when I meet them for the first time, and the result is always the same—they look startled. You did the same. Now, tell me why,—what is there in my face? Do not be afraid."

"I do not know how to tell you," replied Silvia. "You look eager, but as though you did not want any one to understand why."

"Do I—now do not be afraid of speaking the truth to me—do I look like a happy woman?"

Silvia looked at the worn, feverish face—the restless eyes—the trembling lips.

"No," she said, "indeed you do not."

Mrs Thornton laughed a laugh that was not pleasant.

"Now, how can that be, I wonder? I am young—you see that for yourself. I am rich; I have horses, carriages, servants, jewels, dresses in superabundance and a husband who adores me. Why should I not be happy? But that is not the business in question. I want a companion. Will you come and live with me?"

"Yes," replied Silvia, unhesitatingly, "that is, if you think I can be useful to you."

"I want some one to read to me, to sing to me, to talk to me, to amuse me when I am dull, to bear with me when unhappy—some one whose patience will not fail."

"I will do all I possibly can," she replied.

"Will you? I am so glad!" She looked pleased as a child. "I am sure you are the very lady I was looking for—so few people suit me. I was a spoiled child, and I have the habit of judging people by their faces. I like yours. I feel that I can be quite happy with you."

There was something so wistful and appealing in her manner that Silvia's heart was touched. She determined that she would do all that was possible for the lady, whose unhappiness was written so plainly in her face.

CHAPTER XIV.

A CHILDLESS WIFE.

"You look very young to be a widow," said Mrs. Thornton, with a compassionate glance at the sweet, white face; "very young indeed."

"I lived my life early," said Silvia, with a faint smile. "I loved and lost before most people have begun to love at all."

A far off, dreamy expression came into the bright eyes.

"Poor child—how different life is for all of us. I used to ask one boon from Heaven. I thought if I had that, earth would be Paradise. It was given to me—"

"It was given to me," she repeated, "and the fruit I had thought so tempting, so beautiful, so fair to see, turned to ashes in mouth."

Silvia looked at her in silent wonder.

"You think I am strange to say such things. So I am; it is my manner. When you hear me you must take no notice, I do not mean it. I am very happy. Why should I not be? Can you see any reason why I should not be happy?"

"No," replied Silvia, soothingly; "there is no reason."

There was silence for a time. Silvia broke it.

"I ought to explain to you, madam, that I am not quite alone. I have a little child—a beautiful little baby boy. But he is with the nurse in the country."

"You have a child!" said Mrs. Thornton; and in her eagerness her eyes grew so bright that she positively startled Silvia. "A child! a real, living child of your own to love! I never had one."

She rocked herself to and fro in a perfect agony of grief.

"I have never had a child, and I have prayed, oh! how I have prayed for one. You know what the Bible women of old suffered—you remember how Sarah longed for a son, and when one was given to her, it was like a gift from God? Then there was Elizabeth, even in her old age, a son was given to her; and though they were Bible women, I do not think they prayed more for the gift of a little child than I have done. I have fallen asleep with the prayer on my lips; I have prayed all night in my sleep, and I have woke making the same prayer."

"Heaven knows best," said Silvia, gently.

"I suppose so—they say so; I cannot tell. There seems to be always a fever on me—a dry, hot, burning fever; and I am sure if I could once hold a child of my own in my arms it would go away. I would build a church—you smile, but I am rich enough; I would endow a hospital; I would do anything if I might have a little child."

Before this great yearning sorrow, Silvia sat dumb. What comfort could she offer? what could avail before this great grief? She wondered if this was what preyed upon the unhappy lady, but she made no comment.

"My husband loves children," continued Mrs. Thornton, sadly; "some men do. The sight of a child is like a sunbeam to him. They say it is only good men who love children. Do you think that is true?"

"I believe it," said Silvia. "I think it is an invariable sign of a good, kind heart."

"So do I," said Mrs. Thornton, eagerly; "you are quite right there. How good my husband must be. He tells me children run to him, that every child who sees him loves him. Sometimes when he is out, and I ask him where he has been, he says—'To Lady Dainsiel's, her children are so fond of me,' or it may be to Mrs. Entingham's, whose little boy calls him uncle. Then I say nothing to him, not one word, but I cry until I think my heart will break."

Then she sat silent again for some minutes.

"You will let me see that little child of yours, Mrs Rymer?"

"Whenever you wish," said Silvia, gently. Then the lady placed her burning hand on the girl's arm.

"You must not think that you will be always miserable. If you will come to live with me I will see that you are happy. Now let us talk about business. It is six weeks since Mr. Thornton wished me to find a companion. I have been to so many places and could not see any one I liked, so that if you could come at once, I should be so glad."

"I can be with you to-day—or to-morrow," replied Silvia.

"Thank you; and now for terms. Let me tell you money is no object with me, and never was. I have more than I know what to do with. Should you think a hundred and fifty pounds per annum enough? It not, tell me what you would like, and you shall have it."

Silvia's heart gave one great bound. A hundred and fifty pounds—enough to clothe herself and bring up the baby "like a gentleman," as she phrased it her own mind.

"You are very kind," she said, "but I fear you will overpay me. That seems a large sum—"

Mrs Thornton laughed.

"You are worth more than that," she said, "just to sit and look at your face alone, is worth all the money put together. You will come to me to-morrow, then, Mrs. Rymer, at your own convenience. I am very fortunate to have found you. I must go, I have an engagement for this evening."

She held the girl's soft, white hand in hers.

"You will try to like me a little?" she said pleadingly.

"I am afraid," was the honest reply, "that I shall like you so much, I shall never care to leave you."

With those words they parted.

There was some arrangement made with Mr. Loader that seemed to please him very much, he bade Mrs Rymer good morning with great accession of respect—a lady whose face command such patronage must be worth cultivating.

Silvia Rymer returned home wondering at her own good fortune. It seemed hardly credible. Two days since, she had been forlorn, hopeless, and despairing, longing for death to relieve her from the problem of life; now the little one was well provided for, she herself had the prospect of a good home and income that surpassed all her expectations.

She did not forget to be grateful, she did not forget to thank God when she returned to her lodgings. Mrs. Carson was struck by the gleam of color in her face, and the lighter and happier look:

"You have good news," she said. "I can see it in your face."

"The best possible news," replied Silvia; and, then, seeing the kind landlady curious, she told her the whole story.

"I never heard anything like that," said Mrs. Carson, "never in all my life; it seems just as though Providence had done it on purpose."

Then, with more delicacy than

IT SHINES FOR ALL.

ORANGEVILLE, MAY 22, 1890.

SHAMEFULLY UNFAIR.

(From the Empire.)

THE Mowat Government have developed a perfect craze for garbled and unfair and misleading statements. Last session attention was drawn to the fact that under cover of official public documents the Minister of Education was sending out at the public ex parte defences relating to his educational blunders and wrongdoing. Another of these scandalous impositions is that of the reprinted report of the budget speech for 1890. It is the custom of budget speeches to be reprinted as public documents, but the pamphlet containing Muddler A. M. Ross' last speech is not only a report of the speech, but includes no less than ten large tabular statements which were never referred to in the speech, and some of which have no bearing whatsoever upon the matters dealt with by the Treasurer last session. These tabular statements are put there for campaign purposes. It is a most dishonest proceeding. It seems as if the Mowat Government have decided to make the taxpayers as a body pay for the cost of the election campaign, over and above the sum squeezed out of the public officials by the levy on their salaries. This grossly improper method of putting into circulation en masse statements under the guise of official impartiality is thoroughly characteristic of the Mowat regime. Take one of these tabular statements as an instance of the unfairness. A table of figures is given to show, professedly, the amount of benefit received by the counties through certain provincial expenditures. The intention is to create the idea that the municipalities have reaped great gain under the Mowat policy. Nothing is said of the grabbing of control over some of their affairs from the municipalities by the Government; nothing is said of the share of license money stolen from the municipalities; nothing is said of the Government's refusal to return the overplus of the registrars' fees; nothing is said of the municipalities of offices and the money to pay their insiders filched from the people. These omissions make the figures false and misleading. But false or true they have no business where they are at all, and it is a piece of impudence to palm off as part of the budget speech figures never breathed in the House, and never subject to opposition challenge.

What is the state of morality existing in a Government which thus authorizes the deliberate cooking of the public documents?

EDITORIAL NOTES

THE Dominion Parliament prorogued on Friday.

JOHN H. M'KAY, collector of customs at Pictou, N. S., died rather unexpectedly on Friday.

W. H. HAMMER, the Conservative member for Cardwell, has consented to contest that riding.

THE Governor-General will leave Ottawa today for Toronto to attend the races on the 23rd, 24th inst.

A CORRESPONDENT asks: "What has become of Dr. Garner?" Oh! he's only respited until 5 P. M. Thursday, June 5th; then a bailocution will take place.

IN all probability four Orangeville men will go before the convention at Shelburne on Tuesday next. They are—F. C. Stewart, W. L. Walsh, Dr. Henry and Dr. Lewis; any one of which would make a painstaking representative.

AT a convention of the members of the Dufferin Farmers' Institute, held at Shelburne yesterday afternoon, it was resolved to bring out a candidate in the interests of the agricultural class. Robt. Metlife, ex-M.P.P., was the choice of the assemblage. He will remain in the field.

THE most prominent Equal Rights men in this section are satisfied and in hearty accord with the platform built by Mr. Meredith, the talented leader of the Local Opposition. And why shouldn't they be? Canada is a free country and every person, class or creed shall enjoy equal privileges.

THE arguments in the St. George railway case are all in, and Judge Rose has decided to meet at ten o'clock on Wednesday, June 18, to proceed with the assessment of damages in each case before the same jury. This is the longest and most important jury trial ever held in Canada.

WE believe the good Grits of this riding intended to take advantage of the dissatisfaction which had crept into the Conservative camp. It is said they had arrangements made to hold a convention of the faithful at Shelburne on the 24th of May. Whether their ardor has been dampened by the Tories' action on Tuesday remains to be seen.

THE printers of Ottawa are objecting to the employment of machines to set type. Not seventy years ago the printers in London were threatening to destroy the London Times office because they objected to the employment of machines to print papers. The printers of 1890 think the printers of 1814 were fools. The printers of 1914 will probably pass some like verdict on the printers of 1890.

THE Ontario Bureau of Industries is out with a moderately favorable report on the agriculture of the province on the 1st of May. Live stock came through the winter in good condition, and fodder is plenty; the fruitbloom season has been exceptionally good. The condition of grain, however, is very irregular, and everything depends on subsequent weather. It is altogether too early to indulge in predictions.

FOR the past three weeks THE SUN has maintained that the holding of the Dufferin Conservative convention in Orangeville was a mistake. When the delegates met on Tuesday the majority of them thought the same, and changed the place of meeting to Shelburne. The result is that perfect harmony prevails in the Conservative ranks to-day, and a supporter of Mr. Meredith will be returned for Dufferin on the 5th of June.

AN inspector representing the Canadian Underwriters' Association paid Orangeville a visit last week, and reported very unfavorably regarding our system of fire protection. The old-fashioned hose reel and the hook and ladder wagon were made the subject of the inspector's wrath. With reference to the latter, he reported it was "the most antiquated specimen he had seen in all his travels;" and if the town doesn't procure modern appliances it will be reduced to a lower class!

DURING the nine months ending March 31 the number of eggs imported into the United States was 10,373,162 dozen. Supposing they all went from Canada, and suppose the 5 cent duty, if put in force, prevents eggs being exported from Canada to the United States. Then Canadians will have to eat in nine months 10,000,000 eggs more than they now eat. Each Canadian will have to eat, more than he now eats, twenty four eggs every 270 days. In other words, every Canadian will have to eat an extra egg every eleven days. Won't that be awful?

THOSE who are trying to make out that the country is going to the dogs will find some difficulty so squaring their statements with the railway statistics laid before Parliament a few days ago. There are now 12,628 miles of railway in operation in the Dominion, of which 806 miles were constructed last year. The total capital invested paid up is set down at $766,576,446, and the total earnings last year were $42,149,615, while the expense amounted to $31,938,945. The railway business of a country is regarded as furnishing a pretty fair index of its progress and prosperity. Thus regarded, the figures quoted are very gratifying.

GRAND VALLEY.

Grand Valley will celebrate Dominion day.

Mr John McIntyre is proceeding with the erection of a new dwelling on the Nodwell survey.

Rev H. Crozier attended the Synod of the Presbyterian church, which met at Orillia last week.

Philips' new saw mill commenced operations last week. A good supply of logs are in and the mill will run all summer.

On Friday last, says the Star, some of the finest cattle that have been raised in this part of the province were to be seen in the village. The animals were purchased by Mr Alex Cotton, of Garafraxa, who intended shipping them to the old country. A bull weighing 2,350 lbs., and a two year old steer weighing 1,950 lbs., were purchased from Mr Wm. Gier, of Amaranth, at 5 cents per lb. Amongst the car load of fine cattle was an ox weighing somewhere near 2,200 lbs. Who says the country around Grand Valley is behind in its live stock productions?

MELANCTHON STATION.

Well, I suppose we must try and gather up some news—but bless us! there is none, yet for all that the earth goes round, and time goes past, and eternity is drawing nearer. And if THE SUN don't shine, whose fault is it? the answer is, its cors and editor. For certain if we don't contribute something, we may say the earth will discontinue its revolutions.

Politics is the topic of conversation.

Mr. Green, of Collingwood, is visiting at his brother-in-law's, Mr. J. Thomas.

Miss Atcheson, of Orcheston, formerly of Orangeville, was visiting at Mr R. Twibles last week.

Many of the folks in this vicinity have a second attack of la grippe, but not as severe as the first one.

Mr George Sawden, of Honeywood, spent last Sabbath with friends here. George looks hale and hearty.

Seeding is well advanced, considering the cold, wet weather. Some are through while an occasional one have some low wet piece to sow yet.

Mr John Fergo and family left here the latter part of April for Toronto, returned home and reports times dull in the city—but has since went thither and we are informed, found employment.

I notice your Melville, and Cardwell cors. are disputing about which have the best looking girls but they want to come to Melancthon if they want to see good looking specimens of the female sex.

Much regret is expressed at the death of Mrs. James Slack, daughter of Mr. Thomas Hunter of this place, which took place on Friday night the 9th inst., after a few hours illness. The remains were interred here on Sunday afternoon. A large number were present at the funeral. The Rev. J. F. Durkey preached the funeral sermon. The sorrowing friends have the sympathy of the entire community.

WHAT WE WANT.

A good, general store to do a good trade here.

A true, energetic man to erect a grain elevator here where there is a large amount of grain grown.

A "Whitecap" society organized, to make the lazy people of our village work.

A spell of fine warm weather.

[Too late for last week.]

Two pronounced cases of leprosy are reported in the Chinese colony of Chicago.

For Constipation, Sick or Bilious Headache, use Dr. Carson's Pillets, or Antibilious Granules. Purely Vegetable and positively harmless. Sold by druggists.

DUFFERIN TORIES!

The Convention Changed to Shelburne

For Tuesday, the 20th—A Wise Move Under the Circumstances—Delegates from Shelburne, Mulmuthon, and Mulmur Did not Materialize, But Every Other Polling Division Represented—F. C. Stewart and Rich. Allen Nominated Before the Meeting Adjourned—Peace and Harmony Restored—Officers Elected, Etc.

Seventy three delegates from Orangeville, Mono, Amaranth, and East Garafraxa and East Luther attended the convention held in the town hall here on Tuesday afternoon. Shelburne, Mulmur and Melanethon were dissatisfied with President Foster's action in calling the convention for Orangeville, and not a solitary delegate came from those sections.

President Joseph Foster took the chair at two o'clock. He said the reason the convention had heretofore been held at Shelburne was that a Shelburne man had always been president of the association, but when he was elected he said he would hold the next convention at Orangeville. He announced the election of officers as the next business. Messrs. W. H. Hunter, Richard Allen, W. B. Jelly and John Gillespie were nominated for the presidency. None of the gentlemen seemed to hanker for the office, but the delegates unanimously voted Mr. Hunter into the presidential chair. The officials for the year are:

|---|---|
| W. H. Hunter | President |
| R. Wansbrough | Vice President |
| H. Carson | Secretary |
| Thos. Haskett | Treasurer |
| J. S. Leighton | Vice President for Orangeville. |
| W. B. Jelly | Amaranth |
| W. J. Wilson | Mono |
| R. Donaldson | E. Garafraxa |
| R. Gallaugher | Mulmur |
| Wm. Rayburn | E. Luther |

After the election officers, a vote of thanks was tendered the late president, who said he tried to fill the position to the best of his ability.

At this juncture Reeve Hamilton, of East Garafraxa, seconded by Treasurer Brown, of Amaranth, nominated Mr. F. C. Stewart as the convention's choice. The Mr D. J. Mungovan, seconded by Dr. Henry, nominated Reeve Allen, of Mono. Mr. Allen caught the president's eye and said he thought a mistake had been made in calling the convention for Orangeville. He therefore moved, seconded by Reeve Wansbrough, "that this meeting adjourn to meet at Shelburne at 12.30 on Tuesday, the 27th. Dr Barr, Dr. Lewis, W. R. Scott, T. H. Hamilton, Jas. Snell, W. L. Walsh, D. J. Mungovan, and others spoke for and against the motion. The majority seemed to favor the motion, and when it came to a vote nearly all the delegates supported it, which accordingly carried.

W. J. Sproul, president of the Dufferin Farmers' Institute, addressed the assembly and advised them to pick out a farmer for their representative.

During the meeting Dr. Henry, seconded by J. S. Leighton, moved the following resolution, which carried:—"That this convention the delegates of which represent the several townships, towns and villages in this county of Dufferin, take this early opportunity to express their sympathy with and concurrence in the principles of the Equal Rights Association; and farther our pleasure that Mr. Meredith, the able leader of the Opposition, has assumed those principles and made it a prominent plank in his platform, upon which he appeals to this province with confidence for a loyal and patriotic support."

The convention will, therefore, be held in the town hall, Shelburne, at 12.30 o'clock on Tuesday next the 27th.

SHELBURNE.

Mr. and Mrs. Colwell Graham are moving into town this week. They will take up their residence in Mr. R. McKay's brick house, north side of Main street, near the R. R. station.

A third fishing club has been organized with the following members:—W. Robertson, Wm. Jelly, John Large, A. Smith, J. F. Miller, F. H. Silk, J. J. Marshall, and W. L. Smith. Mr. Shepherd's pond north of Primrose has been leased for a term of years. Trespassers will be prosecuted.

On Tuesday last Mr. J. J. Hall, who lives a short distance east of Shelburne, received 100 German carp fry, which he will place in an artificial lake prepared by him for their reception. This is an experiment in which we hope Mr. Hall will be successful. Carp have been cultivated in England for over 300 years and they have now become the leading fish of the United States.

Five thousand speckled trout fry arrived at Shelburne Tuesday morning for the Shelburne Angling Club, and were forwith conveyed to Mulmur Lake and deposited therein. They were procured from the government fish hatchery at Newcastle. It is expected there will be grand fishing at Mulmur Lake in a few years. Indeed the fishing is good there now.

The Quarterly Official Board of the Horning's Mills Methodist circuit at their meeting yesterday, presented Rev. J. Goodman, their pastor, with a printed address handsomely framed, recognising the valuable services rendered by the reverend gentleman and his estimable wife during the past three years. The best wishes of the whole community will follow them to their new field of labor.—Economist.

A Boon to Mankind.

The quickest, surest and best remedy for rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, sore throat, soreness and lameness, is Hagyard's Yellow Oil. It quickly cures sprains, bruises, burns, frostbites, chilblains, etc. For croup, colds, quinsy, etc., take 10 to 20 drops on sugar, and apply the oil externally also, when immediate relief will result.

CREDIT FORKS.

Mr. John Cuss is very ill at present.

The two Ingram brothers are home waiting for mind railroading to turn up.

The first car of cedar was hauled through the Credit Forks bridge on Saturday last.

Mr. K. Chisholm, sold one of his houses in Brimstone Point, to Mr. W. Lowe, for $280.

McLaren, Bill, is on the war-path. It is expected that he will "write a certain quarrysman up" this week, but not in way he need to do.

Messrs. Deal and Bucklen have taken J. Backus' quarry to run. It will soon be run in a different manner from that it was in the past.

Andy Thompson while running a circular saw in the Inglewood planing mill had the thumb of his right hand nearly severed on Wednesday.

One of the miners got his head pretty badly out one day last week, by a fellow accidently throwing some rock on him.

Inglewood, with a population of about one hundred and fifty, has a resident doctor, while we, with a population of about nine hundred, are without such a luxury.

It is reported, that a young business man of Belfountain went to Orangeville, last evening in the custody of Tom Smith and a young lady. Tom went to see that the "Kind" was properly fixed.

The Adjala Quarry Co. are likely to get into trouble over the dumping of sand and rock from the "big hill," as large pieces of stone, find their way across the Dominion road. It is almost certain some of the children going to school will get caught by these flying missiles and hurt. [Too late for last week.]

It was very cold here Saturday.

Price & Backus have started another new quarry.

We are glad to see Mrs. Wm. Thom around again.

Mrs. B. Freels is lying very sick at her residence here.

Mrs. Linfoot, of Toronto, was visiting friends here last week.

Three families of Indians left here last Saturday for Detroit.

Miss Minnie Regan, of Brampton, is visiting friends at Cataract.

Mrs. Wm. Roddick and family are visiting friends near Owen Sound.

Mrs. John Kelly, of Cataract, is slowly recovering from her late illness.

Mr. Chas. Brock, a quarryman, had his hand badly lacerated last Friday.

Mr. F. Church, of Cataract, succeeded in capturing a live fox last Sunday.

A young lad near Belfountain killed a very large fox with a stone last Saturday.

A box car on the C. P. R. at Cataract was derailed and slightly damaged on Tuesday.

McLaren was too busy last week organizing a "two weeks' pay system," to write correspondence for newspapers.

A landslide occurred in the quarry, back of the C. P. R. station last week, entirely closing up the mouth of the mine.

A party of fishermen from Toronto arrived here Saturday but on account of the cold very few speckled beauties were caught.

Our produce market: butter 28c. per lb, eggs 12½c. per doz., dried pork, 13c. per lb; beef, 10c per lb; potatoes, 65c. per bag, but there is a scarcity of this article.

Mr. K. Chisholm, the present member for Peel, held a large and influential meeting in the school house Tuesday evening. Bets are $10 to $1 re Mr. Chisholm's favor.

The filling in of the trestle and the mining operations ought to attract a large number of pic nicers our way this summer, as we are certain no other place can supply as fine attractions.

The social hop at St. Croix's on Tuesday night was a brilliant affair. Mr. A. Hunter supplied the violin music while Miss Charlotte Jacobs, our accomplished young squaw, gave several selections on the accordion.

The school children had a holiday Monday. The school house was in such a filthy state after the workingmens' smoking and chewing meeting held Saturday night, that it was not fit for the children to sit in.

A freight train on the G. T. R. ran into a gang of section men on a bridge between Inglewood and Cardwell Junction, Thursday last. The breaking of the hand car and the scattering of tools was all the damage done.

Mr Geo. Herbert, who has been agent here since the road first opened, is about to take a trip to Europe to the place of his birth, for the good of his health. It will be hard to find another agent to remain as long as he has, and have so many warm friends. Bon voyage.

Jas. L. Hughes, the Equal Rights candidate for Peel, was to have held a meeting here last Saturday evening. About a dozen voters came out to hear him, but Mr. Hughes thought the crowd too small to waste his eloquence on, so he adjourned the meeting indefinitely.

The Idea of March,

"LAST March mother caught a severe cold, terminating in a very bad cough. Everything we could hear of was tried without avail. Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam was at last recommended and procured. The first dose relieved, and one bottle entirely cured her."

MRS E. A. STARNAMAN, Hespler, Ont.

The residence of Dr. Norman was destroyed by fire at Wiarton on Saturday.

Dyspepsia causes depraved blood, which, in time, affects every organ and function of the body. As a remedy for these troubles, nothing can approach Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It vitalizes the blood, strengthens the stomach, and corrects all disorders of the liver and kidneys.

A. & W. JOHNSTON,

Successors to H. E. Reid & Co.

HAVING purchased the stock of the late H. E. REID & CO., it is our intention to remove to the corner now occupied by our Hardware Store, and it is necessary to reduce the stock preparatory to moving. In order to do this, we have made a general reduction in all lines, everything having been marked down to slaughter prices. The stock is replete with all the latest novelties.

Below we quote a few few of the bona fide bargains we intend offering:

PRINTS.—We start a line of Washers at 7c. per yard.
A nice assortment Light Colors at 8c., regular price 10c.
" " Dark " " 10c., " " 12½c.
Scotch Zephyrs ..... " 7½c., " " 8c.

Dress Goods—All Dress Goods reduced 25 per cent..

Tweed.—We offer $1.00 Tweed for 75c., 75c for 50c., 50c. for 40c.

Cottonades & Shirtings reduced in proportion.

READY-MADE CLOTHING.

We lead the Town in Ready-Mades, both Men's and Boys. Our stock is elegant order, having a full assortment sizes, thus affording customers a rare opportunity to procure a Spring Outfit at a very low figure. We make a specialty of BOYS' CLOTHING, and keep a large range to select from. We guarantee to suit you in Price, Fit and Quality.

MILLINERY DEPARTMENT.

This stock is all new, having been bought within the last month, we have already taken the lead in this department and we still hope to maintain it, if Low Prices, Stylish Goods and Courteous Manliners will do it. We are sure of success.

BOOTS & SHOES.—We have our stock well assorted and are bound to please in style and price.

GROCERY DEPARTMENT.

We have a choice stock of Fresh Groceries. Town orders delivered daily. We will add that we intend to keep the entire stock well assorted in every department, and our customers may always rely on being suited.

We hope that by strict attention to business and fair dealing to retain the patronage of the late H. E. Reid & Co.

We are, yours truly,

A. & W. JOHNSTON.

Mr. R. W. Medley, real estate agent of this town, will start in a few days on an annual trip to the lower townships to bid purchasers for farm property in this section.

LOST.—About eight weeks ago, a liatch terrier dog, answering to the name of "Spider." Any person giving such information as will lead to his recovery, or bringing him to THE SUN office will be suitably rewarded.

PROHIBITION LECTURE.—Mrs. de Gif, a prominent lawyer of Topeka, Kansas, will lecture, under the auspices of the Orangeville W. C. T. U., in St. Andrew's church at 3.30 o'clock on Sunday afternoon. She will also lecture in the Methodist church in the evening.

PERSON ARRESTED.—Alfred Pearson, an auctioneer who was with the hobbies here last winter, was arrested at Brantford last Thursday evening on a charge of obtaining $21 overcoat from Mr. Thomas merchant. This same Pearson is a slippery one, he having beaten an Orangeville merchant out of a $35 suit of clothes.

A WILD CAT SHOT.—Mr. Wilson, of the first line, Caledon east, above Edmonton, was in town this week with the carcass of a lynx which he left with the town caretaker, to be mounted. Mr. Wilson shot the wild cat in the bush on his farm. It is a long time since one of these animals has been captured in Peel. This specimen was fully 5 feet in length.—Brampton Banner.

A TRUTHFUL EDITOR.—The editor of the Harriston Tribune evidently be gives in a future state, and follows the noble example set by the great George Washington. When tempted to tell a lie, the honest editor replied—"Sandy Irvine approached us the other day and offered us a liberal sum if we would say that he had caught six dozen trout on Tuesday last. Money can not buy us to tell a wilful lie."

SUCH IS LIFE.—When a man gets mad at something he sees in a paper, he cuts the editor names and loses no time in telling him to "Stop My Paper." It stops but the earth continues to revolve, the moon gets "full" and the continues to set heretofore freezing with the slippery side on deck, and regularly every week the goat who wanted his paper "stopped" sneaks into his neighbors to see what it says this week. Such is life.

QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY ENTERTAINMENT.—The congregation of St George's church, west Mono, will celebrate the Queen's birthday by giving a grand garden party at the residence of Mr Charles Scott, lot, 5, second line east. Mr Will Burton, the famous comic singer of Clarksville, has been engaged, who, with other first class musicians, will make an excellent musical programme; and addresses will be delivered by Revs Henderson, Swallow, Watt, Sendemore and others. Proceedings commence at 6 p.m. sharp, tea served from 5 to 7.

A DISGRACE.—From early morn till dewy shades of evening on Tuesday the citizens and pedestrians on Second street, between Broadway and First avenue, were treated to a first class nuisance. A nightman had been cleaning out some vault, and when on Second street his wagon broke down, leaving a line of offensive-smelling matter on the road. Chief Shields ordered the offender to remove the nuisance, but that individual used only some disinfectant and the cause of trouble remained there all day. We hope never to see a repetition of this in town.

SHOULD BE ATTENDED TO.—Both town and county councils should unite and take action in the matter of repairing the high school building. One of the walls is badly cracked, and, if something is not done soon, it will collapse; the ventilation is also very defective. This is one of Dufferin's most prominent institutions, and it would be too bad to let it go to ruin for the sake of few repairs to the building. The summer vacation is near at hand, and both councils should do their utmost to keep up the reputation of such an excellent institution.

CONTEMPTIBLE WORK.—On Tuesday night last a villanious outrage was perpetrated on the horses belonging to Sam Lawrence. The animals were in the stable as usual, being about one hundred yards from the house. During the darkness the human image entered the stable, cutting the throat and windpipe of the 4 year old colt, and almost severing the tail from the body of the mare. The harness was also badly cut up. The party who would be guilty of such a horrible outrage should be hung at once, as his room would be better than his company.—Alliston Herald.

A BURGLAR'S SWAG.—While Mr. R. R. Westrop, an east Broadway baker, and family were at church on Sunday night, the busy burglar or burglars were quietly making away with four hundred dollars ($400.00) that belonged to him. Mr. Westrop had the money—all in bills—in a cash box in a bureau drawer up stairs. The thief entered by a cellar window and lost no time in getting away with his swag. The victim of this extensive robbery had a large note to meet next day, but could not do so for the above reasons. The case is now in the hands of the police, who, we hope, will bring the culprit to speedy justice.

THE BUSTED BANK.—The latest developments, says the Arthur Enterprise, in the Lillico affair is the serving of papers upon Messrs. Blair and Buschlen, the two heaviest creditors, for $15000 damages for injury sustained by Mr. P. Lillico through the action of the defendants in getting out injunctions against him. What the result of this new move will be cannot be foretold; one result, however, is unavoidable, more costs and more lawyers' fees. The creditors of Mr. P. Lillico held a meeting at the Commercial hotel, on Saturday afternoon. We have not heard the result, or what the object was. Meanwhile, Sheriff McKim has his lock on the door of the late bank. The mills of the law grind slowly, but they grind exceedingly small.

FREE TO OUR LADY READERS.—The Canadian Queen is now having its annual free distribution of choice imported flower seeds, a large package containing an immense number of rarest varieties, together with The Queen on trial for three months will be sent free to each of our reader, forwarding her address and only 13 2c. stamps to cover actual expense. Five trial subscriptions and five packages by mail or express, (free of expense) to same address in Canada or U. S., for only $1.00. The Queen is one of the finest illustrated ladies' magazines on this continent, it is devoted to Fashion, Art, Literature, Flowers, the Toilet, Household Matters, and contains the Latest Imported Designs for Fancy Work and Home Decoration. The Seed Distribution for 1890 continues for this month only. No lover of beautiful flowers can afford to miss it. Address The Canadian Queen, Toronto, Canada.

DOLLY BLAIN CAUGHT AT LAST.—The handsome Dolly Blain who visited Brampton last December and won the admiration and confidence of so many of our citizens, has at last been brought to justice. It will be remembered that she moved in the highest circles while staying here, and her false character was not discovered until she borrowed a set of furs from her hostess and decamped. She continued her little game right along passed herself off as the daughter of Rev C. C. Johnson, and lately fooled the Rev. Dr. Cochrane, Brantford, with a feasible story into loaning her $10 to go to New York to get two names she had under her charge. At Hamilton she played upon the confidence of Miss Stiff whom she engaged as nurse to a sick barrister at Port Dalhousie, getting money of course from each one. The police have been on her track and brought her street to a temporary halt at Brantford on Thursday where she was tried and sentenced to two months' imprisonment. Constable England has interviewed her and at the expiration of the two months will bring her to Brampton to recruit her health in our cooler. Rumor had it that Dolly was engaged to a certain doctor in town. It won't come off now.—Brampton Times.

CROOKS CAPTURED.—Yesterday morning two strangers, well dressed young men, were seen promenading the streets of the town. They had "lots" of money and appeared to be laying themselves out for a jamboree. They walked up and down Broadway a few times, carefully taking stock of the stores and J. S. Feal's banking establishment. When opposite the latter place one of them walked inside to get a bill changed, while the other kept an eagle eye on the safe near the door. They also visited the hardware stores. A. G. McKenney's was the first place they called at. They looked at and priced several revolvers, and finally asked to be shown some steel drills, which didn't seem to come up to their opinion as a first class article. They then went across the street to A. & W. Johnston's, but couldn't get any to suit. Next place tried was Young Bros., where they made a purchase and went off. The two suspects then proceeded to Irwin & Hewson's blacksmith shop and ordered a punch, which they paid for and left the shop. In the meantime Chief of Police Shields received a telegram from the Alliston police to the effect that a safe had been blown at that town, and gave a description of the supposed robbers. The description tallied exactly with the two strangers who had been "doing" Orangeville. Chief Shields looked for the men, and found them at the C.P.R. station. He arrested them and now they are safely behind the bars in "Castle" Sutherland. Harry Howard and Geo. Smith were the names given by them. Had not the telegram come, some of our citizens would undoubtedly be a little poorer this morning. The strangest part of the episode took place when they arrived at the jail. They were carefully searched, but not a cent could be found, and only a small amount of American currency was in their possession. Chief Rogers, of Alliston, is expected here this morning. He will convey the suspected crooks back to Alliston to-day.

Prof. Loisette's Memory System is creating greater interest than ever in all parts of the country, and persons wishing to improve their memory should send for his prospectus free as advertised in another column.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Monday Night's Proceedings—A Batch of By-Laws Rushed Through.

When THE SUN's representative arrived at the council chamber at 7.30 o'clock on Monday night he was surprised to find only two councillors assembled; and they were talking about the efficiency of Ald. Ketchum's dog by-law. Scarcely two minutes elapsed when Mayor Walsh and four other councillors came in, which formed the essential quorum.

The clerk read the minutes of the last regular and several special meetings, which were adopted.

The mayor had just been congratulating himself and the council that no were to be dealt with, when one was handed in from Wm. Harkies, $4.00, which was referred to the F. & W. committee.

ACCOUNTS

COMMUNICATIONS.

Clerk Hughson informed the council that a favorable decision had been rendered by the division court in the town v. Parsons.

Dr. Henry, medical health officer, called the attention of the council to the disgraceful condition of the north Broadway lane. The matter was referred to the R. & B. committee, with power to have the work done.

A nursery firm communicated to the mayor, asking that gentleman to find an agent to sell the firm's goods. No action.

A letter from a Hamilton sewer pipe company was referred to the R. & B.

The mayor informed the council that 145 dog tags had been sold up to date.

REPORTS.

Ald. Bailey read the R. & B. report, which recommended that an account be referred to the Cemetery committee, having come to the R. & B. in mistake. Adopted.

BY LAWS.

The usual batch of by-laws relating to the Broadway drains, the management of the fire brigade, the regulating of exhibitions and shows, providing for the good government of the town, highways and sidewalks were introduced by Messrs Endacott, Gillespie, Green, Ketchum and Youmans, and read a first and second time. The council went into committee of the whole on the by-laws, which received their third readings and passed.

MOTIONS.

Reeve Lindsay moved that the court of revision be held on the 10th of June. The motion carried.

A change will be made in the council chamber. At present the mayor's desk is in the south end of the chamber, running parallel with Broadway. It is now proposed to move the throne to the east end of the room, and shorten somewhat the "green table. The matter is in the hands of the Property committee.

The weigh scales have not been indicating the true weight for some time past, although they were tested and regulated by the proper authorities a short time ago. If a man buys a ton of hay he will pay for 2020 lbs. They will be set right as soon as possible.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. J. West, of Toronto, is visiting friends in town.

Mr Ira Inglehart, of Inglehart Bros. left last evening on a visit to his home at Palermo.

Editor Mortimer, of the Shelburne Free Press, favored us with a fraternal call on Tuesday.

Mr. Chas. Hessey, of the Ontario College of Pharmacy, Toronto, is spending a few days in town.

Col. Tyrwhitt, of Simcoe, was in town yesterday. He is getting everything in readiness for the 36th Batallion to go to camp in June.

Miss Kate McKim, who has acted as clerk at the registry office here for several years past, left town on Friday evening for her home at Guelph.

WHAT WE MAY EXPECT.

Meredith our next premier.

Mowat to take his grip and walk.

Dr. Lewis to deliver a great speech at Shelburne on Tuesday.

To see no more tagless cars on our streets.

The high school building to be properly repaired.

The Shelburne, Mulmer and Melanchton Conservatives to fall into line.

The Underwriter inspector's report to make the council do something with our waterworks.

Dr. Gaviller's selfconceit to vanish after the elections.

Inebriated youths to give Broadway and the nightwatchman a wide berth.

The Reformers to give up the notion of presenting Dufferin to Mr. Mowat, for a time, at least.

COURT OF REVISION.

Municipality of Mono

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby that the Municipal Council of the Township of Mono will hold its first sittings for the revision of the Assessment Roll for the year 1890, at Mono Centre, on

Friday, the 30th day of May,

At the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon. Every person interested are requested to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

ANDREW HENRY,
Township Clerk.

Dated the 12th day of May, 1890.

IF YOU WANT the very best value in Groceries go to MacAdam's.

DO YOU USE a cheap tea, we mean a 25 cent Japan or Young Hyson Tea, if you do MacAdam has the best value we ever saw for that money.

DID I HEAR you say you wanted a Dinner Set, then straight you go to MacAdam's, headquarters for everything in that line in this town. They have just opened out some new ones and Harry is just dying to show them.

OF COURSE if you want anything in Wines or Liquors, Ale or Porter, MacAdam's is where you get them pure. Nothing else kept in stock, and Tinn, the boy who knows all about them, will give you just what you want without a mistake.

HORSE NOTES.

SOME OF THE GREAT HORSES THAT ARE ON THE ROAD.

The following is a list of some of the great horses that are travelling in this district this season:—

SATURDAY, he will proceed to Edward Brimson's, 1st line, Albion, for noon; thence to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

ALEXANDER QUARTO.—John Gilkinson & Son A. are proprietors of four of the best stallions in Canada. Czarb No 1 is a recently imported heavy draught, and is the genuine stamp of a horse of the first water. His pedigree would take up too much space here, and we will have to refer the reader to his route bills for particulars. The Bruce still owns that famous coal black trotter, Dictator, which took first prizes all over the country. The great Irish Thoroughbreds, Antrim and Pangbourne, have recently been added to this stable. Dictator and Antrim will make the season as follows:

MONDAY, they will leave their own stable, Queensville Hotel, Orangeville, and proceed to the Royal Hotel, Mono Mills, for noon; thence Gallowhill's Hotel, Mackley, for night.

Constipation

Demands prompt treatment. The results of neglect may be serious. Avoid all harsh and drastic purgatives, the tendency of which is to weaken the bowels. The best remedy is Ayer's Pills. Being purely vegetable, their action is prompt and their effect always beneficial. They are an admirable Liver and After-dinner pill, and everywhere endorsed by the profession.

"Ayer's Pills are highly and universally spoken of by the people about here. I make daily use of them in my practice."—Dr. I. E. Fowler, Bridgeport, Conn.

"I can recommend Ayer's Pills above all others, having long proved their value as a cathartic for myself and family."—J. T. Hess, Leithsville, Pa.

"For several years Ayer's Pills have been used in my family. We find them an

Effective Remedy

for constipation and indigestion, and never without them in the house."—Moses Ormsler, Lowell, Mass.

"I have used Ayer's Pills, for liver troubles and indigestion, during many years, and have always found them prompt and efficient in their action."—L. N. Beaty, Cedar, R. I.

"I suffered from constipation which quickly yielded on discovering from that I learned it would cause a discharge of the bowels. Two boxes of Ayer's Pills effected a complete cure."—D. Burks, Stony, Md.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for the past thirty years and consider them an invaluable family medicine. I know of no better remedy for liver troubles, and have always found them a prompt cure for dyspepsia."—James Quinn, 90 Middle st., Hartford, Conn.

"Having been troubled with costiveness, which seems inevitable with persons of sedentary habits, I have tried Ayer's Pills, hoping for relief. I am glad to say that they have served me better than any other medicine. I arrive at this conclusion only after a faithful trial of their merits."—Samuel F. Adams, Oak st., Boston, Mass.

A DANGER SIGNAL!

A Cold in the Head may be aptly termed a danger signal warning you that if neglected that dangerous and disagreeable disease, Catarrh, is sure to follow, perhaps leading to Consumption and the grave. At no season of the year is Cold in the Head more prevalent than during the Spring months and at no other season do the people of this country suffer more generally from Catarrh, with all its disagreeable and annoying effects. Do not for an instant neglect either of these troubles, but apply NASAL BALM, the only remedy that will give instant relief and effect a thorough cure. The following testimonials from among thousands in our possession bear witness to its sterling merit.

Alex. Burns, Sudbury, Ont., says: I may state that I have been affected with Catarrh seven or eight years, and it was attended by consequent symptoms such as foul breath, constant dropping into the throat, hawking and spitting, partial deafness, ringing in the ears and sickening pains in the head directly over either eye. I have used powders and douches, but all to no effect, the only result arising from the use of such was temporary relief, followed by the usual symtoms in a more aggravated form. The results arising from the use of Nasal Balm. Sweet breath, stoppage of the droppings into the throat, (consequently less hawking and spitting), clearness of hearing, and not once since I began its use have I had pain in the head. In fact, it is my opinion that a careful and persistent use of the Balm will effect a cure in the worst case of catarrh.

T. D. D. Loyd, 8 Clarence street, Toronto says: I wish here to testify to the unequalled healing powers of your Nasal Balm. I have been troubled for three years by what the doctors call post nasal catarrh, and have tried everything in the city that could be obtained, in the shape of catarrh cures, and found no permanent relief from any of them, till a friend one day advised me to try your Nasal Balm, and I find that even one bottle has done me more good than all the medicines put together that I have persecuted myself with before. I was very much troubled with spitting and hawking especially in the morning, so much so that my throat was continually in a raw condition, but I am now beginning to know what it is to be able to speak freely. I shal not fail to recommend it to any of my friends suffering from the like disease.

NASAL BALM

INSTANTLY RELIEVES

Cold in Head.

A. W. Mallory, Mallorytown, Ont., says My daughter suffered for years from a most distressing and annoying Catarrh. Her case was under the treatment of eminent physicians in the United States and Canada. Two months use of Nasal Balm has had more beneficial effects than all former treatment combined.

L. D. Dion, Dept Railways and Canals, Ottawa, says: I am very glad to give you to-day the testimony that Nasal Balm has completely cured my catarrh, from which I suffered for nearly three years.

NASAL BALM

POSITIVELY CURES

CATARRH.

D. Derbyshire, Mayor of Brockville and President of the Ontario Creamery Association, says: Nasal Balm heats the world for Catarrh and Cold in the Head. In my own case it effected relief from the first application.

Isaac Waterman, Imperial Oil Co'y, Petrolia, Ont., says: Nasal Balm gave me the most perfect satisfaction of any medicine I ever used for Cold in the Head. It is easy to use, quick in giving relief and effect a complete cure in a couple of hours.

If Nasal Balm is not kept in stock by your dealer it will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 Cent for small and $1 for large size bottles) by addressing would have expected, she began to make enquiries about Silvia's wardrobe.

"Not from curiosity, my dear," she said, "but because I know the world. You brought no luggage here with you."

"I have none," said Silvia, with a faint sigh. "All my worldly possessions are in that little bag."

"Then you must buy two boxes at least, even if at first you put but little into them. You do not know what a cold judging world it is. If you had gone to that house without boxes, there is not a servant in it that would not have despised you, and looked down upon you. You have a great deal to learn."

"I never thought of that," said Silvia simply.

"No; why should you? It takes many a long year to understand the world and its queer ways."

Silvia sighed as she thought how ignorant she had been; how little real knowledge she had shown of life, how easily she had been misled.

"If you would not mind," said Mrs Carson, "I should be very glad to advance you a little money. You can pay me when you get your own."

The delicate face flushed.

"You are very kind, indeed," she said; "but I do not think I shall need it. I have a few pounds left. If I want money I will come to you at once."

The rest of the day was spent in making preparations. It was the most fortunate thing that could have happened her—plenty of employment. If she had had no work to do, no preparations to make, nothing to engross her thoughts and attention, she would have died, and this story would never have been written.

It was the opening of a new life to her. Once, when her sorrow first came to her, she had thought of going home to her mother, but when she remembered all the shame of the story she had to tell, comments of her friends, she could not bear it. Her mother—good, kind, generous, really religious, who held all sin, all falling off from virtue as something too terrible even to mention—what would she think of such a story?

Better let her mother think her dead. She knew what become of her. Better [illegible] than to see her [illegible] shame. She [illegible] at the green [illegible]

NEVER MORE.

Far away from the world her heart throbs are sleeping,
Over field, over mountain, over river and rill;
She heeds not the charm of their silent appealing,
She's wrapped in her musings, and its peace be still.

Where is her lover? and what path does he follow?
Does he ever look back to thine of her pain?
Does he ever look back from the mountain or hollow?
With a sigh that he never shall meet her again?

Let her dream of him now in the light wind that passes
Over lilac and myrtle, where lingers his shade
Let her dream of him now in the turn of the grasses,
Where once in his wooing his steps may have strayed.

Ah, proud was the glance that unkindly estranged them,
And secret the torture both hearts had to bear;
Was either to blame that a light word had changed them,
And pride was the mask weeping love had to wear?

Love's chain may be severed and its bloom seem declining,
As steps full of sorrow proceed their own way,
But the links and the bloom will live on repining
Till the hearts of both lovers are wrapped in the clay.

PUBLIC OPINION.

The most important thing in life
Is what the neighbors say,
The thing that stops or starts up strife
Is what the neighbors say.
No matter what the case may be,
Just look around, and you will see
The thing that governs you and me
Is what the neighbors say.

Your wife thinks, when she gets a dress,
What will the neighbors say?
She almost acts her happiness
On what the neighbors say.
The girl with a diamond ring,
A sealskin sacque, or some such thing,
Thinks, as she gives her head a fling,
What will the neighbors say?

You know yourself how much you care
For what the neighbors say.
Sometimes the hardest thing to bear
Is what the neighbors say.
You may pretend that you don't mind,
But still you wince when they're unkind—
The chief thing in this life you'll find,
Is what the neighbors say.

A Marvellous Recovery.

I was ill with inflammatory rheumatism in 1882 that I was given up, and had all my earthly business put in order. One of my sons begged me to get Burdock Blood Bitters. After the third bottle I could sit up alone and eat a good meal, and in six weeks I was out of bed feeling better than I ever felt. I take three bottles every spring, and two every fall.

Lady (nervously)—"Never mind, sir. I'll leave without making a scene if you don't want to do it."

The only guaranteed cure for all blood taints and humors, eruptions, pimples, blotches, scalp diseases and scrofulous sores and swellings, is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. You get a cure or money paid for it promptly returned.

A GASTLY DISCOVERY.

Kansas City, May 13.—The evidences of a ghastly crime were discovered at the Union station this morning. In a pine box two feet long was found the horribly mutilated body of a woman. Most all the flesh had been cut from the bones, and the head and face were mutilated beyond recognition. The body was packed in charcoal, and from all appearances could not have been extinct for more than 24 hours. The box was checked through over the Wabash from St. Louis last night and arrived here early this morning.

A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N.B.—This treatment is not a snuff or an ointment; both have been discarded by reputable physicians as injurious. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 West King Street, Toronto, Canada.—Toronto Globe.

Sufferers from Catarrhal troubles should carefully read the above.

A SNOW-PLOW DUEL.

The Rotary Again Victorious.

Wonderful Work Done by the Great Modern Invention.

ST. ELMO, Colo., April 18.—[Special.]—Yesterday was the third and last day of the contest between the opposing snow cleaning machines which have made the mountains and valleys echo with their exertions to gain popular approval from the railroad men present to judge the rival's merits. The result was that the Jull plow yielded the laurels to its adversary, the Leslie rotary.

Hostilities opened at 9 a. m. with the Jull on deck. Misfortune was swift to appear and an hour was lost in getting the machine on the track.

At 10:15 a five foot drift was attacked on a twelve degrees curve. The plan of throwing the snow to the left was attempted and utterly failed. The snow was piled on the Jull and fell along the sides and front, forming a blockade. Progress was barred and the machine's struggle proved futile, but a few feet of road being cleared.

The ejection of snow to the right was then tried, but the result was still unsatisfactory. The right side of the Jull was then opened in order to improve matters. This formed a delay of an hour and kept 100 men busy.

THIRD TIME AND OUT.

On the third attempt about seventy-five feet were cleaned and the machine worked a little more successfully. The usual occurrence of jumping the track then interfered with further progress. When a new start was made the Jull improved in throwing the snow to some extent. After about 100 feet had been traversed the machine again left the rails. By this time it became evident to the party that the Jull had sealed its own doom and was beaten out of sight.

The Jull was retired and the victory accorded the rotary.

Mr. Leslie desired one more trial for his pet, and the machine was brought to the front about noon. Its final trip was a splendid exhibition and showed to advantage its practical working qualities. For a half a mile through snow, varying from two to seven feet in depth, the rotary forged its way with uninterrupted success. The grade was a steep one, and the route a continuation of short curves, but the blockade had to yield to the iron terror.

END OF THE BATTLE.

The rotary stopped within a mile of the Alpine tunnel. Mr. Leslie was willing and desirous of keeping on Alpine tunnel was reached, and merely raising the blockade. The road officials and other members of a party, however, being desirous of returning to Denver to-day, the plan was abandoned. The way in which the rotary threw the snow into the air was a fine spectacle. Both machines were brought back to St. Elmo, and the contest, which will be recorded as a memorable one in railway history, was brought to a close. Mr. Jull was disheartened at the way his machine had behaved. To the representative of The Republican he said:

MR. JULL EXPLAINS.

"In the first place the arrangement of the truck caused the Jull to jump the track and was a continual source of annoyance and delay. The railroad track is in a deplorable condition and helped to expose the truck's mechanical defects. Before the plow was brought here it was improperly jacked up. The consequence was that seven and a half inches on one rail goes underneath and the Jull will not enter the snow.

"Then the boiler primes and allows water and steam to enter the cylinder, and we could not get up any speed, which interfered with the throwing of the snow.

"I do not consider that either machine is a complete success as an appliance for cleaning railway blockades. I am satisfied that a fair and just trial of the Jull and rotary machines has been made. The Union Pacific people have done everything to make it a success, and have judged the contestants on their merits."

The opinions of the railroad men who have witnessed the fight for supremacy between the rotary and Jull machines are unanimous indorsing the former. It is considered by them to be a superior invention in every respect, and in its display of ability in the present test fully came up to the most exacting requirements.

DEFECTS OF THE JULL.

The Jull defects are in its great weight and length and the distance it extends on its first truck. Its engine and boiler did poor work and the absence of proper ice cutters and flangers were serious losses. Many of the defects can be remedied, yet it was the general opinion that a machine constructed on the auger-boring principle is not suitable for clearing snow blockades.

The rotary was successfully engineered by Mr. Daniel Houston, the manager of the Leslie company's machines. He was all over and not a movement escaped his supervision. Philip King acted as engineer, George Stewart as pilot, J. A. Fehler as assistant engineer and Frank Wagner as fireman.

Photographers Jackson and Mellen were kept busy until the trip was ended. They secured over fifty views of both machines in various positions and movements.

The Denver party left St. Elmo at 4 o'clock last night. The sojourn in the mountains with attendant experiences was voted a grand success. The courteous treatment enjoyed throughout the employes of Mr. Gilchrist, Mr. Sanders and Mr. Eagan, the Union Pacific officials and of Mr. Leslie and Mr. Houston will long remain a pleasant memory.

THE UNLUCKY ANDER.

When the train reached Como Mr. Gilchrist was handed a telegram stating that the Jull machine had jumped the track and was overturned on its side. The accident occurred about a mile below Alpine, on a 50-degree curve. Engineer Mills had an ankle sprained. He was the only one of the crew who was injured. Three locomotives were attached to the Jull. Mr. Gilchrist and Mr. Eagan at once started for the scene of the accident in a special train. The Jull was not materially damaged.—Denver Republican Apr. 30th 1890.

Read this extract from the scientific papers of Great Britain and Europe:

The four greatest medical centres of the world are London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna. These cities have immense hospitals teeming with suffering humanity. Crowds of students throng the wards studying under the Professors in charge. The most renowned physicians of the world teach and practice here, and the institutions are storehouses of medical knowledge and experience. With a view of making this experience available to the public the Hospital Remedy Co. at great expense secured the prescriptions of these hospitals, prepared the specifics, and although it is said cost from $25 to $100 to secure the attention of their distinguished originators, yet in this way their prepared specifics are offered at the price of the quack patent medicines that flood the market and absurdly claim to cure every ill from a single bottle.

The Favorite

Medicine for Throat and Lung Diseases has long been said with Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It cures Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and Asthma; soothes irritation of the Larynx and Fauces; strengthens the Vocal Organs; allays soreness of the Lungs; prevents Consumption, and, even in advanced stages of that disease, relieves Coughing and Induces Sleep. There is no other preparation for diseases of the throat and lungs to be compared with this remedy.

"My wife had a distressing cough, with pains in the side and breast. We tried various medicines, but none did her any good until I got a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which has cured her. A neighbor, Mrs. Glean, had the measles, and the cough was relieved by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have no hesitation in recommending this to every one afflicted."—Robt. Horton, Foreman Headlight, Morrilton, Ark.

"I have been afflicted with asthma for forty years. Last spring I was taken with a violent cough, which threatened to terminate my days. Every one announced me in consumption. I determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Its effects were magical. I was immediately relieved and continued to improve until entirely recovered."—Joel Bullard, Guilford, Conn.

"Six months ago I had a severe hemorrhage of the lungs, brought on by an incessant cough which deprived me of sleep and rest. I tried various remedies, but obtained no relief until I began to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A few bottles of this medicine cured me."—Mrs. E. Coburn, 19 Second st., Lowell, Mass.

"For children afflicted with colds, coughs, sore throat, or croup, I do not know of any remedy which will give more speedy relief than Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have found it, also, invaluable in cases of Whooping Cough."—Ann Lovejoy, 1257 Washington street, Boston, Mass.

Poetry

THE BELLS OF NOTRE DAME.

What through the midnight thoroughfare
Teems with a noisy throng?
What though men hasty accosting
The ribald jest and song?
Over the din of oaths and cries
Broadcloth a wondrous calm,
And 'mid that solemn stillness rise
The bells of Notre Dame.

"Have not, dear Lord," they seem to say,
"Thy work and writing chiefly
Spoil them, O gentle mother, pray
That God be reconciled."
And so mankind, O Christ, our King,
Pour out thy precious balm"—
'Tis thus they plead and thus they sing,
These bells of Notre Dame.

And so, methinks, God, bending down
To ken the things of earth,
Hears not the mockery of the town
Or cries of ribald mirth;
Far over sounderth in his ear
A penitential psalm—
'Tis thy angelic voice he hears,
O bells of Notre Dame.

Plead on, O bells, that thy sweet voice
May still forever be
An intercession to rejoice
Benign divinity;
And that thy tuneful grace may fall
Like dew, a quickening balm
Upon the arid hearts of all—
O bells of Notre Dame!

CHAPTER XV.

MRS. THORNTON BECOMES CONFIDENTIAL.

THE lamps are lighted in Mrs. Thornton's boudoir, she has lain there all day refusing to go down to lunch or dinner, she would not eat or drink. In vain her maid, who was really attached to her mistress, brought up one little delicacy after another. She sent them all away; she was not hungry, and would not eat; she was not thirsty, and would not drink.

There she lay hour after hour, eating her heart away, the fever running hot in her veins, her whole soul filled with tortures, trying to remember how it had been when wooing her four long years ago; trying to remember all he had said every loving word; trying to think of every loving glance; then stopping with a low cry to wish she were dead. It were dead. It was growing dark in the evening when the maid returned to her charge.

"You have taken nothing to day, madame," she said; "how can you live if you do not eat? You could not find a surer way of killing yourself than doing as you do now."

She made no audible answer, but to herself she said:

"What did it matter? Better be dead than living, since no one cared for her."

"If madam will excuse me," said the girl, "there have been children who have made themselves ill crying for the moon. Madam is weak and imagines things."

"I am ill," said the poor lady, wondering if her maid understood that her illness consisted of a broken heart.

"Did you say, madam, that lady—Mrs. Rymer, was coming this evening?"

A gleam of brightness came over the pale face; in the entire absorption of her thoughts, Clara Thornton had even forgotten it.

"Yes, she is coming. It is evening now—it seems to have grown dark all at once."

"Let me light the lamps," said the girl, "and bring up madam's pretty tea-service; it will look so much more cheerful than coming into these darkened rooms."

Mrs. Thornton seemed suddenly interested.

"Certainly it will; light all the lamps Felicie, and see that tea is brought up. Put some flowers on the table, tell them to send up some jelly and something nice for tea; let us have some fruit—grapes, strawberries, peaches; make everything as bright as you can."

She was interested and eager enough now. The burning flush left her face, her eyes looked more natural, and Felicie, looking at her, thought how mad it was that she could not always be interested and eager.

"If she had but children," thought the girl, "she would have something else to think of besides crying over that good-for-nothing of a husband. It would take a great many men to make me cry," said the maid. "If I were in madam's place, instead of weeping, weeping, weeping, I would just give him back what he gave me."

"I think, Felicie," said her mistress, "I will go and change my dress; I should like Mrs. Rymer to find everything bright and nice as possible."

The maid would have done anything on earth to have amused her mistress or pleased her. She took several dresses from her wardrobe. There was a pink silk that Felicie pronounced charming; one of green silk and white lace; one of amber blonde embroidered with white satin flowers; they were so numerous and so beautiful—so little need, as Felicie thought, with a sharp pain at her heart.

"Mr. Thornton will probably look in before he goes out for the evening. He likes to see me in evening dress. Bring out those white silk and lace, Fanny. They are pretty it is—just the color of a violet. I will wear that with some diamond ornaments."

And although she had spent time that morning in dressing to please him, and he had never so much as noticed her appearance by one look, she dressed again for him—all for him.

Felicie was thankful enough to see her mistress interested in anything. She managed to prolong the business of the toilet, and then, by some well directed compliment brought a smile to the poor pale lips.

Then Mrs. Thornton went to her boudoir. It was so brilliant, and the light from the lamps fell on the statues and flowers. The table was a picture of brilliancy—the delicate china, the fine old plate, the rare fruits. Mrs. Thornton smiled as she looked round.

"This is comfortable," she said, and before had left her lips Mrs. Rymer was announced.

Silvia looked slightly bewildered at the magnificence that surrounded her. The pretty cottage home by the lakes had been furnished handsomely, but there was nothing like the luxury she saw here. In the pretty little village of Rosebank such things had never been heard of. There, a substantial Brussels carpet, with a sensible suit of mahogany was considered the height of grandeur.

She was too refined, too true a lady to show any surprise or make any remark; but she looked slightly bewildered and confused. Mrs. Thornton's warm welcome soon set her quite at her ease again.

"I am glad you have come," said the poor lady. "Let me bid you welcome. I have not been well to-day; I have been nervous and oppressed. I shall be so much better."

Mrs. Thornton was already looking better.

"Will you take tea?" she asked. "How nice it is to have some one to speak to!" Then noticing Silvia's look of surprise, she seemed to recollect herself, and said: "A lady, I mean. Of course, I can talk to Mr. Thornton; but then, ladies are so different; one feels so much more at one's ease with them. I like tea; nothing seems to me more comfortable than tea taken in this way. But, then, Mr. Thornton never touches it."

"Gentlemen do not like it so well," said Silvia.

"My husband is so much sought in society," continued Mrs. Thornton. "I mention it you should think it strange that he is not more at home. I am an invalid, as you see, hardly ever well. I could not expect him to spend all his time here, shut up in my room, could I?"

The wistful eyes said plainly, "Give me one crumb of comfort," that pleading face asked so entreatingly for a little consolation, that some faint glimmering of the true state of the case came to Silvia.

"You could not," she replied. "Men require action—they require so much more than women. The constraint, the confinement and quiet of a sick-room are almost unbearable even to the very best of them."

It was pitiful to see the gleam of hope and light that came into the sad face.

"Do you really think so? Of course you are all right. My husband has such splendid health; he is so strong. I do not think he has ever known an hour's illness; he does enjoy life so much."

"You would not like to see him change that strength, energy, and fullness of life for the weakness, the languor, the delicacy of an invalid?"

"No, that I would not, God bless him! Do you think that men, as a rule, are demonstrative?"

It seemed to Silvia that the whole matter was becoming clear to her. Evidently the wife was most deeply, most passionately in love with her husband, who, on his part, was probably quite indifferent to her. Evidently the only way in which to benefit the poor lady was to console her.

"I do not think they are," she replied, as though she had been considering the question. "I have heard very clever people say that the more deeply a man feels, the less trace he shows of his feelings."

"I wish," said Mrs Thornton, heartily, "that you had come to live with me years ago. I should have been a happier woman."

CHAPTER XVI.

A DISLOYAL HUSBAND.

Silvia had been for some time in the house before any clear idea of what was the matter dawned on her; then she began to see that in this luxurious mansion in the midst of society, in the nineteenth century, when such things are thought to be impossible, a tragedy was being played out. Then she began to understand the fever that seemed to burn the very heart of the poor lady to whom, day by day, she became more warmly attached.

The piteous way in which that woman clung to her husband's love, or to the idea of it, was more sad than words can tell. How she excused his constant absence from her, his coldness and indifference, was sadder than anything Silvia had ever seen in all her life; it was not the blind, but the lingering agony of love. Better a thousand times had he been dead to her. Had he died and left her, that would have been a sudden and terrible shock; but this was dying by inches, dying of a broken heart, the most lingering and terrible of deaths.

Silvia learned to loathe the handsome careless man who seemed to live only for himself, and never to waste a thought on the sorrows of others. He had been very much attracted by her; the lovely face, with its sad expression, so young, so fair, contrasting so vividly with the widow's cap and the mourning dress. Poor Mrs. Thornton was so cheered because for two whole evenings he sat with her; she little dreamed that it was for the sake of watching her companion.

"See," she said to her in the morning, "how attentive my husband really is to me. Of course [illegible] he is so brilliant and accomplished; but if he thinks I am really ill how good he is!"

And Silvia might have believed it, but that Mrs. Thornton expressed a wish that same morning for some hot-house flowers and Silvia went into the pretty conservatory to gather some. While she was most skillfully arranging a bouquet of white and crimson flowers a shadow fell over them, and looking up she saw Mr. Thornton watching her, with an evil smile on his handsome face.

"What do you think of my domestic reform," he asked, with something like a sneer.

No answering smile came to the lovely face. Silvia looked at him gravely.

"I have not the pleasure of understanding you," she said, simply.

"Do you not think I am a model husband, spending two nights together at home?"

She looked at him very gravely.

"I am afraid you will hardly think me polite," she said, "but I have never thought at all about you."

He laughed aloud. "I call that charming. So you have never given me one thought; that is unkind, considering that I have remained at home for two whole evenings so that I might see you."

She turned away, loathing him, and busied herself in finding some green leaves to mix with the flowers. He followed her.

"You will surely say a single word to me after that, Mrs. Rymer? If I had a face like yours to look at, I would never leave home at all. I consider myself a connoisseur, and I have never seen one so lovely."

She was too indignant for words; her face flushed crimson, and he was weak enough to think his compliments had called forth that lovely blush.

"If you blush so beautifully," he said, "I shall always be trying to summon the color into your face."

She then raised her clear, sweet eyes to his.

"You mistake altogether," she said. "I blush for shame to think that a man who should be a gentleman can so forget himself."

"How am I forgetting myself?" he asked.

"I am your wife's paid dependent, and you have no right to talk nonsense to me."

"But it is not nonsense," he retorted. "I do not think I have ever said so many true or sensible things in one day before. You are—I tell you, and I mean it—you are the loveliest woman I ever saw."

He stopped abruptly, for she raised her hand with a warning gesture.

"Stay," she cried. "If you insult me by one word, I will leave this house instantly, and neither my pity nor compassion for your wife shall induce me to return."

"What a pretty virago," he said, with a sneer; but he withdrew and stood looking at her from a distance.

"Understand once for all," she said, "that I do not allow nonsense of that kind to be talked to me. You have a wife—a good, loving, devoted wife—and you are gradually killing her by neglect. I do not care how angry you are, I am simply speaking the truth. You are breaking her heart, and you know it."

"What a pretty puritan," he said, with a sneer.

"I believe that I can be of some little comfort to that unhappy lady," she continued. "I have seen sufficient to understand what is killing her. I shall devote my time to her, I shall give her all my thoughts, I shall devote myself to her; but remember, I will never again submit to be spoken to as you have spoken to me this morning. If you care enough for her to wish that she should have a faithful friend, leave me in peace."

"Quite a pretty lecture," he said; "and morality is never as pleasant as when it comes from rosy lips. Well, it shall be as you say, Mrs. Prude; you shall be my wife's friend, and you must really pardon me if I say that I envy my wife."

She looked at him. He was smiling, with an evil sneer on his lips.

"I suppose all appeal to you for your wife's sake would be useless?" she said.

"I am afraid so, Mrs. Rymer."

"Honor and conscience, truth and loyalty, are so many dead letters to you, I am sure. If I tell you that your unhappy wife has not long to live, and ask you to make her what is left of her life pleasant by being kind and considerate, by spending more time with her, would you grant my prayer?" and [illegible] she looked at her in wonder, for the sweet eyes had suddenly filled with tears.

"If you knew," she said, "how much she loves you—how she counts the hours when you are away from her, and longs for your return—if you could see the tearful face, the pitiful eyes, you would not refuse. If I pray you, for God's sake, to be kinder to her, would you grant my prayer?"

He laughed, but there was some trace of confusion in the sound; it was not pleasant to hear.

"You are quite melodramatic, Mrs. Rymer, but I am afraid, even in compliance with your pretty, eloquent prayer, I can hardly alter my arrangements, and they are of a domestic kind, you see. I am sorry you will not be friends with me. Good-morning. I am quite in love with virtue when it takes such a form as yours."

She made no answer, only turned from him with a sick loathing, and a sure conviction that nothing could avert his wife's doom.

"How long you have been," said Mrs Thornton, as Silvia reentered the room, "and see how dependent I am on you; it is not really twenty minutes, and yet it has seemed an hour to me. Has Mr. Thornton gone out yet?"

"I think not," she replied. "I saw him down stairs."

"He will not go without coming to see me," she said. "Ah! Mrs. Rymer, make me look nice. I love to see a pleased expression in his eyes when they rest on me. Ah, me! how I wish that I were beautiful. He loves beauty so dearly, my poor Gustave."

She was silent for a few minutes, then began again.

"I have been suffering so much pain all night," she said, "I am afraid my face is ghastly, and he dislikes all sickness so much. Will you draw down that rose colored blind, so that the sun may shine through it. And, Mrs. Rymer, where is my India shawl? Throw it over me, the colors are so bright. I might have one of those roses in my dress. Now do you think I look as nice as possible?"

"You look like a picture," said Silvia; and so she did, with that exquisite combination of colors; but the poor, thin face was ghastly white.

"Will you give me my fan?" she said. "I can not tell how it is, but the perfume of the flowers seems almost to choke me. Oh, Mrs. Rymer, do you think I am very ill?"

What was Silvia to say? There was death in the white face; in the dry burning lips; in the bright, eager eyes. She was dying—dying of love unsatisfied that preyed upon itself and was eating her heart away—dying for want of affection and care that would have preserved her life at least some years.

So she lay and listened, but no footsteps on the stairs brought the burning flush to her face; she heard the great hall door close.

"My husband is gone," she said; "he had not time to visit me. I am tired; I will go to sleep, Mrs. Rymer."

But although she lay still and never spoke, Silvia knew she was weeping the bitterest tears a woman can shed.

EAST LUTHER COUNCIL.

GRAND VALLEY, May 5, 1890.

The Council met this evening at 6 30 o'clock at a call of the reeve. Members all present; reeve in the chair.

Moved by Wm. S. Galbraith, seconded by John Barber, that the following accounts be passed and that the reeve issue his orders for the same:—The Sun, for printing in 1889, $30 65, and C. J. Wheelock, for surveying, preparing plan, profile, &c., of drain No. 8 (lake drain), 1889, $35. Carried.

Moved by John Barber, seconded by John McKee, that Daniel McLellan be instructed to inspect the road asked to be drained in the petition of Isaac Hilborn and from others, and report at next meeting of the Council. Carried.

Moved by W. S. Galbraith, seconded by John barber, that the Council dig a ditch along the north side of the 12th concession road allowance opposite lots 23, 24 and 25, provided the petitioners clear out and grub the road twenty feet wide, and the clearing grubbing be done before the ditch is dug, and that John Barber attend to the letting of the said drain. Carried.

Moved by W. S. Galbraith, seconded by John McKee, that the 36 days' work offered by John O'Reilly and others to improve the road on No. 30 sideroad in the 8th and 9th concession by supplemented by a dollar for each days' work, to the extent of 36 days. Carried.

Moved by Daniel McLellan, seconded by John McKee, that the reeve be instructed to have railing put on the side of the road opposite Colin's spring for the safety of the travelling public. Carried.

The Council then adjourned.

R. K. HAMILTON, Clerk.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—In the complaints peculiar to females these Pills are unrivalled. Their use by the fair sex has become so constant for the removal of their ailments that rare is the household that is without them. Amongst all classes, from the domestic servant to the position, universal favour is accorded to these renovating Pills; their invigorating and purifying properties render them invaluable in all cases; they may be taken by females of all ages for any disorganization or irregularity of the system, speedily removing the cause and restoring the sufferer to robust health. As a family medicine they are unapproachable for subduing the maladies of young and old.

Vote for Barr.

THE NOMINATIONS.

THE addition of THE SUN has been held back a few hours in order to give our readers a list of the candidates who will contest Dufferin.

At the convention held in the town hall this (Thursday) afternoon, something like twenty-six nominations were made. In nearly every case the nominees resigned, or intend to do so, with the exception of Dr. Barr, Conservative, Geo. Bailey, Reformer, R. McGhee, farmers' candidate, and Dr. Gaviller, Equal Rights and Prohibition.

The candidates held a meeting after the nominations and addressed the electors.

OUR CANDIDATE!

DR. BARR was the unanimous choice of the Conservative convention which was convened at Shelburne on Tuesday. THE SUN, as a Conservative journal, is in hearty accord with the nomination, and will do its best to place the doctor at the head of the poll one week from to day. Dr. Barr is an intelligent man, a fluent speaker, a man who is well-known to most of the electors of this county and who knows exactly what the ratepayers want; and there is no doubt that he will put forth every effort to secure a number of much-needed changes should he be returned for this constituency.

Since John Sanfield MacDonald's government went out and since Mr. Mowat grasped the reins of power a great many unwise changes have taken place in the House at Toronto. Now's the time to do away with a corrupt administration.

Vote for Barr and increase his already promised majority.

WHO MAY NOT VOTE.

(London Free Press.)

THE persons who may not vote at elections to the Legislative Assembly in Ontario are thus specified by the Election Act:—

Judges of the Supreme Court of Judicature for Ontario, County Judges, Officers of the Customs of the Dominion of Canada, Clerks of the Peace, County Attorneys, Registrars, Sheriffs, Deputy Sheriffs, Deputy Clerks of the Crown, and Agents for the sale of Crown Lands, Postmasters in cities and towns, Stipendiary Magistrates, and Officers employed in the collection of duties payable to Her Majesty in the nature of the duties of excise, shall be disqualified and incompetent to vote at any election.

If a public officer or person mentioned in this section votes at an election, he shall thereby forfeit the sum of $2,000, and his vote at the election shall be null and void. R. S. O. 1877, c. 10, s. 4, 49 V. c. 2, s. 10.

No Returning Officer or Election Clerk, and no person, who at any time, either during the election or before the election, is or has been employed at the election or in reference thereto, or for the purpose of forwarding the same, by a candidate or by any person whomsoever, as counsel, agent, solicitor or clerk, at a polling place at the election, or in any other capacity whatever, and who has received or expects to receive, either before, during or after the said election, from any candidate or from any person whomsoever, for acting in such capacity as aforesaid, any sum of money, fee, office, place of employment, or any promise, pledge or security whatever therefor, shall be entitled to vote at the election:

The preceding provision shall not apply to Deputy Returning Officers, and Poll Clerks appointed under this Act, and receiving as such the fees to which officers are entitled under this Act. R. S. O., 1877, c. 10, s. 5.

No woman shall be allowed to vote at an election under this Act. R. S. O. 1877, c. 10, s 6

Barr's defeat means a Grit victory. Vote for him on the 5th of June.

EDITORIAL NOTES

THE name of Dr. Gaviller is very rarely mentioned around here. An unsuspecting person would hardly believe that he is seeking legislative honors. However, he may be a good third in this great procession.

THE Grits are billed to hold a convention here this morning. The peace that prevails among the Conservatives has completely knocked the wind out of their sails, and they will probably "let her go" for another term. Common sense.

MR. W. T. BAILEY, chairman of the R. & B. committee, deserves credit for the manner in which he looks after the work on the streets. Morning, eve and noon he may be seen inspecting the work and giving orders to the workmen. THE SUN has only one fault to find with Mr. Bailey and that is "he's a Grit."

AN Owen Sound correspondent telegraphs the following to the Mail:—"The present election campaign is the hottest ever known in this riding, the friends of each candidate being apparently confident of success. However, the opinion is growing that Mr. Creighton, the Opposition candidate will win the election."

IT is not generally known, but its a fact, that there are hardly paupers—something like $100 or $200—for anyone convicted of feeding pigs rotten meat or refuse from a tannery. Now, several Orangeville people feed their pigs refuse from the tannery, and THE SUN is informed that the health inspector intends putting a stop to this rather unwholesome practice. A fine of $200 would undoubtedly stop it in quick order.

WE cannot understand why Robt. McGhee, ex-M. P. P., has consented to pose as the "farmers' candidate" when there's nothing staring him in the face but certain defeat. When asked to allow his name to go before the Conservative Convention at Shelburne on Tuesday, he would do nothing of the sort. At that very convention there were twenty-two delegates from Orangeville, and ONE HUNDRED AND SIX farmer delegates from Mono, Amaranth, East Garafraxa, East Luther, Mulmur and Melanethon. And yet Robt. McGhee was afraid to face his fellow-farmers! Was he afraid he wouldn't receive justice from the farmers? It looks very much like it. Still he says he's the farmers' candidate!! Reader, mark your ballot for Dr. Barr.

THE Toronto Empire, after quoting the paragraph in the Free Press regarding the order issued compelling G. T. R. men to vote for Mowat nominees on pain of dismissal, says:—"Investigation proves that the statement is absolutely correct. The Empire's representation with a prominent Grand Trunk conductor to-day learned that there is a great revolt all along the line between London and Detroit over this uncalled for attempt to coerce the employes in the exercise of their franchise. Many of the men say they will do just as they believe is best in the interests of the Province. They claim that they are under-paid for the amount of work which they perform for the company. This cowardly attempt at coercion may in all probability lead to a general demand from the army of employes for more wages. One employe stated that he did not believe in having all the surplus earnings of the company going into the pockets of one or two men, who are attempting to exercise a sovereign right over their liberties. The issuer of the order will find that he has made a grave error in trying to control the franchise of the thinking men, who for the time being happen to be at his mercy as far as their situations are concerned, and that rather than follow his dictation they will sacrifice their positions."

SHELBURNE.

A large number of visitors from all over spent the 24th in town.

The Salvation Army here have "borrowed" a lieutenant from Dundalk until theirs arrive, which will be some time this week.

Mr. S. G. Noble, of Orangeville, occupied the Methodist church pulpit on Sunday last.

The council met as a court of Revision Monday last and adjourned to meet again on Friday May 30th.

Rev. Mr. McClelland will preach the annual sermon to the A O U W. in the town hall on Sunday next at 3 o'clock in afternoon.

Dr. Barr is the candidate of the Conservative Convention held here on Tuesday last. The genial Dr will come under the wire with flying colors.

Mrs. de Gier, the prohibition lecturer failed to put in an appearance on Monday night, owing to sickness. Consequently there was no lecture.

A garden party will be held by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church on Tuesday evening, June 3rd, at the residence of Mrs. J. R. McManus.

The seventy-first anniversary of Her Majesty's Birthday was celebrated in a manner quite in keeping with the occasion. Although it threatened to rain there was only a slight shower, which did not take away from the full enjoyment of the races and games. In the forenoon there was a very exciting game of of baseball played in the driving park between the Dundalk and Shelburne clubs which resulted as follows: Dundalk 17 runs; Shelburne 18 runs and one innings to spare. In the afternoon the horse races were the first on the programme. The following are the winners in the different classes:—

Open Trot.—Volunteer 1st, Dan O'Connell 2nd, Billy Go-Easy 3rd; best time 2:43.

Three Minute Trot.—Auntie 1st, Butcher Boy 2nd, King Imperial 3rd; best time 2:47.

Open Run.—This race was declared off, there not being the required number of entries.

Green Run.—Orange Maid 1st, Onward 2nd, Topsy 3rd; best time 1:01½ half mile heats.

The dog and goat races did not take place owing to insufficient numbers of entries.

FOOT RACES.

Half mile race.—E. Harrison 1st, J. Vick 2nd, Clark Russell 3rd; time 2.13.

200 yard race.—A. J. Knight 1st, J. Allen 2nd, J. Vick 3rd; time 22 seconds.

100 yard race.—A. J. Knight 1st, J. Allen 2nd, J. Vick 3rd; time 10½ seconds.

100 yard race, (boys)—H. Irwin 1st, F. Johnston 2nd, D. Madill 3rd; time 15 seconds.

ENTERTAINMENT.

In the evening a very successful entertainment was held in the town hall under the management of the Shelburne Amateur Dramatic Club. It was largely attended, all the seats and standing room being taken up. This was their first appearance in public and it speaks well for their future success.

Pectoral Balsam cures coughs, colds, hoarseness, asthma, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles.

DOCTOR BARR!

The Conservative Standard-Bearer in Dufferin.

MANY CANDIDATES NOMINATED BUT HE GETS THE PREFERENCE.

FARMER MCGHEE WOULDN'T GO BEFORE THE CONVENTION.

The Doctor's Straight Policy—Herodith's Platform Suits Him—The Convention Pledges Itself to Support Its Nominee—Harmony in the Ranks—Barr the Next Member for Dufferin.

The adjourned meeting of the Dufferin Conservatives took place in the town hall, Shelburne, on Tuesday afternoon last. Ex Warden Hunter, president of the county association, took the chair at 1 o'clock. The hall was packed with the electors and the delegates. The full number of delegates from Orangeville, Mono, Amaranth, Shelburne, East Garafraxa, East Luther, Mulmur and Melanethon were present, thereby making the convention a thoroughly representative one. After passing a motion tendering Mr. F. C. Stewart, our late efficient member, a vote of thanks, the vice-presidents of the different associations were appointed a committe to arrange for the balloting of candidates.

Among the large gathering we noticed F. C. Stewart, ex-M. P. P., ex-Mayor Gilchrist, Mayor Walsh, ex-Deputy-reeve Kearns, ex-Reeve Foster, Jos. Haddock, J. C. Reid, J. C. Fox, W. Judge, Ald. Cobean, Orangeville; Reeve Allen, Deputy-reeve Island, Jas. Snell, H. Carson, Geo. Lightle, W. J. Morrison, Mono; ex Warden Gillespie, W. R. Jelly, R. Griggs, Clerk Varcoe, Reeve Wansbrough, Deputy-reeve Johnston, Councillor Hamilton, Councillor Barber, Amaranth; Reeve Hamilton, Deputy-reeve Simpson, W. H. Hunter, East Garafraxa; and many others from the other polling divisions.

THE NOMINATIONS.

When the nominations commenced they started in earnest, the following gentlemen being proposed: F. C. Stewart, Thos. Hackett, R. Allen, D. J. Mungovan, Dr. Henry, J. S. Leighton, A. A. Hughson, W. L. Walsh, John Gilchrist, Robt. McGhee, John Gillespie, W. H. Hunter, Dr. Hopkins, Wm. Jelly, Jas. Slack, W. R. Scott and Dr. Lewis.

Mr. Stewart was allowed fifteen minutes to speak and the other candidates five minutes. He was pleased to see such a large gathering, and it made him very happy to see the harmony that prevailed. He dealt ably with the timber limit policy of the Mowat Administration, and showed how Mowat was swindling the people out of a great amount of money. The Separate schools, financial department, and parliament buildings were also spoken on. Mr. Stewart showed up the trickery of the "Little Premier" on the license question. He was in favor of a thoroughly secret ballot for all elections, and he wound up by saying he was a candidate, but should he not secure the convention, he would support the man who would get it. Mr. Stewart was frequently applauded during his fifteen minutes' speech.

Dr. Barr followed, and in a few well-chosen remarks thanked the southern delegates for their generosity by changing the place for holding the convention. He would never forget the kindness shown by them. He said he heard a great cry for a farmer representative. Well, he was as good a farmer as any one of them. He was raised on a farm, did every kind of work on a farm, and still ran a farm to day in as good a manner as any farmer present. Why, the farmers compose 4 5 of the people of this meeting, and if a farmer could represent them better than he or any of the gentlemen on the platform, it was in their power to say so. The doctor is in accord with the Equal Rights and Mr. Meredith's platform, and if the delegates didn't choose him, he would support the man they did. Dr. Barr cracked a few jokes to good advantage, and was loudly applauded when he finished his brief address.

Reeve Allen of Mono, was the next speaker. He was very much pleased to see the Conservatives of Dufferin so united, and wanted to know why the farmers, if they wanted a candidate, why they couldn't choose one now. He was sorry Mr. McGhee would not go before the convention. He would work for the man who was favored with the convention.

D. J. Mungovan, Dr. Henry, W. R. Scott, J. S. Leighton, A. A. Hughson, Dr. Lewis, J. Gilchrist, J. Gillespie, and Dr. Hopkins spoke at some length on the topics of the day, and Mr. Robert McGhee, the "farmers" candidate, came in for a good share of criticism.

Mr. James Snell said if they wanted a farmer to represent them they should mark their ballots for him.

Mr. W. L. Walsh, the popular and rising young mayor of Orangeville, said he would offer himself to the convention, but if they did not accept him he would take off his coat and work for the man they did accept. He said he was in favor of equal rights, and, as Dufferin had been represented by a gentleman, a farmer, a doctor, and a merchant, it was, we should be by equal rights, a lawyer's turn this time.

Mr. W. H. Hunter said he would not go before the convention this time. He was glad to see the spirit and harmony that prevailed, and hoped the decision of the convention would be almost by a big majority.

A farmer named Black, a strong supporter of Mr. McGhee, took the platform during the meeting and also took offence at some remarks made by Dr. Hopkins. He spoke fast and furious. He danced around the stage like an East Indian at a war dance. Finally he became calmer, and no doubt he felt cheap when he resumed his seat.

Mr. McGhee, when called upon to take the platform, refused to do so, and wouldn't allow his name to go before the convention.

BARR THE CHOICE.

It now became time to choose the candidate, and everybody left the hall except the delegates. All the nominees had withdrawn with the exception of Messrs. Stewart, Walsh, Barr and Snell.

The first ballot was:

|---|---|
| Barr | 71 |
| Stewart | 40 |
| Walsh | 7 |
| Snell | 6 |

Second ballot:

|---|---|
| Barr | 65 |
| Stewart | 42 |
| Walsh | 9 |

Third ballot:

|---|---|
| Barr | 77 |
| Stewart | 51 |

Fourth ballot:

|---|---|
| Barr | 73 |
| Snell | 51 |

Fifth ballot:

|---|---|
| Barr | 79 |
| Walsh | 49 |

Thus, Dr. Barr, of Shelburne, is the Conservative standard bearer in Dufferin.

The Conservatives should lose no time in getting to work. At present there are three candidates in the field: Dr. Barr, the Conservative, Mr. McGhee, the farmers' man (?), and Dr. Gaviller, the Tory-Grit Equal-Rights' Prohibition aspirant.

A triangler contest sometimes results very different from what is expected, and each Conservative should cast his vote for the convention's nominee, Dr. Barr.

Come out on the 5th of June and vote for BARR, MEREDITH and GOOD GOVERNMENT!

Gold and silver, according to the Herald, have been discovered near Dundalk.

No clue can be found of the burglar who robbed Baker Westrop of $400 last week.

On Thursday the suspected burglars were conveyed back to Alliston, thence to Barrie.

Last Thursday the Arthur football club defeated the Orangeville boys by two goals to one.

The building which is to be occupied by the Bank of Hamilton will soon be in readiness for that institution.

☞ R. BEATTY's May Sale of Horses on Saturday, May 31st:—Ten heavy drafts, six drivers, four year-olds will be offered for sale

Young Brown, the Shelburne youth who is serving a three months' sentence in "the castle," will be liberated on Saturday.

Mr. James A. Glover, formerly bar tender at the Paisley house, has moved up street to the Gordon house. Jimmy is well-liked wherever he goes.

Messrs. Crockett & Stewart, of Orillia have leased the Gordon house and will take possession immediately. Great alterations will made on the building.

The C. P. R. have issued a new time table. There is only one change that effects this station, that is the C. V. R. train arrives five minutes later than heretofore

A large number of the S. O. E. B. S of this town attended St. Mark's church on Sunday evening last, when Rev. Mr. Webb, of Cardwell, preached an excellent sermon.

Cases against James Bennett and H. Crozier for violating the health act by keeping pigs on their property came up before P. M. Pattullo on Monday afternoon. They were adjourned until tomorrow at 2 o'clock.

The man who went out to milk and sat down on a boulder in the middle of the pasture and waited for the cow to back up to him, was the oldest brother of the man who kept store and did not advertise because he reasoned that the purchasing public would back up to his place when it wanted something.

CHEAP EXCURSIONS.—The C. P. R. will run farmers' excursions to Manitoba and the Northwest Territories on June 17, 24 and July 8. The fares are greatly reduced this year. See ad in next issue.

ORANGEVILLE ABROAD.—The good citizens of Orangeville were not slow to predict that the 24th would be a dull day in town. This accounts for the exodus which took place on that day. Some went fishing, others went to Alton, Milton, Toronto, Owen Sound and Shelburne. The latter place had a good celebration, but Owen Sound's was pronounced a glaring fizzle.

PASSED AWAY.—Elizabeth Hamilton, wife of Mr. Hugh McGowan, of Amaranth township, passed peacefully away on Monday. She had been lingering for over a year with that dread disease, consumption, and her death was not unexpected. The deceased was very popular with her acquaintances, and was 31 years of age. The remains were interred at Laurel on Tuesday afternoon the Rev. Mr. Leonard officiated.

TELL THEM HOMESICK.—A barber is a great place to study character—a little pin will remove the mask that men put on when they appear on the street or enter society. It amuses of the young girls would see and hear their favorite companions while standing in front of the bar calling for beer, telling vulgar stories and recounting their conquests, they would probably be a trifle more particular about confiding their choicest secrets to such men.

A DRAWN GAME.—On the 24th the Dufferin lacrosse club drove to Milton and played a game with the Olympics of that place. There were only two or three of the Dufferins in the team, the remainder being made up of "kids" between the ages of ten and seventeen years. When they arrived at Milton the latter club said they didn't want to play with infants. However, they commenced and before the Miltonites knew where they were the "kids" scored a game. Play lasted an hour and a half, and each club had two games to their credit.

NOT IN GOOD TASTE.—It is not in good taste, never was a good form, and is no longer good manners for a gentleman to raise his hat when meeting a lady on the street. A courteous waive of the hand is far more appropriate and is the custom in the fashion centres of Great Britain and the Continent. The idea that the gentleman always tips his hat to a lady is nonsense. To see a man yank his hat off and pull it down over his face is amusing. Now that the fashion has been relegated to its proper niche among absurd curiosities, keep your hat on your head when on the street if you want to be in style.

THE CALL ON EDITORS.—This election is bringing more members of the press to the front than any previous one. There is a whole string of editors on the list of candidates. On the Grit side there are: Mr. Dack, Centre Bruce; Mr. Graham, Dundas; Mr. Balfour, South Essex; Mr Stratton, West Peterboro; Dr. Gilmour, West York. The Conservatives have Mr. Creighton, North Grey; Mr. Campbell, East Algoma; Mr. Sheppard, Haldimand; Mr. McGillicuddy, East Lambton; Mr. Davis, South Perth; Mr. Carnegie, West Peterboro; Mr. Clarke, Toronto; and Mr. Maclean, North Wentworth.

MECHANICS' INSTUTE.—The annual meeting of the Mechanics' Institute was held in the reading-room on the evening of May 16. During the year, which ended on May 1st, the receipts were $511 54; disbursements, $397 70; balance on hand, $113 84. The following officials were elected for this year:

Jas. Foulds.....President
Alex. Johnston.....1st Vice President
R. E. Denison.....2nd Vice-President
W. Hewat.....Secretary-Treasurer
T. McAdam, W. Johnston...Auditors
A. Steel, W. Wallace, J. A. Aiken, A. Turner, C. B. Dorland, J. C. Fox, R. Mann, J. McLaren, E. Sawtell, N. Gordon.....Directors.

GIGANTIC BONES.—While attending the celebration at Shelburne on the 24th the editor of this paper was invited by Mr. W. A. Hillhouse to view the antediluvian relics, which are owned by him and Mr. John Jelly. The specimens are a great deal larger than those found on Mr. W. B. Jelly's farm in Amaranth about a year ago, and one great advantage is that they have the complete skeleton. The bones were unearthed on the farm of John Rayeraft, lot 8, con. 6, township of Orford, county of Kent. Next Saturday's Globe will illustrate the find. We congratulate Messrs. Hillhouse & Jelly and hope they make millions out of their new enterprise.

DEATH.—Mr. Lewis Watson, a much-respected resident of this town, died at his residence, John street, on Friday afternoon at the age of 37 years. Deceased had been confined to his bed for about three weeks with Bright's disease, and this, with a complication caused his death. Mr. Watson was born near where he died and always resided here having for the past ten years been employed at the C. P. R. station yard here. He was a member of the A. O. U. W. and Select Knights societies, and a consistent member of the Presbyterian church. Mrs. Watson, two sons and a daughter survive him. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon to the Forest Lawn cemetery and was largely attended. Rev. D. C. Hossack conducted the religious service.

THAT BANK BURGLARY.—One day last week the comfortable sum of $190 mysteriously disappeared from the teller's wicket in the bank of Hamilton here, and no trace of the missing property has yet been found. An up-town journal says "Saddler" Sydie and "Jim" Ramsey were the only persons in the bank at the time. The article would lead one to believe either Mr. Sydie or Mr. Ramsey was the guilty person. Now, both these gentlemen have resided long enough in Orangeville for the people to know what kind of citizens they are, and few are they who believe either of them are guilty of the theft. But they were not in the bank alone. Besides them and the bank clerks, there were three or four people making deposits. To say that Messrs. Sydie and Ramsey were angry would be putting it in a very mild way.

FOR DOMINION DAY.—At a meeting of the Special Attraction committee of the Dominion day celebration committee on Tuesday evening, it was decided to accept the offers made by Profs. Brandy & Brandy, of Cleveland, and Profs. Reid & McGregor. The former performers are the world famed balancing and parallelle jumpers. They will give the best exhibition that has ever been seen in this part of country. And the latter two are champion swordsmen of America. They will engage in a mounted sword contest, clothed in complete armor and mounted on two large chargers, besides doing some of the most wonderful sword feats. A fifty dollar cash prize will be given to the lucky couple who get married on a platform at the grounds. A hand tournament, five hundred dollars worth of fireworks, the trotting dog "Doc" are some of the attractions. This is not one-third of the programme either.

CONVERTED.—Speaking of the Presbyterian Synod meeting at Orillia last week, the Packet gives an interesting episode in the history of one of the members. It says:—The Rev. D. C. Hossack, L. L. B., of Orangeville, who took a prominent part in the proceedings of the Synod, was admitted for the law, and gave promise of rising to eminence in that profession. The circumstances which led to his entering the ministry are interesting and perhaps not generally known. At the time of the first Scott Act campaign in Northumberland, Mr. Hossack was a resident of Cobourg. Being an excellent platform speaker and opposed to the Act, the young lawyer was engaged by the "Antis" to address series of meetings. At a village in the East Riding (Grafton, if the writer's recollection serves him) Mr. Hossack met a venerable Presbyterian minister, who had been an old friend of the family, and felt that his position warranted him in remonstrating earnestly with the ed vocate for accepting a brief to bolster up an iniquitous traffic. The "old man eloquent" was so successful in his persuasion that young Hossack not only left the platform, but relinquished the law, and entered the ministry, where he has before him the promise of great usefulness.

To the Electors

OF THE COUNTY OF DUFFERIN

GENTLEMEN:

At a Convention of Liberal Conservatives Delegates assembled at Shelburne on the 27th instant, from every portion of the constituency, I was placed in the field as the standard bearer of the Party in the approaching contest for the Legislative Assembly. Having accepted the nomination thus tendered me, I deem it my duty to place before you my views on the issues that are at present engaging the attention of the people of this Province.

I am thoroughly in accord with the platform laid down by Mr. Meredith, the Provincial Leader of the Conservative Party, and particularly upon the school question

I go further, however, and say that Separate Schools are a source of evil and are prejudicial to the growth of a united Canadian sentiment. I think that the interests of our country would be better served by their abolition and by having our youth, of whatever religious views, educated in the same school, and am prepared to act in accordance with these views to as full an extent as the limited control that the Provincial Legislature has over them will permit.

If, however, Separate Schools are continued in existence, they should be carried on in the manner that was contemplated when they were established. By this I mean that they should be free from the control of the church authorities and subject to the jurisdiction of the State as the Public Schools are. I think that they should be inspected by the Public School Inspector, that their trustees should be elected in the same manner as Public School trustees, and that they should, in all respects, be conducted as nearly as possible upon the same lines as the Public Schools

As this is an English Province, I belive that the English language should be used as the language of instruction exclusively in our schools, and will support every measure brought before the House having that end in view.

My views upon the other questions of the day, such as the administration of Crown Lands, the expenditure of the public money, the distribution of the patronage, the payment of public officers by salary instead of fees, and the many other questions that divide the two great parties in Provincial politics are entirely in harmony with those so thoroughly enunciated by Mr Meredith. I will deem it my duty, if elected, to support him in the position that he has taken upon all these public questions, but I reserve to myself the right to vote according to the dictates of my conscience upon all other matters that may engage the attention of the House.

My record and my standing are well known to nearly all of you. My interests are yours. Nearly every dollar that I own is invested in this county. Any legislation that is injurious to you must be prejudicial to me, I am largely interested, financially and otherwise, in the farming community, particularly, and for this reason, if for no other, I will be bound to look after the interests of the farmers in the House.

Respectfully soliciting your votes,

I remain, yours truly,

JOHN BARR.

Shelburne, May 28th, 1890.

ARCHIVES OF ONTARIO
TORONTO

M. P. P. day, gave

Mr. Wesley Jordan, of Parry Sound, is spending a few days with his Toronto friends.

Mr. Islam, of Toronto, visited friends here last week.

Mr. J. W. Middleton, of Toronto, was in town on Tuesday.

Mr. John Paisley, of Toronto, renewed old acquaintances here this week.

Rev. A. C. Watt, of Mono Mills, was in town yesterday.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills are beyond all doubt the most convenient medicines that travellers can take across the seas to distant climes, for change of climate and the new conditions and surroundings of life to which they will be exposed will assuredly give rise to great disturbances of the system and to such peculiar morbid states of the blood and constitution generally as will render the use of these effectual remedies highly necessary, for they will find in them a ready and safe means of relief in most of the diseases which afflict the human race, and with them at hand they may be said to have a physician always at their call.

GRAND VALLEY.

The teachers' convention has been postponed until Saturday, the 31st inst.

Mr. Wm. Roger, a Belwood blacksmith, and well known around here, died at that place on Thursday, the 15th inst.

George McBride, employed at Phillips' sawmill here, had the top of one of his fingers amputated while making shingles.

While W. H. Graham was grinding a chisel some time ago a piece of steel got into his eye. It did not cause any pain at first, but later on the orb swelled and Dr. Hopkins had to remove the steel.

It is hard to predict which candidate will secure the most votes around here. Dr. Gavillier's broken record will not get him many votes. The people around Waldemar remember him too well in his Scott Act campaign. They also remember the night when Dr. Lewis, of Orangeville, made him swallow several great big pills, which he told at a public meeting there Mr. McGhee is out as the farmers' candidate. Well, Bob is no use whatever and our advice to him is to stay at home, or if he runs the people will leave him at home.

Savages expect to humble bravery by drinking the blood of their brave enemies. A more enlightened method of vitalizing the blood is by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It brings up the nervous and vital strength and fortitude to endure the trials of life.

A Beautiful Canadian Story.—The Graphic, Chicago's popular illustrated weekly, is publishing a beautiful story of Canadian life, by Mrs. Mary Hartwell Catherwood, author of the famous "Romance of Dollard," the story of Tonty and other charming chapters of Canadian history and tradition. The Graphic story is entitled the "Children of Ha Ha Bay," the scene being laid successively near St. Hilaire, Chicoutimi and Tadousac. Marie, a fair orphan girl; her grandfather, a hermit at Chicoutimi; Ignace, a brave young forester, and Justine, his sister, are the well-drawn characters in this, the best of Mrs. Catherwood's shorter stories. The three issues containing this beautiful sketch, (finely illustrated by Mr. A. B. Davies), may be mailed by the publishers on receipt of 30 cents.

Lean Once Behind.

While you may be here

Before the dreadful shadow which must read on the dial's face, [illegible] the fatal verdict of consumption, let us tell you that the first symptom of that very late lineage consumption, "Lean Lungs" [illegible] Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, have [illegible] and which cures the disease.

A St. Thomas lad named Herbert Workman met with a very painful injury on Wednesday afternoon. He and another lad obtained a few blank cartridges, and young Workman very unceremoniously applied a match to one of them. The result was an explosion which struck him squarely in the face. His companion at once ran off affrighted, and Workman, mad with pain, rushed into some house and dashed his head into a pail of water. He was taken to a doctor's office, his hair still burning. It was found that he was badly burnt about the face and neck. The eyebrows and eyelids were burnt off and a portion of the skin of the face has since come off.

Large quantities of the contents of the stomach and bowels are corrected by taking Dr. Pierce's Pellets. Through not having their bowels disorder increases, [illegible] appetite, loss of flesh, etc.

Directors of the World's Fair passed a resolution requesting Congress to call a special meeting of the legislature prior to June 1 to submit the question of submitting to the voters at the November election a proposition to amend the State constitution so as to authorize Chicago to subscribe $5,000,000 in aid of the World's Fair. Position also favors legislation for a State exhibition and authorizing the city of the parks as a site.

A CORPSE ON THE PILOT.

Ottawa, Ont., May 24.—The young man, about 20 years of age, found on the pilot of the night express by the train men, papers found on him probably Wm. Burrows, evidently come from Pembroke the day previous. There are signs of his being under the influence of liquor. The body's presence was almost unaccountable, being that the engineer, having struck something miles from the station and thought it was a sheep.

Among many curiosities of the museums of this village, has one most peculiar one. Last spring a colt, having been born legs only, and these the Mr. Clemen stuffed it and sent it to Niagara Falls, where it is on exhibition in the Clifton Advocate.

The Bell of Norwich is rung each night at 9 o'clock, and children on the streets after that hour are by the authorities.

A young man about 23 years of age, named James Houle, a West Toronto Junction grocer, whose parents reside in Goderich, was struck Saturday morning by a train and instantly killed. The accident happened between High Park and the rolling mills. The body will be sent to Goderich for burial.

The Ides of March.

"Last March mother caught a severe cold, terminating in a very bad cough. Everything we could hear of was tried without avail. Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam was at last recommended and procured. The first dose relieved, and one bottle entirely cured her."

Miss E. A. Stanbanan, Hespler, Ont.

Mr. Thomas Macfarlane, Government analyst of the Inland Revenue Department, is at present engaged at Ottawa in examining samples of butter purchased in open market throughout the Dominion.

A Seasonable Hint.

During the breaking up of winter, damp, chilly weather prevails, and rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, sore throat, croup, quinsy and other painful effects of sudden colds are common. Hagyard's Yellow Oil is a truly valuable household remedy for all such complaints.

Lost.—About eight weeks ago, a Scotch terrier dog, answering to the name of "Snider." Any person giving such information as will lead to his recovery, or bringing him to The Sun office will be suitably rewarded.

Cotton Root Compound.

Composed of Cotton Root, Tansy and Pennyroyal—prepared by an old Physician. Is successfully used monthly by thousands of women and has been prescribed in a practice of over 60 years. Price, $1. Will be mailed to any address in Canada and U. S. Doctor's consultation hours, 9 to 11 and 2 to 4. Diseases of women treated only. Sealed particulars 2c. stamp. Ladies only, address Pond Lily Company, No. 3, Fisher Block, 124 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, Mich.

Born

Hace.—In Orangeville, on the 23rd instant, the wife of R. T. Hace, Manager Bank of Hamilton, of a son.

Lawson.—In Orangeville, on the 23rd inst., the wife of J. Lawson, of a son.

Died.

Sproul.—In Orangeville, on the 26th instant, Robert John Milton Sproul, aged 26 years.

McGowan.—At Laurel, on the 26th instant, Elizabeth McGowan, aged 31 years.

Bell.—In Orangeville, on the 26th instant, Sidney Gough Bell, aged 1 year, 2 and 12 days.

Watson.—In Orangeville, on the 23rd instant, Samuel Alexander Lewis Watson, aged 37 years and 3 months.

JENKS' DREAM.

Jenks had a queer dream the other night. He thought he saw a prize-fighters' ring, and in the middle of it stood a doughty little champion who met and deliberately knocked over, one by one, a score or more of big, burly-looking fellows, as they advanced to the attack. Giants as they were in size, the valiant pigmy proved more than a match for them. (It was all so funny that Jenks woke up laughing. He accounts for the dream by the fact that he had just come to the conclusion, after trying nearly every big, drastic pill on the market, that Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, or tiny Sugar-coated Granules, easily "knock out" and beat all the big pills hollow! They are the original and only genuine Little Liver Pills. Beware of Imitations, which contain Poisonous Minerals. Always ask for Dr. Pierce's Pellets, which are Little Sugar-coated Pills, or Anti-bilious Granules. One a Dose.

SICK HEADACHE,

Bilious Headache, Dizziness, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the stomach and bowels, are promptly relieved and permanently cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. They are gently laxative, or strongly cathartic, according to size of dose. Smallest, Cheapest, Easiest to take. 25 cents a vial, by druggists.

A Dream of Fair Women.

Tennyson in his exquisite poem, dreams of a long procession of lovely women of ages past. This is all very well, but the laureate would have done the world a greater service if he had only told the women of the present day how they could improve their health and enhance their charms. This he might have done by recommending the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Health is the best friend of beauty, and the innumerable ills to which women are peculiarly subject, its most enemies. Long experience has proven that the health of womankind and the Favorite Prescription walk hand in hand, and are inseparable. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

A SHIPCAPTAIN'S LUXURY.

He Says $50,000 Worth of Smuggled Goods were Intended to Decorate His Cabin.

New York, May 18.—An important seizure of men's clothing, cutlery and bric-a-brac was made this afternoon. The articles were discovered on a wagon on the Inman line dock. They were in parcels and trunks and had been carried from the steamer City of New York, which reached here Wednesday. Customs officers this afternoon also seized upward of $50,000 worth of rare Japanese silks and bric-a-brac at Martin's stores, Brooklyn, on the American ship Leading Wind. Captain Huntley is in command of the ship. The Leading Wind arrived from Japan on Thursday. The officials learned there were numerous articles aboard which were not on the ship's manifest. They searched the cargo and in one corner of the hold under some old rope and tarpaulin found what they were looking for. Several boxes, barrels and vases were there. In them were porcelains and silks said to be the finest ever brought into the country. No mention of these was made on the manifest. There were also thousands of of dollars worth of rugs, laces and shawls. Captain Huntley said the goods were personal property, and that he had brought them over for the purpose of decorating his cabins.

A Boon to Mankind.

The quickest, surest and best remedy for rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, sore throat, soreness and lameness, is Hagyard's Yellow Oil. It quickly cures sprains, bruises, burns, frostbites, chilblains, etc. Forcroupe, colds, quinsy, etc. take 10 to 30 drops on sugar and apply the oil externally also, when immediate relief will result.

In Canadian railway accidents for the year ending June, 1889, there were 210 persons killed and 875 injured. Of these 26 were killed and 141 injured on the Government railways. On the Canadian Pacific system 56 were killed and 252 injured; on the Grand Trunk system 104 were killed and 385 injured. The total number of passengers carried on the Government railways was 1,289,052, on the Canadian Pacific 2,457,306 and on the Grand Trunk 5,917,642.

Catarrh,

Catarrhal Deafness—Hay Fever

A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N.B.—This treatment is not a snuff or an ointment; both have been discarded by reputable physicians as injurious. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 West King Street, Toronto, Canada.—Toronto Globe.

Sufferers from Catarrhal troubles should carefully read the above.

The Teacher

Who advised her pupils to strengthen their minds by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, appreciated the truth that bodily health is essential to mental vigor. For persons of delicate and feeble constitution, whether young or old, this medicine is remarkably beneficial. Be sure you get Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring and fall I take a number of bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and am greatly benefited."—Mrs. James H. Eastman, Stoneham, Mass.

"I have taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla with great benefit to my general health."—Miss Thirza L. Crerar, Palmyra, Md.

"My daughter, twelve years of age, has suffered for the past year from

General Debility.

A few weeks since we began to give her Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Her health has greatly improved."—Mrs. Harriet H. Battles, South Chelmsford, Mass.

"About a year ago I began using Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for debility and neuralgia, resulting from malarial exposure in the army. I was in a very bad condition, but six bottles of the Sarsaparilla, with occasional doses of Ayer's Pills, have greatly improved my health. I am now able to work, and feel that I cannot say too much for your excellent remedies."—P. A. Pinkham, South Molunous, Me.

"My daughter, sixteen years old, is using Ayer's Sarsaparilla with good effect."—Rev. S. J. Graham, United Brethren Church, Buckhannon, W. Va.

"I suffered from

Nervous Prostration,

with lame back and headache, and have been much benefited by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I am now 80 years of age, and am satisfied that my present health and prolonged life are due to the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—Lucy Moffitt, Killingly, Conn.

Mrs. Ann H. Farnsworth, a lady 79 years old, No. Woodstock, Vt., writes: "After several weeks' suffering from nervous prostration, I procured a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken half of it my usual health returned."

A. & W. JOHNSTON,

Successors to H. E. Reid & Co.

HAVING purchased the stock of the late H. E. REID & CO., it is our intention to remove to the corner now occupied by our Hardware Store, and it is necessary to reduce the stock preparatory to moving. In order to do this, we have made a general reduction in all lines, everything having been marked down to slaughter prices. The stock is replete with all the latest novelties. Below we quote a few of the bona fide bargains we intend offering:

PRINTS.—We start a line of Washers at 7c. per yard.
A nice assortment Light Colors at 8c., regular price 10c.
" " Dark " " 10c., " " 12½c.
Scotch Zephyrs ..... " 7½c., " " 8c.

Dress Goods—All Dress Goods redured 25 per cent.

Tweed.—We offer $1.00 Tweed for 75c., 75c for 50c., 50c. for 40c.

Cottonades & Shirtings reduced in proportion.

READY-MADE CLOTHING.

We lead the Town in Ready-Mades, both Men's and Boys. Our stock is elegant order, having a full assortment sizes, thus affording customers a rare opportunity to procure a Spring Outfit at a very low figure. We make a specialty of BOYS' CLOTHING, and keep a large range to select from. We guarantee to suit you in Price, Fit and Quality.

MILLINERY DEPARTMENT.

This stock is all new, having been bought within the last month, we have already taken the lead in this department and we still hope to maintain it, if Low Prices, Stylish Goods and Courteous Milliners will do so. We are sure of success.

BOOTS & SHOES—We have our stock well-assorted and are bound to please in style and price.

GROCERY DEPARTMENT.

We have a choice stock of Fresh Groceries. Town orders delivered daily. We will add that we intend to keep the entire stock well assorted in every department, and our customers may always rely on being suited.

We hope that by strict attention to business and fair dealing to retain the patronage of the late H. E. Reid & Co.

We are, yours truly,

A. & W. JOHNSTON.

BURIED TREASURES.

'Tis true my latter years are blest
With all that plenty can bestow,
But there is wealth, wealth cannot buy,
Hid in the mines of "long ago."

There jealous guard does Memory keep;
Yet sometimes, when I dream alone,
She comes and takes my hand in hers,
And throws me what was once my own.

I revel among such precious things;
I count my treasures o'er and o'er;
I hark the worth of some, whose worth,
Ah me! I never knew before.

And then all slowly fade away,
And I return to things you know,
With empty hands and tearfilled eyes,
Back from the mines of "long ago."

THE UNFORTUNATE BUSTLE.

They stood within the festive hall;
There was a brilliant light,
She whispered, "sister Annie, dear,
Does my bustle sit just right?"

Her sister gave a hurried glance,
And answered, "Sakes alive!
The horrid thing has twisted so
'Tis right upon your side."

"Oh, shover it back," she flutly cried,
And Annie tried to do it,
But, alas! the treacherous string gave way,
And sadly she did rue it.

For in a dark, unsightly heap
There lay the shattered cone,
Which like Vesuvius of old,
Had towered in the morn.

There was mother's apron soiled and torn,
And baby's dirty frock,
There was brother Davie's undershirt,
And a pair of dad's old socks.

There was sister Annie's night gown, too,
Which was not a thing of beauty;
And all because that rotten string
Had failed to do its duty.

She gave a wild and frightened look,
And cried, "There comes my fellow,"
With a mad bound she cleared the ground
And landed in the cellar.

Now pretty maidens, one and all,
A lesson you should find;
That when you tie your bustle on
Use mother's new clothes line.

THE FIRE LIST.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 12.—At about halfpast five o'clock this morning a fire occurred in a small frame building on outskirts of the village which resulted in the death of two persons—a boy named Wm. Wynn, aged 13, and his grand mother, Mrs. Catharine Soules, aged about 80, and quite helpless. The grandmother was upstairs in bed and the rest of the family at breakfast downstairs when the fire was discovered in the roof evidently starting from a defective flue. The first thought was to carry out the goods, but the boy thought of his grandmother and rushed upstairs to bring her out, and was overtaken by the flames, and perished. When recovered the body of the boy was not badly burned, but only the trunk of the other was left. There was no insurance.

Cleveland, May 10.—This afternoon Mrs. William O'Keefe, of Washington street, sent her daughter Kate to a neighbor's for a bucket of water. The girl not returning O'Keefe went to ascertain the cause of the delay, and found his daughter at the hydrant with a neighbor, Mrs. Allie Daisy. Mrs. Daisy had O'Keefe's daughter by the hair, and the father rushed to the rescue. This brought Jimmie O'Donnel, who had been watching the women, to the aid of Mrs. Daisy. O'Doonel struck O'Keefe three savage blows in the face, knocking him senseless to the ground. Then jumping upon the prostrate man, the assailant kicked him viciously in the side, and, leaving him upon the ground, rushed down Winslow street and out of sight. A doctor and a priest came upon the scene, but O'Keefe was dead. The murderer has not been arrested.

Norwich, Ont., May 12.—This community has been somewhat taken by surprise during the past week by the sudden disappearance of the pastor of the Baptist church, Rev. J. Williamson, who left his home here on Wednesday evening last, leaving behind him, it is stated, a note to the effect that he was tired of continual and harassing domestic infelicity, and that his wife would not see him again. This briefly states all that is known about the actual fact of his leaving. He took his departure quietly, no one probably but himself knowing that he was leaving town without the intention of returning.

SMITH CONFESSES HIS CRIME.

LONDON, Ont., May 17.—In connection with Henry Smith's confession of the murder of his wife the prisoner says that he inflicted the bruises on the woman's head by beating her with the heavy Bible before he hit her with the poker. It is understood further that he accused his wife of improper intimacy with a soldier in the old country before their marriage, and this was the probable ground on which he was provoked into the crime.

Everyone Should Try,

TO secure good health. The great specific for all diseases arising from disordered stomach, such as overflow of bile, sick headache, loss of appetite, nausea, palpitation, indigestion, constipation and all blood diseases, is Burdock Blood Bitters. Hundreds of people owe their health to B. B. B., nature's regulator and tonic.

Ernest Jackson, a Simcoe coloured lad was crushed to death on Saturday by a piece of timber.

Owing to the railway war in the United States the rate from Winnipeg to Toronto has been reduced to $26.50.

The most agreeable, restorative tonic and mild stimulant is Milburn's Beef, Iron and Wine.

Duncan Campbell, of Truro, N. S., took medicine from the wrong bottle and died from the effects.

A FARMER of Ipswich, Mass, while ploughing in his field the other day, found an Indian idol in the shape of a serpent, an undoubted relic of the stone age.

HENRY SMITH, who has been on trial at London for the murder of his wife last February, was on Monday found guilty, and sentenced to be hanged on June 14.

EIGHT DROWNED.

A Fatality Caused by Saturday's Gale. The Jessie Brock Founded.

KINGSTON, May 18.—About one o'clock yesterday afternoon a schooner was noticed about four miles from Nine Mile Point laboring hard in the rough sea. She was seen to be throwed so much that she was likely to roll over altogether. At last she took the fatal roll and could not recover herself, but went over. As the schooner Jessie Brock, loaded with timber, was the only boat due here, it was thought she was the unfortunate vessel. Capt. Booth, the owner, immediately set to work to go to the rescue, but it was impossible to obtain a tug to go.

About four o'clock the steamer Hiram Calvin came from Garden Island and was sent up to the wreck. When about four miles from Nine Mile Point the vessel could be seen lying on her broadside, and her name could be made out, the Jessie Brock. On going close to her there was no sign of any person clinging to any part of the wreck. The lake was very rough, and the waves washing over her. Her sails were all set, but the foremast was broken off. Part of her stern was found half a mile away. An attempt was made this morning to tow her to Garden Island, but an anchor of the wrecked vessel had fastened itself to the bottom of the lake, and it was impossible to move her. A diver will be sent down to free the anchor.

EIGHT DROWNED.

This morning the yawl boat of the Jessie Brock was found upside down on the shore of Horse Shoe Island. There is no doubt but that all hands on board were drowned.

The following composed the crew:—
Thomas Mackie, captain.
Joseph Mackie, mate.
Maria Mackie, cook.
W. Mackie, seaman.
These four were brothers and sister
William Miller, seaman.
John Miller, seaman.
These two were father and son.
Frank George, seaman.
Donald McDonald, seaman.

All but George were residents of Wolfe Island. Capt Mackie was married, but had no children. Mate Mackie leaves a wife and two small children.

The Jessie Brock was not insured and was valued at $5,000. This was her first trip this season. She had been at the wreck of the steamer Armstrong all winter, and had taken a load of ice to Charlotte and was on her way back to Garden Island with a cargo of water soaked timber. She was thought to be one of the best boats on the lake. Last year $2,200 was spent in repairing her. The tug Johnston was engaged to day in gathering up the floating timber which had been washed off the deck of the wrecked vessel.

A Marvellous Recovery.

I was so ill with inflammatory rheumatism in 1882 that I was given up, and had all my earthly business put in order. One of my sons begged me to get Burdock Blood Bitters. After the third bottle I could sit up alone and eat a good meal, and in six weeks I was out cured feeling better than I ever felt. I take three bottles every spring, and two every fall.

MRS. M. N. D. BERARD, Main St., Winnipeg, Man.

TALKS WITH NO TONGUE.

A Man of Many Languages and No Taste in the Charity Hospital.

George Watson, a Texas ranchman, reached New York the latter part of November with a consignment of polo ponies from Grayson county. They were part of a purchase by James Gordon Bennett and Lord Lonsdale and were to be shipped to England. Watson had cancer of the tongue and went to the Charity Hospital. It was decided to remove his tongue, lower palate, and the lingual glands beneath the tongue. On the afternoon of Dec. 2 the operation was performed by Drs. J. E. Kelly and Cuthbert Gillam. For several months Watson took nourishment through a silver tube inserted into his œsophagus just below his right ear. He was unable to articulate at all for a month following the operation and the first words he uttered were shouted at a troublesome cat in his ward in the hospital. His language was idiomatic and emphatic. There are no outward indications to show that Watson is tongueless and palateless. His speech is hampered a great deal, his articulation being defective. He will always speak somewhat inarticulately. The greatest loss to him is the loss of all sense of taste and smell. Swallowing solids is a very difficult task for him, as he has lost the power to gulp food, which the tongue gives.

Watson was official interpreter for the Indians at Washington a dozen years ago. He spoke—or spoke—the Comanche, Priste, Pawnee, Ute, Shoshone et Arapahoe lingo. He was in the ranks of the Texas rangers and fought on the Confederate side during the rebellion.

Lame Back Cured.

"SEVEN years ago I was troubled with lame back and could scarcely move. Several remedies failed, but on trying Hagyard's Yellow Oil I found immediate relief, and two bottles effected a complete cure."

MAS. HOWLES, Corbett P. O., Ont.

AN ANGRY FATHER THRASHES HIM.

ST LOUIS, May 9.—Carl Schraubstader, a young merchant of this city, figured in a sensational episode at St. Joseph, Mo., to-day. He had been in St. Joe for a few days on a business trip, and while there became acquainted with Cora Leard, the 16 year-old daughter of J. C. Leard, a well known citizen. The pair met at a theatre and subsequently made arrangements to run off together to Denver. The girl's conduct aroused the suspicions of her father, and he followed her when she left home this morning. He saw her meet Schraubstader at a hotel, and the pair were about to enter a carriage to drive to the depot when the indignant parent declared himself.

He hit the masher under the ear and knocked him down. Schraubstader yelled at the top of his voice, and the girl screamed. The father, however, was an old slugger, and the way he dusted up the sidewalk with the fellow was a revelation to the onlookers. The police finally arrested him, and he gave bond and took his foolish girl home. The St. Louis man is laid up for repairs.

The prevalence of scrofulous taint in the blood is much more universal than many are aware. Indeed, but few persons are free from it. Fortunately, however, we have in Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the most potent remedy ever discovered for this terrible affliction.

William Cobertson, of Westville, N. S. was murdered on Thursday night by Daniel Robertson. His head and face were pounded to a jelly by an iron bar. Both were drunk.

PREFERRED DEATH TO CANCER.

ERIE, CENTRE CO., May 19.—A man named John Alexander, living near Goshen, in Goodell township, committed Friday night by cutting his throat. He suffered from cancer of the lip. He informed Thomas Wabon, a companion, that he intended to commit suicide, and when Wabon replied if he (Alexander) knew the consequences if he did, Alexander said:—"Yes, I know the consequences, and can stand them better than I can stand this cancer." He was found Saturday morning sitting on the side of the bed with his throat cut, and directly underneath the bed was a pail half filled with blood. Alexander was 70 years of age and had never married.

The entering wedge of a complaint that may prove fatal is often a slight cold, which a dose or two of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral might have cured at the commencement. It would be well, therefore, to keep this remedy ready in reach at all times.

Mrs. Dunlop, wife of the lighthouse keeper at the head of Simcoe Island, witnessed the wreck of the schooner Jessie Brock, and states that some of her crew clung to the vessel for three-quarters of an hour.

A marriage has been arranged between Henry M. Stanley and Miss Dorothy Tennant, who has become well known through her clever pictures in the Academy and other galleries.

Well Adapted.

THE effective action on the glandular system and the blood, and the general regulating tonic and purifying action of B. B. B., especially adapt it for the bilious, nervous, costive or scrofulous. From 3 to 6 bottles will cure all blood diseases from a common pimple to the worst scrofulous sore.

HORSE NOTES.

SOME OF THE GREAT HORSES THAT ARE ON THE ROAD.

The following is a list of some of the great horses that are traveling in this district this season:—

DUGALD.—This pure bred, prize-winning Clydesdale has recently been purchased by Mr. Wm. Jackson, of Cardwell. He is a dark bay, stripe on face, four legs black, little white on hind legs, and is three years old. He has taken first prizes at Brampton, Bolton, Woodbridge and Toronto, and Diploma and Silver Medal for the Best Previous Bred Horse of any age. He will stand this season at his own stable, lot 11, Centre Road, Mono.

TAM O'SHANTER, II., was sired by that noted horse Tam O'Shanter, owned by the late William Patterson, of Maxville. He possesses all the good qualities of his sire and is a first class general purpose stallion. His route is:

MONDAY, leaves his own stable, Lot 9, Con. 1, E. Mono, and proceed by way of Glenavon, to R. G. Buchanan's, for noon; thence to Joseph Henry's, Mono Centre, for night.

TUESDAY, proceed to Thos. Fearn's, for noon; thence to Shelburne, for night.

WEDNESDAY, proceed down 3rd line of Amaranth to ——, for noon; thence to John Keith's, for night.

THURSDAY, proceed to Laird, for noon; thence to Geo. Randell's, for night.

FRIDAY, proceed to ——, for noon; thence to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

W. E. HALL, Proprietor.

ROYAL CLEAR GRIT—a well-bred Trotting Stallion.—We referred to this horse in a previous issue of THE SUN. The route he will travel is:

MONDAY, he leaves his own stable, lot 24 2nd line, Melancthon, and proceed to W. Fraser's Lot 16 2nd line Mulmur, for noon; thence to Dean's Hotel Primrose, for night.

TUESDAY, he will proceed to Morrison's Hotel, Camilla, for noon; thence to the Dufferin House, Orangeville, for night.

WEDNESDAY, he will proceed to Dean's Hotel, Alton, for night.

THURSDAY, he will proceed to James Hilliard's, Lot 29, 5th Line, Caledon, for noon; thence to Wm Farmer's, Vanastra, for night.

FRIDAY, he will proceed to George Rennie's, Lot 6, 3rd Line, Amaranth, for noon; thence to Hinck's Hotel, Shelburne, for night.

SATURDAY, he will proceed to Horning's Mills, for noon; thence to his own stable and remain till the following Monday morning.

H. BUTCHER, Proprietor.

VALENTINE.—This well-bred trotting stallion, owned by Mr John Cobean, Bailieboro, comes from some of the best Canadian Trotting Stock. Valentine is a golden chestnut, rising 4 years old, stands 16 hands high, and weighs 1,200 lbs, and possesses all the qualities of a horse. The following is his route this season:

MONDAY, he leaves his own stable, Bailieboro, and proceeds to Hockley, for night.

TUESDAY, he will Proceed to Jno White's, Mono Centre, for noon; thence to Camilla, for night.

WEDNESDAY, he will proceed to Wm Dynes', Granger, for noon; thence to Mansfield, for night.

THURSDAY, he will proceed to McCarthy's Hotel, Rosemont, for night.

FRIDAY, he will proceed to Loretto, for noon; thence to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

ST. JOE.—Everybody knows or has seen that celebrated trotting coach stallion St. Joe. St. Joe is a beautiful black, 9 years old, stands 16 hands 3 inches high, and possesses all the qualities of a first class trotter. Messrs Dwyer & Kearns, of Charleston, can pride themselves on owning such a stepper. He will make the following route:

MONDAY, he leaves his own stable, Charleston, and proceed to Orangeville, for noon; thence to Mono Mills, for night.

TUESDAY to Connor, for noon; to Palgrave for night.

WEDNESDAY will proceed by Loskton, to Gott's, for noon; thence by Caledon East, to Sand Hill, for night.

THURSDAY, proceed by Campbell's Cross to Claude, for noon; thence home for night.

FRIDAY, proceed to Alton, for noon; thence to Cataract, for one hour; thence to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

CLEVELAND HAMBLETONIAN is a beautiful coach horse, the property of Mr. John White, Caledon. He has sired some of the best coach horses in America, one pair of which were sold in Philadelphia, before they were four years old, for the big sum of $3,700. His route this season is:—

MONDAY he leaves his own stable, lot 28, 2nd line East, Caledon, at noon, and proceed to Mono Mills, for one hour; thence to Galbraith's Hotel, Hockley, for night.

TUESDAY proceed to Henderson's Hotel, Rosemont, for noon, thence to Primrose, for one hour, thence to Witter's Hotel, Shelburne, for night.

WEDNESDAY, he will proceed to McGarvey's Hotel Laurel, for noon; thence by Whittington to Morrison's Hotel, Camilla, for night.

THURSDAY, he will proceed to the Paisley House, Orangeville and remain all night.

FRIDAY, he will proceed to Willis' Hotel, Alton, for noon; thence to Cataract, for one hour; thence to Burns' Hotel, Charleston, and remain all night.

SATURDAY, he will proceed to Dwyer's Hotel, Orangeville, for noon, and remain until 7 o'clock; thence to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

CALEDON'S PRIDE, or TELL WHAT'S WANTED.—Mr John Boylan, of Caledon, still owns this high-grade, heavy draught stallion. Young What's Wanted is 7 years old, stands 16½ hands high and was sired by What's Wanted, owned by T. & J. Little, Sand Hill. The following route will be continued during the season:

MONDAY, he leaves his own stable, Lot 18, Con. 2, East, Caledon and proceed to Jas Killen's, for noon; thence to John Howard's, Loskton, for night.

TUESDAY, he will proceed to Joseph Legat's for noon; thence to Cedarville, for one hour; thence to John Carroll's, Colgan, for night.

WEDNESDAY, he will proceed to Lorretto, for noon; thence to Wm. Spence's for two hours; thence to John O'Leary's, for night.

THURSDAY, he will proceed to Thomas McFarlane's, for noon; thence to Henry Moffatt's, for night.

FRIDAY, he will proceed to Mr Garvey's, for noon; thence by Third Line to his own stable, for night.

SATURDAY, he will proceed to Dwyer's Hotel, Charleston, and back to his own stable, where he will remain till the following Monday morning.

BONNIE SCOTLAND.—This well known heavy Draught is the property of Mr John Aikens, proprietor of the Royal Hotel, Mono Mills. Bonnie Scotland is a sure foal-getter and his colts take a red ticket wherever shown. He leaves his own stable, Royal Hotel, on MONDAY, and proceed to Joseph Legat's, Connor, for noon; thence to Hockley, for night.

TUESDAY, he will proceed to John Laverty's, 7th Line, Mono, for noon; thence to Andrew McCaig's, Reinsay, for two hours; thence to Jonathan Flatt's, 3rd line, for night.

WEDNESDAY, he will proceed to Thos. White's, Glen Cross, for noon; thence to Thomas Holmes', for night.

THURSDAY, he will proceed to Michael Armstrong's, 1st East, Caledon, for noon; thence to Dean's Hotel, Alton, for night.

FRIDAY, he will proceed to John Lamont's, for noon; thence to Isaac Cherry's, 4th Line, for night.

SATURDAY, he will proceed to Edward Scimore's, 1st line, Albion, for noon; thence to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

A FAMOUS QUARTO.—John Gilkinson & Son Co. are proprietors of four of the best stallions in Canada. Caleb Ho is a recently imported heavy draught, and is the genuine stamp of a horse of the first water. His pedigree would take up too much space here, and we will have to refer the reader to his route bills for particulars. The firm still own that famous coal black trotter, Dufferin, which took first prizes all over the country. The great Irish Thoroughbreds, Ashtrim and Pough-a-Ballough, have recently been added to this stable. Dufferin and Ashtrim will make the season as follows:

MONDAY, they will leave their own stable, Commercial Hotel, Orangeville, and proceed to the Royal Hotel, Mono Mills, for noon; thence Corbett's Hotel, Hockley, for night.

TUESDAY, they will proceed to Mono Centre, for noon; thence by Primrose to Witter's Hotel, Shelburne, for night.

WEDNESDAY, they will proceed to Whittington, for noon; thence to their own stable, for night.

THURSDAY, they will proceed to Marsville, for noon; thence to Cole's Hotel, Hillsburg, for night.

FRIDAY, they will proceed to Cargill, for noon; thence to Revell Hotel, Charleston, for night.

SATURDAY, he will proceed to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

HOPE

No VIII General & Nervous Debility. This is an incomparable remedy for It is positive in its effects. Does it and does quick. Ask for Hospital Remedy for General Debility. Price $1.00.

Read this attract from the scientific papers of Great Britain and Europe:

The four greatest medical centres of the world are London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna. These cities have immense hospitals teeming with suffering humanity. Crowds of students throng the wards studying under the Professors in charge. The most renowned physicians of the world teach and practice here, and the institutions are storehouses of medical knowledge and experience. With a view of making this experience available to the public the Hospital Remedy Co. at great expense secured the prescriptions of these hospitals, prepared the specifics, and although it would cost from $25 to $100 to secure the attention of their distinguished originators, yet in this way their prepared specifics are offered at the price of the quack patent medicines that flood the market and absurdly claim to cure every ill from a single bottle.

A DANGER SIGNAL

A Cold in the Head may be aptly termed a danger signal warning you that if neglected that dangerous and disagreeable disease, Catarrh, is sure to follow, perhaps leading to Consumption and the grave. At no season of the year is Cold in the Head more prevalent than during the Spring months and at no other season do the people of this country suffer more generally from Catarrh, with all its disagreeable and annoying effects. Do not for an instant neglect either of these troubles, but apply NASAL BALM, the only remedy that will give instant relief and effect a thorough cure. The following testimonials from among thousands in our possession bear witness to its sterling merit.

Alex. Burns, Bedbury, Ont., says: I may state that I have been affected with Catarrh seven or eight years, and it was attended by consequent symptoms such as foul breath, constant dropping into the throat, hawking and spitting, partial deafness, ringing in the ears and sickening pains in the head directly over either eye. I have used powders and douches, but all to no effect, the only result arising from the use of such was temporary relief, followed by the usual symptoms in a more aggravated form. The results arising from the use of Nasal Balm: Sweet breath, stoppage of the droppings into the throat, (consequently less hawking and spitting), clearness of hearing, and not once since I began to use Balm I had pain in the head. In fact, it is my opinion that a careful and persistent use of the Balm will effect a cure in the worst case of catarrh.

T. D. D. Loyd, 8 Clarence street, Toronto, says: I wish here to testify to the unequalled healing powers of your Nasal Balm. I have been troubled for three years by what the doctors call post nasal catarrh, and have tried everything in the city that could be obtained, in the shape of catarrh cures, and found no permanent relief from any of them, till a friend one day advised me to try your Nasal Balm, and I find that even one bottle has done me more good than all the medicines put together that I have persecuted myself with before. I was very much troubled with spitting and hawking, especially in the morning, so much so that my throat was continually in a raw condition, but I am now beginning to know what it is to be able to speak freely. I shal lnot fail to recommend it to any of my friends suffering from the like disease.

NASAL BALM INSTANTLY RELIEVES Cold in the Head.

A. W. Mallory, Mallorytown, Ont., says: My daughter suffered for years from a most distressing and annoying Catarrh. Her case was under the treatment of eminent physicians in the United States and Canada. Two months use of Nasal Balm has had more beneficial effects than all former treatment combined.

L. D. Dion, Dept. Railways and Canals, Ottawa, says: I am very glad to give you to day the testimony that Nasal Balm has completely cured my catarrh, from which I suffered for nearly three years.

If Nasal Balm is not kept in stock by your dealer it will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 Cents for small and $1 for large size bottles) by addressing:

NASAL BALM POSITIVELY CURES CATARRH.

D. Derbyshire, Mayor of Brockville and President of the Ontario Creamery Association, says: Nasal Balm beats the world for Catarrh and Cold in the Head. In my own case it effected relief from the first application.

Isaac Waterman, Imperial Oil Co'y, Petrolia, Ont., says: Nasal Balm gave me the most perfect satisfaction of any medicine I ever used for Cold in the Head. I found it easy to use, quick in giving relief and effect a complete cure in a couple of hours.

Beauty

Is desired and admired by all. Among the things which may best be done to enhance personal beauty in the daily use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. No matter what the color of the hair, this preparation gives it a lustre and pliancy that adds greatly to its charm. Should the hair be thin, harsh, dry, or turning gray, Ayer's Hair Vigor will restore the color, bring out a new growth, and render the old soft and shiny. For keeping the scalp clean, cool, and healthy, there is no better preparation in the market.

"I am free to confess that a trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor has convinced me that it is a genuine article. Its use has not only caused the hair of my wife and daughter to be but it has given my rather stunted mustache a respectable length and appearance."—R. Britton, Oakland, Ohio.

"My hair was coming out (without any assistance from my wife, either). I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor, using only one bottle, and I now have as fine a head of hair as any one could wish for."—R. T. Schmitton, Dickson, Tenn.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor in my family for a number of years, and regard it as the best hair preparation I know of. It keeps the scalp clean, the hair soft and lively, and preserves the original color. My wife has used it for a long time with most satisfactory results."—Benjamin M. Johnson, M. D., Thomas Hill, Mo.

"My hair was becoming harsh and dry, but after using half a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor it grew black and glossy. I cannot express the joy and gratitude I feel."—Mabel C. Hardy, Delavan, Ill.

THE THORN AND ROSE.

If I should write in lines of truth
On this white glossy page,
The dreams of early maiden youth
Or still more rapt age,
Or paint the feelings of the mind
Through each succeeding morn,
We then would see 'tis hard to find
The rose without its thorn.

The sun, that lights the early morn
So beautiful and bright,
May long ere noon behind a storm
Be hidden from our sight.
The very atmosphere we breathe
In evenings sweet repose,
Reminds us still that we may find
The thorn with the rose

When in the spring with lightsome step
We tread the grassy plain,
We think not of bleak autumn wind
Or winter's storm and rain,
Or when we pull the blossoms sweet
That some sweet bush adorn,
We little think behind that flower
Lies hid the dangerous thorn.

So through this life which ever way
Our wandering steps are bent,
The pleasures of each passing day
May end in discontent,
In every stage, from youth to age
The solemn truth disclose.
Through every clime, we're sure to find
The thorn as well as rose.

CHAPTER XVII.

A LOVE STORY.

IT was an arduous life, but Silvia found that its constant requirements did her good. She was learning the noblest, grandest lesson that can be learned—how to forget her own cares and sorrows in ministering to others.

There were times when she looked at Mrs. Thornton and wondered whether there was another fate in this world like hers. Then she wondered over the inscrutable mysteries of life—how it was that love was so often given in vain—lavished on the least deserving, and withheld when it would have given life itself. If this unhappy lady lying before her eyes had but married some one who would have cared for her tenderly, she might have lived and been happy.

She was sitting one evening by Mrs. Thornton's side; she had been reading to her, talking to her, doing everything in her power to take her thoughts from that erring husband, but it was all in vain.

"I suppose," said Mrs. Thornton, "that every life, if its story were written, would be more or less of a romance. Would your life make a story Mrs. Rymer?"

How old a story she little guessed.

"I can hardly tell," replied Silvia; "it would only be first volume of a story, after all."

"And mine would reach the third; very soon the time will come when the last page will be turned, and 'Finis' written at the end."

"You should drive all such mournful thoughts out of your head," said Silvia, gently; "they do you no good."

"But what if they will not go when you drive them, Mrs. Rymer? I have been thinking to-night what a strange, sad story my life is, but how simple and brief. If I read it in print I should lay the book down with a sigh, and wonder why such a sad, painful story had been written."

"We see only half our own lives," said Silvia; "the other half we shall know nothing of till we are in another world."

"Why are there so many sad lives?" said Mrs. Thornton. "I do not believe God ever meant it to be so."

"It is the sin and crime of men and women that make sad lives," said Silvia; "one person suffers for another, and so the tale of sin and sorrow goes on, and and will go on until the world ends."

"And the little story will be unnoticed and unknown in the midst of thousands of others. I shall have loved my love, and lived my life, and all in vain."

"Not all in vain, if Heaven comes in the end," said Silvia; and Mrs. Thornton lay for some time with her bright, eager, restless eyes raised to the evening skies.

"I can remember when I was quite young," she said, "that the chief charm of life seemed to be its endless possibilities—there seemed no limit to hope, no bound to dreams; life was like space. Now it is all over, narrowed to a small point, and even that will soon vanish. When I was young I thought no one ever had so bright a future as mine, now there is no future. Mrs. Rymer, would it interest you to hear this story of my life? I have a restless fever on me to-night, and it would do me good to tell you."

"If it would not distress you," said Silvia, "I should like to hear it very much. I should understand better if I knew it, perhaps."

"It is such a simple story, there is hardly anything to tell. I was left an orphan at quite an early age, so you see there has not been much love in my life. I do not remember my father, and I was only seven when my mother died.

"She left me to the care of a cousin Mrs. Flanders, who was a lady of very limited means, who was always very kind to me. I lived with her at Clapham. When I was ten she sent me to a boarding-school, and I led a quiet, not unhappy life for ten years.

"Then a great change came. My mother's brother, who had gone to India in his youth, and had, we believe, either died or forgotten all about us, was found to be a millionaire; his fortune was enormous. He had neither wife nor child, and he died, leaving it all to me. He had left a friend of his, in London—an old Indian merchant—my guardian. The money was my own to do what I would with, and I, to tell the truth, did not know what to do with it. My income would amount, they said, to something like twenty thousand per annum. Mr. Latham used to tell me jestingly that I must marry an earl and be a countess, but I only wanted some one to love.

"It was all sunshine and happiness until my cousin died. I was only seventeen, and my guardian said I had better make my home at his house for a year or two. Ah, me! it was sad enough—no father, mother, sister or brother, no kinsman to love—to live always with strangers, and I had, unfortunately for myself, a tender, affectionate heart—love was as needful to me as the fresh air I breathed, or the food I ate.

"Mrs. Latham was a woman who went into fashionable society, and seemed to live for that purpose alone; she made it her one great study—and never wearied of telling me that she should expect me, with my youth and large fortune, to make a brilliant marriage. All that is commonplace enough, is it not Mrs. Rymer?"

"No," replied Silvia, "it was a terrible thing to be left so entirely alone in the world, and a still more terrible thing to have such great wealth."

Mrs. Thornton sighed.

"I did not think so then, but I do now. I used to tell Mrs. Latham that I had not the least wish to marry what she called well, but that I did fervently hope that some day I might marry for love.

"We must have no sentimental nonsense, Miss Hope," she would answer. "If you are not a countess it will be a great disappointment to me."

"But although I had plenty of admirers, I did not see any one for whom I cared. Mrs. Latham used to lecture me until I was wearied.

"Why did you not dance with Lord Vavasour?" she would say, or it would be:

"Miss Hope, do you know the person whom you chose to dance with three times to-night is only a clerk at Somerset house?"

"I used to tell her, jestingly, that it was very tiresome people did not go about labeled with their names, income, position, and expectations.

"One evening we went to the grand ball at the Mansion house—it was given in honor of some celebrated royal visitor—and there I met my husband—Gustave Thornton. He was introduced to me by some lady friend. You will not be surprised, Mrs. Rymer, if I tell you that I loved him the first moment I saw him, and I have loved him so dearly and so truely ever since—not unsought, you must understand. If he had not seemed to care for me, I should never have owned to myself that I liked him—never; but he won me. You, who only see him now, cannot imagine how dearly—he was like my shadow, and I—

"I can remember, even now, every loving word he ever spoke to me—every loving look he ever gave me. I can remember every time I met him, every flower he ever gave me—every little detail of our happy courtship—every trivial incident that arrived; that are all impressed upon my heart, and they will never fade. Sometimes I have thought I should be like Queen Mary, and that when I die his name will be round my heart.

"You would either laugh or cry if I told you how I loved; indeed, I could not tell. All the love and affection that other girls give to parents, sisters, and friends, I gave to him. I had only him in the wide, wide world; no one else, I believe. May Heaven pardon me that I worshipped him. Yet, you must remember, not unsought—never unsought.

"The time came when there was no room in my heart for any other thought; my first idea in the morning was whether I should see him, and what he would say.

"I saw him every day; he seldom called at our house, but in the park, at the opera, at all the balls, parties, and soirees, there he was, and he managed it so cleverly, too, that Mrs. Latham never had the least idea of it.

"I am not an earl," he used to say to me, with a smile, "so that I must mind what I am doing."

"And while my guardian's wife was scheming to obtain for me one of the most brilliant marriages in London, I was thinking and dreaming only of him.

"One evening we went to a ball at Mrs. Falcon's, Mrs. Latham and myself. When we entered the room I saw him looking for me, and after a time he came up and asked me to dance with him.

"You must say no" whispered my chaperon. "Here comes Lord Vavasour.

"But I paid no heed to her. What was Lord Vavasour, or Lord any one else compared to him? What, indeed? I placed my hand on his arm and walked away with him, leaving Mrs. Latham lost in surprise.

"I am not quite sure whether that was prudent," said my lover, with a laugh. "I am not an earl, and Mrs. Latham may take you away from me."

"I laughed, and thought in my heart there was little fear of that; I would not be taken from him to be crowned Queen of England."

CHAPTER XVIII.

AN UNHEEDED WARNING.

Mrs. Thornton lay silent for a few minutes. "You are quite sure that I am not tiring you?" she said.

"On the contrary," said Silvia. "I am more interested than I can tell you; it is a real romance."

The pale face brightened.

"Is it? I am so glad. I thought there was nothing romantic in my life. I must finish my story. That night I saw that Mrs. Latham was watching me but I did not care. True, Mr. Thornton had not asked me to be his wife, but I knew that he loved me, and poor, untrained, ignorant child that I was I would have defied the whole world for his dear sake. I danced with him, talked to him, went down to supper with him; he held my flowers, my fan; he put my shawl over my shoulders, and escorted me to my carriage, while Mrs. Latham preserved a dignified silence. Just before we drove off, while she was engaged in speaking to the coachman, he bent down and asked me for the flower I had been wearing all the evening.

"I gave it to him, and he kissed it passionately.

"Could you contrive to meet me in Kensington Gardens to-morrow afternoon at three?" he asked.

"I will do so," I replied; and he had no time to say more, for Mrs. Latham, without paying the least attention to him ordered the coachman to drive home.

"I quite expected that she would scold or remonstrate with me, but to my surprise she did not say a word. When we reached home Mr. Latham was awaiting us. He looked unusually smiling.

"Come this way one minute," he said and we followed him to the library. He took a letter from the table.

"I cannot help saying that I am very delighted," he began. "I could not have been better satisfied; and I feel that we have done our duty to our old friend's child—you, my dear, especially; and the result is very satisfactory to us. Lord Vavasour has sent a proposal for Miss Hope, and he trusts that she will consent to be his wife."

Mrs. Latham looked delighted.

"I am very glad," she said; "I thought he would do so, he seemed quite fascinated.

"There can be but one answer to such a question, of course," said Mr. Latham. "Lord Vavasour is, I should say, the best match in England, he is not only a nobleman of great wealth, of the highest position, but he is also of the most unblemished character. As Lady Vavasour, Clara, you will be one of the most enviable women in England.

"Then I thought it time to speak.

"I am not going to marry Lord Vavasour," I said quietly.

Mr. Latham's face grew dark. "May I ask why not?" he said.

"Because I do not love him, and I should not love him if there were no one else left in the world to love."

"My guardian laughed. "I thought you were more sensible than most young ladies," he said: 'but I see you are just the same. You will think quite differently in a few days—perhaps even by to-morrow morning you will have altered your mind. Of course I shall not take you at your word. I shall let the answer to Lord Vavasour wait for a time."

"I assured him that, let it wait as long as he might, I should never change but he only laughed, and would not believe that I was serious.

"No girl in her senses could ever refuse to marry Lord Vavasour," he said "I cannot believe that you mean anything of the kind."

"Then, seeing that I could produce no impression by anything I said, I went to my own room. Most probably my guardian and his wife had a long conversation about me, for the next morning I was sent for to the library, and found Mr. Latham awaiting me alone; Mrs. Latham was not present—probably she intended giving me the opportunity of receiving a good lecture.

"My guardian placed a chair for me.

"My dear Clara," he said "this will be the first time that you and I have come into collision. I have always found you tractable, obedient, and docile."

"So I hope always to be guardian," I replied.

"Then we must consider the matter about Lord Vavasour," he said; "and at the same time I wish to give you a serious warning. My dear Clara, I have only your interest at heart; I speak for your good, and nothing else—I have no other motive. Your father trusted you to me; I must do my best for you. Will you take advice from a true and sincere friend?"

"That indeed I will," I replied.

"'I must tell you, because it is my duty to do so, that Gustave Thornton is neither more or less than a fortune-hunter.' "I did not believe it then, Mrs. Rymer, and I do not believe it now; but the words struck me like a sharp sword. My face flushed and I could not speak one word.

"'He is a handsome man,' continued my guardian—'that much I admit; but when that is said, all is said. I have known him in a casual way, on and off, for years, and that is all I know in his favor.'

"'I know more than that,' I said, tremblingly.

"'Indeed!' said my guardian, with a smile. What do you know—good, I mean?'

"'I know that he is the most chivalrous and the noblest of men,' I replied.

"My guardian laughed again.

"'Why, Clara, my dear, has it gone so far?' he said, good-temperedly. 'I had no idea of this. It must not go on. I know still more, child—more than I like to tell you. Gustava Thornton is a fortune hunter, and he is something worse. He is a man utterly without principle, without honor, without honesty—a man to be dreaded and shunned.'

"'Stop!' I cried, angrily. 'I will not hear one word more—not one word. You only say this because he is poor.'

"'Nay, my poor Clara; you are quite mistaken. The mischief is deeper than I thought. You shall refuse Lord Vavasour if you will, but you must get out of this danger. You must leave London at once. We will go on a trip to Italy, and you shall see the most beautiful cities of the world.'

"But I was angry, Mrs. Rymer, and would not answer him; I thought that nothing in the world should ever take me from my love. I went up to my own room and remained there. Mrs. Latham came in to speak to me, but I would not hear anything she had to say; and in the afternoon I went out to Kensington Gardens to meet my lover.

"Of course, I had cried violently; equally as a matter of course, he asked me why, and I told him.

"Then he asked me to be his wife. He said that he loved me so dearly that he could not do without me—that he had said nothing of it before, because he felt the disparity between my riches and his poverty so greatly, but that, rather than I should be made unhappy, he would risk all.

"The end you may guess, Mrs. Rymer. He persuaded me to run away with him—I was willing; and that afternoon, before we parted, every arrangement had been made for our elopement.

"People say that an elopement never prospers. Would my life have been different?

"I need not dwell on that part of my story, Mrs. Rymer. I went with him—married him; and now I will tell you how I have fared since."

CHAPTER XIX.

"DO YOU THINK HE LOVES ME?"

WHAT a sad story it was—what a parody on human love—what a caricature! This lingering death and blighted life was the result of romance and passion; this long, slow agony the end of love that had once seemed immortal!

Mrs. Thornton finished that sad story one evening when a fit of restlessness was strong upon her.

"My guardians never forgave me," she said. "Mrs. Latham never spoke to me again; she would have it that I had most basely deceived her. She told every one how foolish I had been to refuse a nobleman like Lord Vavasour, in order to elope with a fortune-hunter. Oh, Mrs. Rymer! of all my grief, that was the deepest, to hear my husband called a fortune hunter! I had two or three terrible interviews with my guardian; his authority over me ended with my marriage, and he told me that owing to my having married without any settlement, all my large fortune became my husband's without reserve—that I had no longer any claim even to an allowance; everything was his.

"How stern my guardian's face was 'If you had consulted me about your marriage,' said he, 'I could at least have advised you. If I had found that you were bent upon sacrificing yourself, I should have seen that proper provision was made for you.'

"'I shall always have proper provision!' I replied indignantly.

"'I hope it may be so,' said Mr. Latham gravely, 'but I doubt it. Your husband, I warned you, was a fortune-hunter. You knew that he was both spendthrift and gambler. He can make ducks and drakes of your money at his will, there is nothing to prevent him. No girl ever made such a terrible fiasco. However, it is done now, and all talking is in vain, utterly in vain; I can do nothing more for you. The fortune that might have made you a happy woman I shall have the misery of paying over to a man who is unworthy of it and of you.'

"I told him, Mrs. Rymer, that he must not speak ill of the man I had married. He only sighed deeply.

"'Poor child!' he said. 'I am sorry to lose you, but there can be no more interviews between us. Your husband has proved himself what he is by taking advantage of your youth and folly; that

Vote for Barr.

HOW TO MARK YOUR BALLOT.

WHEN you step into the polling booth on the 9th of this month, mark your ballot for BARR and the Meredith Government. Thusly:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1 | BAILEYGeorge Bailey, of the Township Melancthon, Farmer. | |
| 2 | BARRJohn Barr, of the Village of Shelburne, Physician. | X |
| 3 | GAVILLERA. C. Gaviller, of the Village of Grand Valley Physician. | |

OUR CANDIDATE AT WORK.

ALTHOUGH Dr. Barr's election is a foregone conclusion, he and his supporters have not been idle since nomination day. They are holding meetings all over the country and are meeting with great success. Everywhere they go they are courteously received. On Friday night Dr Barr held rousing meetings at Marsville and Perry's schoolhouse, Mono. Some place the doctor's majority at seven hundred, while the more sanguine think it will reach one thousand.

A GRIT IN THE FIELD.

THE Reformers of this Conservative constituency have brought out Mr. George Bailey, reeve of Melancthon, to face Dr. Barr, the Conservative, and Dr. Gaviller, the Prohibitionist. We imagine the Reformers know perfectly well what Mr. Bailey's fate will be—defeat. But if they succeed in cutting down Dr. Barr's majority, then, they claim, will be a victory, and jubilant they will feel.

Mr. Bailey is a man well known for his honesty and integrity, but those excellent qualities don't always send a man to parliament. The fact that he supports a government which the people of this province are well nigh tired of is sufficient to warrant his rejection. On the other hand, Dr. Barr supports the very popular platform of W. R. Meredith, who gives equal rights to all and special privileges to none. Such a government the people of this province want.

MR. MCGHEE RESIGNS.

UP until the last minute on nomination day Mr Robt McGhee stuck to his declaration that he would be a candidate for Dufferin in the coming elections. Just as Returning Officer Bowles was closing the proceedings for the day, Mr. McGhee walked up and told the sheriff to withdraw his name, as he intended to retire from the fray.

Readers of THE SUN will remember that Mr McGhee was brought out as the farmers' candidate by a convention of the members of the Dufferin Farmers Institute held at Shelburne a couple of weeks ago. From the way things were running we were satisfied that Mr McGhee would not stand a chance of being elected, and THE SUN frankly told him so. After the Conservative convention met at Shelburne, we unhesitatingly and strongly supported the candidature of Dr. Barr, the unanimous choice of a thoroughly representative convention. And we are patiently waiting until the day after tomorrow to see Dr. Barr with M. P. P. after his name.

CARDWELL.

(Tottenham Sentinel.)

IN the nature of things it was not expected that much excitement would accompany the election contest in this county, but one fact is steadily developing itself, and that is a determination among farmers to seek some measures of right in legislative representation.

They are surely, even if slowly, arriving at the conclusion that parliamentary legislation, has all along the line, tended towards the interest of the professions, the combinations and the political heelers, while the agriculturist has been graciously permitted to approach the ballot box simply to further the designs of the classes whose interests were diametrically opposed to his. On the principal that

> He who by the plow would thrive
> Himself must either hold or drive,

our agricultural friends are coming to the conclusion that if they desire laws favorable to their wants they must take a hand in the framing. They have been aware of the wisdom of this for some time, and often talked quietly over the propriety of nominating a candidate, but, while they were slowly deliberating over the matter in some cases out of ten some gabby, I mean professional had jaggled them out of the convention. Conventions would be all right if properly carried out and if arrangements were made to elect the honest and spontaneous wishes of the people, but its now an everyday history that the modern convention is merely an arena in which the most expert pocker generally secures the prize and the latter contest and goes to the wall. Or this aggregate body now pays any attention to the result of a convention.

Apart from the desire of the farming community to secure a representative of their own interests in this great agricultural riding, a generous feeling pervades all classes of the electorate that Mr Hammell is entitled to another term for many reasons. When this riding was held by the Reform party, and when it was almost a forlorn hope for a Conservative candidate, very few of our political friends were willing to volunteer their services for the scaling ladder, but now, when the change in the boundaries has rendered it a sure thing for the party, there is no trouble in obtaining candidates.

Mr. Hammell's personal popularity redoomed the riding, the costs of which were augmented by two heavy election trials, and we think to wound him in the bosom of his friends is simply base ingratitude. Apart from the necessity of having more representatives of agricultural interests, our present member is a scion of one of Cardwell's oldest and most respected families, and malignity itself dare not suggest a dereliction of political duty against the name.

These are some of the reasons why Mr. Hammell's present canvass is such an unvarying success, and points towards triumphant return, which is fully conceded, the only question now being one of majority.

THE NOMINATION.

The day being fine, a large number of the free and independent attended the nomination. Jas. Fleming, Esq., of Brampton, was Returning Officer. Mr. Hammell was nominated by James Donaby, of Albion, and seconded by Wm. Atkinson, of Tecumseth. Mr. Lennox was nominated by John Robinson, of Tecumseth, and seconded by John Mason, of Adjala.

Mr. Hammell, in addressing the audience, said he was once more before them as a candidate for Cardwell; had been elected three times and stood two election trials. The convention was sprung upon him when he was engaged in the legislature attending to the people's wants. Mr. Lennox's statement, that the people were dissatisfied with their present member, hardly agreed with his other assertion, that he was not acquainted with the electors at all. For the three conventions before which he had come he never solicited a vote. More farmers should be sent to local house. Lawyers were making laws that they could not themselves decipher, as witness, the municipal act. The convention was called by private circular three or four days before the meeting, and I received no notice of executive meeting in four years. I now find that many electors were approached before convention, and being found favorable to me were not elected delegates. Innisfil, with 1246 voters had 55 delegates, while W. Gwillimbury, with 997 voters had only 20 delegates, and Tecumseth, with 1011 voters, only 30 delegates. Everything leading to the convention was most unfair and that was why he was before them to day. Lennox admits he was six days in Albion before the convention. He was trapped into seconding a motion for making Lennox's nomination unanimous before he was aware of the circumstances attending the convening of the nomination. He knew the people loved fair play, even in election matters, and that they would again, for the fourth time extend him a renewal of their confidence.

After a few remarks for Mr. Robinson, not in the direction of harmony, took the stand, saying he was not posing as Mr. Hammell's superior. Didn't know Mr. Willoughby until after the convention. Didn't think there was anything suspicious about the convention. Did not know Mr Hammell was opposing him until he was three or four weeks in the field. Innisfil was entitled to 55 delegates in accordance with her conservative population. Hammell had agreed to the scale of representation. Went to Albion before convention merely to introduce myself, being a stranger. Messrs. McCarthy & Pelper reduced their costs by $298 in the election trial, leaving Mr. Hammell to pay in all only $1056.

If we have bad laws what did Mr. Hammell do towards amending them? Was in favor of bi-ennial sessions, fewer members and laws not changed so often. Was opposed to French being taught in schools. Separate schools can be abolished if the people wish. Too much religion taught in separate schools.

Messrs. Booth and Semple had nothing to say, both candidates were Tory.

Dr. Robinson thanked the electors for past favors. Expected to hear the government attacked but was disappointed. Dalton McCarthy was no Equal Rights or he would have opposed Rykert's re-election. Meredith backed the Dominion government in attempting to steal territory from Ontario worth $150,000,000. They should go slow on the separate school abolition question. If Ontario abolished her 238 Catholic schools, 980 Protestant schools in Quebec would follow suit. Out of $7,000 contributed to the school funds by Ontario Catholics they only received $1,000 back.

After a few words from Wm. McDermott and Col Tyrwhitt, Mr. Hammell said the $250 reduction in Mr McCarthy's bill was made by the taxing officer.

> In voting for Dr. Barr you are doing your duty to secure an honest Government for Ontario.

EDITORIAL NOTES

H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught was sworn at Toronto on Friday.

THE typesetters employed on the Montreal Herald have gone out on strike.

MR. George J. Bryan a well-known newspaper man of Buffalo, died at that place on Friday.

AN interesting fight is going on in Peel between Public School Inspector J. L. Hughes of Toronto, and Kenneth Chisholm of Brampton. The Grits have their biggest guns in the field, spouting for the latter candidate.

THE campaign goes bravely on in Cardwell. Farmer Hammell and Lawyer Lennox, both Conservatives, are struggling for supremacy. People who know say Mr. Hammell will be elected by four or five hundred of a majority.

EVERY Grit exchange that came to our office last week had a supplement containing the speeches delivered at the Liberal gathering at Toronto last week. If campaign literature can reinstate corrupt administration, Mowat will surely cross Rubicon.

OWING to polling day falling on Thursday the day this paper is published, THE SUN shines two days earlier this week. On Friday morning we will issue a special edition, giving the result of Thursday's polling throughout the province. We earnestly hope that we will be able to chronicle. "Mowat has Gone."

Local Intelligence.

Good roads.

Delightful weather.

The town council met last evening.

All kinds of feed at the Stone Mill.

Mr. Adam Jones is recovering from his recent illness.

Chopping done for 7 per cent at the Stone Mill.

The ice-cream business has commenced to boom in town.

The Amaranth council met as a court of revision on Saturday.

Promenaders took advantage of Broadway on Saturday night.

The Dufferin county council meet in the court house here to-day (Tuesday) at 2 o'clock.

The county meeting of the Dufferin L. O. L. will be held here on Saturday afternoon, June 7th.

Patrick McCloskey, a well known old man, spent Friday night in the lockup. He left town next day.

The Orange battalion of Toronto, numbering four hundred strong, will picnic at Orangeville on Saturday, June 14th.

For the month ending May 31st, there were no births, two marriages and five deaths registered at the town clerk's office.

We are glad to see that Mr. J. F. Ewings, who was injured in a runaway accident some time ago, is able, with the aid of crutches, to be around again.

Some people are finding fault with Mr. Bailey for the way he repaired the east Broadway hill. We guess W. T. will be able to explain matters in due time.

THE SUN is recognized as the advertising medium of Dufferin. Even the far seeing Reform leaders of this town placed their campaign meeting ad. in this edition.

Alf. Pearson, who was mentioned in THE SUN a couple of weeks ago as having been arrested at St. Thomas, was sentenced to three months in the Central prison at Toronto.

A certain editor met a well educated farmer recently and informed him that he would like to have something from his pen. The farmer sent him a pig and charged him $9.75 for it.

Here is a notice to burglars given by an exchange:—All burglars are hereby notified not to pay us an nocturnal visits with the expectation of getting money. If they want our money they must call on our delinquent subscribers.

Who weeps when you are sad, and laughs when you are glad, and smiles when you are mad? The editor. Who has to be both kind and wise, and never (hardly ever) lies, and when he does creates surprise? The editor. Who owns a heart as well as cheek, possessed of spirit, yet is meek, and lives on 40 cents a week? The editor.

> Dr. Barr is the unanimous Nominee of the Conservative Party. Elect him on Thursday.

FULL OF BLOOM.—The orchards at the present time are in the full glory of their early summer bloom, being literally covered therewith. Should nothing untoward occur, the prospects for fruit of all kinds are simply grand.

LOST.—About eight weeks ago, a Scotch terrier dog, answering to the name of "Snider.". Any person giving such information as will lead to his recovery, or bringing him to THE SUN office will be suitably rewarded.

DO NOT SWEAR.—An exchange says: Do not swear. There is no occasion to swear outside of a printing office. It is useful in proof reading, and in getting forms to press and has been known to assist in looking over the paper when printed, but otherwise it is a very disgusting habit.

THE INDIAN LACROSSE TEAM.—The following are the names and positions of the Tuscarora Indians, who face the Dufferins here on Dominion Day:—Goal, Charles Smoke; Point, George D Gibson; Cover Point, Lewis Dixon; Defence Field, Joshua Buck, Charles Dortator, Chance Peter; Centre, John Jamieson, jr.; Home Field, William Fishcarrier, Richard Hill, James W Skye; Outside Home, Cornelius C. Gibson; Inside Home, David Kee; Field Captain, Jacob Hill. In the evening they will give a grand concert on the grounds.

SPRAYING PLUM TREES.—It will be well to bear in mind that now is the time, when nearly all the plum trees are shedding their blossom and the young fruit is forming, to spray them. The mixture should be about a tea spoonful of Paris Green to a wooden pailful of water. It is believed that less strength would do, but the mixture of the strength we say, does not appear to do harm to the foliage. If the weather is dry the spraying need not be repeated for a week or ten days, but if wet, it should be repeated earlier. Under ordinary circumstances two sprayings about 10 days apart is sufficient.

TWENTY DAYS FOR "PILSY."—Chief Shields had a very exciting piece of work to do on Friday evening. He had Pat McCloskey, that veteran "tourist" in town, bound for the lockup. The chief and Paddy arrived at their destination, and while the former was making things as comfortable as circumstances would allow the door suddenly closed and by the click of the lock the cop knew he was a prisoner. By some ingenuity on the part of the peeler he soon regained his liberty, and at once started in pursuit of the practical joker. He found him at T. Porter's shop, and he turned out to be none other than the notorious "Piley," McKenna, a half foolish fellow from near Rockley. The man with brass buttons nabbed "Piley," but the latter was in no mood to go along quietly. He kicked, jumped and swore, but the police force still retained hold. Finally he called on a citizen for assistance and the call was promptly responded to. When the citizen caught "Piley" the latter became furious, and the former, after receiving a kick between the shoulders retired. At this juncture Chief Shields drew his baton, and at the sight of such a forcible looking article 'Piley' completely broke down, wept like a child, and went peacefully to the lockup. He appeared before P. M. Pattullo yesterday (Monday) morning, and the result is he will resort at Sutherland Castle for the next twenty days.

FIRES AGAIN.—On Monday evening last a fire was discovered in a building at the rear of the Revere house which is used as a coal house, etc. The fire had been started by a quantity of oily cloth being set on fire close by a barrel of coal oil. Fortunately, the attempt at incendiarism was noticed in time and put out by using pails. The fire companies got there in quick order, but their services were not required. On Wednesday there was a genuine blaze. About two o'clock, P.M., the stable at the rear of the Brampton Grist Mill was burned. The fire companies were promptly on hand, but the flames had got such a hold that the building could not be saved. In the building were a mare and colt and a young horse. The first two were saved by Mr. Joseph Guy, the G.T.R. switchman, but he was unable to get out the horse. In connection with this fire an arrest was made. A child named Prest, who gives his age as seven, was seen by Mr. Guy going into the stable and immediately after coming out the fire made its appearance. The youngster is suspected of having caused the other blazes. He was sent up by the magistrate to be tried before the June Assizes. Next morning after the fire Mr. Thompson, manager of the mills, which are now closed, discovered a pile of rags and stuff placed against the door of the engine-house and the suspicion is that young Prest put it there. The horses mentioned were the property of Mr. W. A. Williamson.—Brampton Banner. THE SUN believes that the young Prest referred to in the above was at one time a resident of Orangeville.

CARDWELL.

VOTE FOR HAMMELL!

IN another column we publish a well-written article, taken from the Tottenham Sentinel, on the political situation in Cardwell. It, together with Mr. Hammell's speech at the nomination on Thursday last, which we take from the same paper, gives the whole history of the dastardly conspiracy to deprive the electors of Cardwell of the services of their old, tried and true representative in Local Legislature and why he takes the field in opposition to Mr. Lennox, a Barrie lawyer, and the nominee of the bogus convention. All lovers of fair play and justice will approve of Mr. Hammell's course, and we are confident the electors of Cardwell—irrespective of creed or party—will, on the 9th of June, give him such an overwhelming majority at the polls as will be a terror to all future interlopers and who attempt to sow political discord in Conservative ranks in Cardwell.

DR. BARR'S MEETINGS.

The Doctor Meeting with the Greatest Success Throughout the County.

Meetings in the interest of Dr. Barr have been held at different points since nomination day, nearly all of which were well attended and productive of good.

On Friday evening last Dr. Barr addressed a meeting at Marsville at which many of the sturdy electors of East Garafraxa were present. The chair was occupied by Mr Thomas Carroll and addresses were delivered by the Conservative candidate and Dr. Lewis and A. A. Hudson. At the close of the meeting an organization for the township was effected, and it is confidently expected that old Garry will roll up one of her old time majorities on Tuesday.

On the same evening Mr. Walsh met a few of Dr Barr's supporters at Perry's schoolhouse and completed arrangements by which the vote of that portion of Mono will be brought out.

On Saturday evening Mr. Walsh and Dr. Lewis held a most successful meeting at Mono Centre. The chair was occupied by Mr. Robert McCutcheon and the hall was filled with the leading electors of the section, representing both political parties. Addresses were delivered by the gentlemen above named, which were well received by the audience, and their report is that the centre of the banner township will do its duty on the 5th inst.

On the same evening Mr. Hughson attended a meeting in Dr. Barr's behalf at Laurel, where he was confronted by that staunch friend of Temperance and Oliver Mowat, to wit, the Rev. M. S. Gray. Matthew Stickney's zeal in the cause of temperance is as nothing in comparison with his ardor in the interests of Gritism and he has gone completely back upon the temperance candidate, Dr. Gaviller, to support the Grit standard bearer, Mr. Bailey. The meeting was a complete success for the Conservative candidate.

Still another meeting was held on Saturday night. Dr. Barr, ably assisted by Dr. Hopkins and Mr. W. R. Scott, having met the electors of East Luther at Colbeck. Our information is to the effect that the meeting was well attended and enthusiastic.

On Thursday evening last Dr. Lewis and Mr. Walsh attended Dr. Gaviller's meeting at Camilla. The New Party candidate was there in person, while Mr. Bailey's interests were looked after by License Commissioner Dodds. About 70 electors met in Morrison's hall and listened attentively to addresses given by these few gentlemen. Each party had its sympathizers present, the Conservatives being in the majority. The meeting passed off very pleasantly under the able management of chairman Robert Reid.

Meetings are announced for this week as follows:

Tuesday at Grand Valley and Camilla; Wednesday at Hockley and Farmington.

These meetings will be divided amongst Dr. Barr, Mr. Walsh, Dr. Lewis and Mr. Hughson.

"THE MAN WE WANT."

To the Electors of Tuscarora:

Dear Sirs—It is a pleasure to me, ever since your paper started, I am delighted with the stand you take on the approaching elections. Although I would like to have seen Mr. F. C. Stewart get a second term of office, I must say that Dr. Barr is deserving of his stand, and on the evening of June 9th he will be triumphantly returned to represent this county.

I have carefully read his address and come to the conclusion that he is the man we want. The township of Mono will give him an immense majority.

Mono, May 28th, 1890. RAVENSTONE.

> Burry corruption! By doing this you will vote for Barr and Meredith.

GRAND VALLEY.

Dr. Barr, the Conservative candidate for the Legislative Assembly, will hold a meeting here this (Tuesday) evening.

The other night Squire Tolton, of Waldemar, had eight or ten sheep worried by dogs. The result is that there are half a dozen less ours in our village.

All the supporters of Mr. Meredith around here are going to send Dr. Barr down to Toronto for the next session. The doctor is well known throughout this section and the votes will leap up in the hundreds.

The storm that swept across this section of the country did considerable damage around here. Fences were torn up, trees were blown down, and the brick work of Mr. Jno. McIntyre's new residence was almost wrecked.

On Wednesday afternoon of last week while Mr. McPherson, of concession 12, East Garafraxa, an aged man of about 70 years, was passing beside one of the horses in its stall to give the horse feed the animal, not noticing his approach, became frightened, knocking him down and tramping on him, breaking two ribs and causing other injuries. Dr. Hopkins was called in, set the ribs, bound up the injured body, and he is now doing as good as can be expected, although suffering much from the pain.

A HORSE WHO CAN TALK!

Everybody has heard of a "horse laugh," but who has ever seen an equine gifted with the power of speech? Such an animal would be pronounced a miracle; but so would the telegraph and the telephone a hundred years ago. Why, even very recently a cure for consumption, which is universally acknowledged to be scrofula affecting the lungs, would have been looked upon as miraculous, but now people are beginning to realize that the disease is not incurable. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure it, if taken in time and given a fair trial. This world-renowned specific will not make new lungs, but it will restore diseased ones to a healthy state when other means have failed. Thousands gratefully testify to this. It is the most potent tonic, or strength restorer, alterative, or blood-cleanser and nutritive, or flesh-builder, known to medical science. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh in the Head, and all Lingering Coughs, it is an unequaled remedy. In derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels as Indigestion, or Dyspepsia, Biliousness, or "Liver Complaint," Chronic Diarrhea, and kindred ailments, it is a sovereign remedy.

GUARANTEED. "Golden Medical Discovery" is the only medicine of its class, sold by druggists, under a printed guarantee, from the manufacturers, that it will benefit or cure in every case of disease for which it is recommended, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded.

To the Electors

—OF THE—

COUNTY OF DUFFERIN

GENTLEMEN:

At a Convention of Liberal Conservatives Delegates assembled at Shelburne on the 27th instant, from every portion of the constituency, I was placed in the field as the standard bearer of the Party in the approaching contest for the Legislative Assembly. Having accepted the nomination thus tendered me, I deem it my duty to place before you my views on the issues that are at present engaging the attention of the people of this Province.

I am thoroughly in accord with the platform laid down by Mr. Meredith, the Provincial Leader of the Conservative Party, and particularly upon the school question.

I go further, however, and say that Separate Schools are a source of evil and are prejudicial to the growth of a united Canadian sentiment. I think that the interests of our country would be better served by their abolition and by having our youth, of whatever religious views, educated in the same school, and am prepared to act in accordance with these views to as full an extent as the limited control that the Provincial Legislature has over them will permit.

If, however, Separate Schools are continued in existence, they should be carried on in the manner that was contemplated when they were established. By this I mean that they should be free from the control of the church authorities and subject to the jurisdiction of the State as the Public Schools are. I think that they should be inspected by the Public School Inspector, that their trustees should be elected in the same manner as Public School trustees, and that they should, in all respects, be conducted as nearly as possible upon the same lines as the Public Schools.

As this is an English Province, I believe that the English language should be used as the language of instruction exclusively in our schools, and will support every measure brought before the House having that end in view.

My views upon the other questions of the day, such as the administration of Crown Lands, the expenditure of the public money, the distribution of the patronage, the payment of public officers by salary instead of fees, and the many other questions that divide the two great parties in Provincial politics are entirely in harmony with those so thoroughly enunciated by Mr Meredith. I will deem it my duty, if elected, to support him in the position that he has taken upon all these public questions, but I reserve to myself the right to vote according to the dictates of my conscience upon all other matters that may engage the attention of the House.

My record and my standing are well known to nearly all of you. My interests are yours. Nearly every dollar that I own is invested in this county. Any legislation that is injurious to you must be prejudicial to me. I am largely interested, financially and otherwise, in the farming community, particularly, and for this reason, if for no other, I will be bound to look after the interests of the farmers in the House.

Respectfully soliciting your votes,
I remain, yours truly,

JOHN BARR.

Shelburne, May 28th, 1890.

THE ROTARY VS. THE JULL.

On the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth of April the Rotary and the Jull snow plows were given an opportunity to show to a number of railroad and newspaper men what they could do in a good wind-blown bank, on the Denver, Leadville and Gunnison division of the Union Pacific railroad. Master Mechanic Kerr, Assistant Superintendent Gilchrist and Train Master Saunders, of the U. P.; Master Mechanic Humphrey, of the Colorado Midland, and C. E. Leeson, of the Denver & Rio Grande, were among the railroad men who witnessed the test. The newspaper men were City Editor Martin of the Rocky Mountain News, H. J. Myers, of the Denver Republican and the editor of this journal.

Mr. Leslie, one of the proprietors of the Rotary plow, was ably assisted by Dan Houston, under whose supervision the Rotary was operated. Jas. Naismith, the snow plow man of the Union Pacific, looked after the Jull with Mr. Jull himself in the background.

Nearly all railroad men are familiar with the Rotary, and most have seen a picture, at least, of the Jull. The Jull is intended to capture the snow by means of a screw or auger, which points down to the right hand rail. When the machine is put in motion, the revolving screw prances up to the snow at about the same angle a hog assumes when he goes to war, makes about as much noise, but doesn't accomplish as much. The Jull considerably heavier than the Rotary plow, having a sixty inch boiler, while the rotary's boiler is but 52 inches, with cylinders and other machinery smaller in proportion. The gauge of the road where the test was made is three feet and is very crooked and laid with light steel. Very little was accomplished on the first day, as it was nearly all taken up putting the Jull on the track, that big machine having left the rail no less than six times. On the morning of the second day the Rotary was put to the field for the second time and in thirteen minutes had cleared two miles of heavy snow—almost like ice—which averaged three feet in depth. After getting into the deep snow the Rotary left the track twice, and it was not until late in the afternoon that the cause was discovered. The curves were so sharp that the body of the house would strike the wall, or bank which was so solid that the front trucks were forced from the track. Wings were then bolted on the sides which made the cut four inches wider on either side and after that the Rotary hung to the rail like a leech.

The Jull was first out on the morning of the third day, but left the channel before she reached the snow. After being picked onto the rail again, she allowed herself to be pushed into the beautiful where the Rotary had left off at a depth of four feet. This was the first heavy snow encountered by the Jull, and everyone was watching breathlessly. Up on the side hill Mr. Jull stood with his photographer, Mr. Mellen, waiting to catch her at the most favorable moment (which never came) while Mr. Leslie, the enemy, stood near with a famous photographer, Jackson, of Denver, and the pictures they made of the poor Jull were actually cruel. Mr. Kean had selected four of the best locomotives on the road with picked crews to do the pushing, but in spite of all this, it was impossible to hold the heavy machine up to her work, owing to the bad condition of the track, after the Jull had passed over it. It must be understood before we go further, that the engineemen were all in sympathy with the Jull and did all in their power to give her a fair trial.

Less than ten feet was made when the Jull "straggled and strangled and died," but not until she had proven to the spectators that she would not throw snow to the left. The scenery was then shifted, the wheels put onto the rails and another run was made. At noon that day she was pulled out and put into a side track. The Rotary was again put into the field and a great stream of snow was sent up curled over the telegraph wires and went crashing down through the trees covering the ground with limbs and pine cones. It was not the intention of the officials to open the road after making a mile or so, the Rotary was taken off covered with snow and glory. The Rotary was stopped several times and photos were made showing the actual depth of the snow and also the condition of the track after the machine had passed over it.

The railway officials were careful to see that the Jull had every opportunity to work. A gang of trackmen was kept dangerously near to give the locomotives a show to push the big plow.

Lewis Ross have spent lots of time and money during the last year to prove to the railways of the country that the Rotary is a snow plow made that will throw snow. The Jull, at least, ought never to be considered a competitor of the Rotary after this test.

"The Rotary," said Mr. Leslie to us, "defeated the Cyclone plow on the Central Pacific railroad at Cascade, March 19th, in the presence of Gen'l Supt. Fonnore, Master Mechanic H. J. Small, Master Car Builder B. Welch, J. B. Wright, Supt. Sacramento Division, M. J. Leahy, Division Master Mechanic, J. H. Wood, Supt. Truckee Division, G. H. Hunt, Division Master Mechanic, Alex. E. Dickinson, General Manager Union Pacific railroad. Conductor Tony Schmidt was in charge of the snow outfit. The crews on the pushers were Stout and Abby, Kirt and Carnahan, Plunkett and Walters, Dempsey and Rae.

On the forenoon of the eighteenth the whole party returned to Denver over the D. L. & G. The special was in charge of conductor Frank Smith, Engineer O'Brien and fireman Warnock.

NOTES FROM THE BATTLE FIELD

The Jull sentiment: Myron Reed.

The Jull won't kick out the Rotary but can and out the tail of his coat.

If Dan Houston ever gets out of a job he can rent a hall and open up a good circus all by himself.

In the morning when the mists from the mountains, sweet descend on the lap of the lea, I end to see Dan Houston, Houston, the man I long to see.

The daily papers gave a fair and impartial account of the battle.

It may sound strange, but its a fact that the next day after the snow party left St. Elmo the people became so dry that the town caught fire and was nearly all consumed.

P. S. Everything else was consumed during our stay.

When the returning party reached Como, a splendid dinner was served. At the banquet we heard the following toast.

The woman who can refrain from saying, "I told you so," sometimes gets a new dress.

"Here's to the Rotary snow plow!
With her ponderous painted form,
As she glides o'r the hill in the winter chill,
Defying the bitter storm.

"What's the matter with the Jull?" asked a voice from the next table, and the winds brought back the answer:
The Jull's all right in the summer,
When she sits in the sun all day,
But you can't make her throw the beautiful snow
Because—

For Colds or Pain.

YELLOW OIL is the best remedy I ever used. I had a boating breast 12 months ago, which was very sore. I got no relief until I tried Hagyard's Yellow Oil, which gave instant relief.

MRS. JAS. COMMETT, St. Mary's, Ont.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.—On Saturday night the house of Mr. Douglas McDonald, on lot 26, con 13, East Luther, was struck by lightning. The electric bolt struck the chimney, expanding it about an inch, passed down to the stovepipe and knocked them apart at the elbow, thence to the oven of the stove and passed down through the floor. Mrs. McDonald and child were in the house at the time and she had just removed the child from near the stove a few minutes before the electric element entered the house. Mr. McDonald, who had been spending the day in Shelburne, had not yet arrived home, and no doubt Mrs. McDonald received a bad fright. No serious damage was done.—Star.

J. McMahon, of Green Lake, Minn., a farmer quarrelled with his wife last winter, and the woman returned to her parents. On Friday McMahon visited his wife and tried to persuade her to live with him again. She refused, and McMahon shot her twice near the heart. He then went home, laid down on a bed, and shot himself three times. Both are alive, but not expected to live many hours.

It is again rumored that an English syndicate is negotiating for the purchase of the Union Stock Yards at Chicago, the price being $10,000,000.

BLYTHE, May 29.—Mr. Samuel Thoel, in the Township of Morris, met with an accident to-day by which he lost his life. He was drawing out manure and while on the way to the field he fell off the load among the horses' feet and was trampled or kicked to death. He was found about noon dead, and it is supposed that he lay there most of the forenoon.

What It Will Do.

1 to 2 bottles of B B B will cure Headache.
1 to 2 bottles of B B B will cure Biliousness.
1 to 4 bottles of B B B will cure Constipation
1 to 4 bottles of B B B will cure Dyspepsia
1 to 6 bottles of B B B will cure Bad Blood
1 to 6 bottles of B B B will cure Scrofula.
In any case relief will be had from the first few doses.

Moses Had Asthma.

MY HUSBAND had asthma for eight years with severe cough, and his lungs also were affected. He could neither rest, work nor get relief from any medicine he tried. Some time ago we got Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, and after taking six or eight bottles his cough is entirely cured, the asthma greatly relieved, and his lungs greatly benefited

For persistently violating the Scott Act the two leading hotel keepers in Fredericton have been sent to gaol for two months. In retaliation for that the hotels are to be closed. The people of the city are now in a state of excitement, because they say the closing of the hotels means a great loss of business. It is difficult to see, however, what use a law is unless it is enforced. Certainly the hotel keepers will lose more than any body else by the course they have taken to render the Scott Act unpopular.

For cramp, quinsy or colds use Yellow Oil.

THE SUN is the best $1 weekly in Dufferin. Try it for one year.

Pectoral Balsam cures coughs, colds, hoarseness, asthma, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles.

CATARRH,

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS—HAY FEVER

A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N.B.—This treatment is not a snuff or an ointment; both have been discarded by reputable physicians as injurious. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 303 West King Street, Toronto, Canada.—Toronto Globe.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Nervousness and want of Energy.—When first the nerves feel unstrung; and listlessness supplants energy, the time has come to take some such alterative as Holloway's Pills to restrain a disorder from developing itself into a disease. These excellent Pills correct all irregularities and weaknesses. They act so kindly, yet so energetically on the functions of digestion and assimilation, that the whole body is renewed, the blood rendered purer, while the muscles become firmer and stronger, and the nervous and attendant systems are invigorated. These Pills are suitable for all classes and all ages. They have most marvellous effect on persons who are out of condition; they soon rectify whatever is in fault, restore strength to the body and confidence to the mind.

Long-Standing

Blood Diseases are cured by the persevering use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

This medicine is an Alterative, and causes a radical change in the system. The process, in some cases, may not be quite so rapid as in others; but, with persistence, the result is certain. Read these testimonials:—

"For two years I suffered from a severe pain in my right side, and had other troubles caused by a torpid liver and dyspepsia. After giving several medicines a fair trial without a cure, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was greatly benefited by the first bottle, and after taking five bottles I was completely cured."—John W. Benson, 70 Lawrence st., Lowell, Mass.

Last May a large carbuncle broke out on my arm. The usual remedies had no effect and I was confined to my bed for eight weeks. A friend induced me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Less than three bottles healed the sore. In all my experience with medicine, I never saw more

Wonderful Results.

Another marked effect of the use of this medicine was the strengthening of my sight."—Mrs. Carrie Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

"I had a dry scaly humor for years, and suffered terribly; and, as my brother and sister were similarly afflicted, I presume the malady is hereditary. Last winter, Dr. Tyron, (of Fernandina, Fla.,) recommended me to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and continue it for a year. For five months I took it daily. I have not had a blemish upon my body for the last three months."—T. E. Wiley, 140 Chambers st., New York City.

"Last fall and winter I was troubled with a dull, heavy pain in my side. I did not notice it much at first, but it gradually grew worse until it became almost intolerable. During the latter part of this time, disorders of the stomach and liver increased my troubles. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after faithfully continuing the use of this medicine for some months, the pain disappeared and I was completely cured."—Mrs. Augusta A. Furbush, Haverhill, Mass.

RIGHT HOUSE.
A. & W. JOHNSTON,
Successors to H. E. Reid & Co.

HAVING purchased the stock of the late H. E. REID & CO., it is our intention to remove to the corner now occupied by our Hardware Store, and it is necessary to reduce the stock preparatory to moving. In order to do this, we have made a general reduction in all lines, everything having been marked down to slaughter prices. The stock is replete with all the latest novelties. Below we quote a few of the bona fide bargains we intend offering:

PRINTS.—We start a line of Washers at 7c. per yard.
A nice assortment Light Colors at 8c., regular price 10c.
" " Dark " " 10c., " " 12½c.
Scotch Zephyrs ..... " 7½c., " " 8c.
Dress Goods.—All Dress Goods reduced 25 per cent..
Tweed.—We offer $1.00 Tweed for 75c., 75c for 50c., 50c. for 40c.
Cottonades & Shirtings reduced in proportion.

READY-MADE CLOTHING.

We lead the Town in Ready-Mades, both Men's and Boys. Our stock is elegant order, having a full assortment sizes, thus affording customers a rare opportunity to procure a Spring Outfit at a very low figure. We make a specialty of BOYS' CLOTHING, and keep a large range to select from. We guarantee to suit you in Price, Fit and Quality.

MILLINERY DEPARTMENT.

This stock is all new, having been bought within the last month, we have already taken the lead in this department and we still hope to maintain it, if Low Prices, Stylish Goods and Courteous Milliners will do so. We are sure of success.

BOOTS & SHOES.—We have our stock well-assorted and are bound to please in style and price.

GROCERY DEPARTMENT.

We have a choice stock of Fresh Groceries. Town orders delivered daily. We will add that we intend to keep the entire stock well assorted in every department, and our customers may always rely on being suited.

We hope that by strict attention to business and fair dealing to retain the patronage of the late H. E. Reid & Co.

We are, yours truly,
A. & W. JOHNSTON.

not alone has placed him beyond the pale of honesty. I can never receive him at my house; but this much I will say to you, Clarey, should the time ever come when my worst fears are realized, for you there will always be shelter and welcome under my roof, but never for him.' I have not seen my guardian since."

Silvia knelt down by her side, and kissed the pale face.

"And those tears have not been realized," she said.

"No,"—the pale face flushed—"and not only that, but they never will. I do not believe my husband ever gambles or bets now—no matter what he may have done."

"Then Mr. Latham should be pleased with him, and restore him to favor," said Silvia.

She shook her head sadly.

"Alas! that will never be. They say worse of him than that. They say now that he neglects me; that he does not care for me; that he spends all his time elsewhere; that he only married me for my money, and now that he has had that is doing his best to kill me with neglect. They say all this of him, but it is not true—is it?"

"The world is always cruel," said Silvia. "It expects either too much or too little."

"But you live here," continued Mrs. Thornton, her anxious eyes fixed wistfully on Silvia's face. "You live with us; you see what our ever-day life is; you have sense and intelligence. Forget that it is not long since we were strangers, and tell me—do you think my husband loves me?"

There was an agony of entreaty in the eyes raised to Silvia's face. She was terribly embarrassed. To tell the truth, and say what she really thought—that Gustave Thornton, so far from caring for that restless invalid, would hail her death as a relief—would have seemed cruel to her—it would have been a death-blow, and to tell so great an untruth as to say she had the least faith in that love, was more impossible still. She evaded the question by laughing lightly.

"Husbands are a strange race," she said. "They have so many and such different methods of showing love. One man shows great affection, exactly as another shows great aversion. Euclid would puzzle me, so would mathematics and algebra, but nothing on earth would ever puzzle me as men do."

Mrs. Thornton smiled, then she went on in the same mournful voice:

"You know I always think if I had a little child, Gustave would be so much happier, and he would love home so much better; but that blessing will never be mine."

Silvia did not believe it—nothing that she had as yet seen of Mr. Thornton gave her that idea of him. If he said to his wife that he loved children, and loved them very dearly, it was to add so much to her trouble and annoyance. Silvia credited him with this amiable intention, but no other. A selfish, cynical Sybarite to love little children! there was nothing natural or probable in it.

Still those piteous pleading eyes were fixed on her face, and she knew that that the gentle heart was aching yet.

"You have not told me all your story yet," she said. "If I am to be a true doctor, I must know all."

"I shall be glad to tell you," said the poor lady eagerly. "I have often thought that I was morbidly fanciful and jealous—that if I could talk to some one else, and tell them what I think and fear, I should be much better. Now, you shall be my second self, and hear all my thoughts.

"We were married, and my husband seemed devoted to me. It was he who proposed Cleve House, who arranged my rooms, who ordered everything for me, and I was more happy, ten thousand times, than a crowned queen.

"At first my husband would take me out with him everywhere he went; he said that he did not enjoy himself without me. We went a great deal into society, and, to my great surprise, I found myself treated in the same way everywhere—with a kind of pitying kindness that I could not understand.

"Then—ah! Mrs. Rymer, this was the beginning of all my unhappiness—my health began to fail. I cannot tell how it was. I had always been well and strong, and my strength left me. I used to have a beautiful color and brilliant bloom, but it died away. I tried my best to hide it, but it was in vain. Late hours fatigued me; in crowded rooms I used to feel ill and weak; talking exhausted me; and, after a time, sorely against my will, I was obliged to own that I was ill, and grew daily worse instead of better.

"That was how my husband began to care less for home. A sick, ailing wife, I was no companion for a strong, handsome, high-spirited man. One of the doctors I consulted told me there was nothing wrong with me, but that I had exhausted my strength, and that three months in a warm climate, spent in peace and tranquillity, without the excitement of society, would in all probability completely restore me to health; but that I availed myself of this remedy, I should most likely fall into a decline.

"I told my husband, and he laughed aloud.

"'Three months' penal servitude!' he said. 'No; you will get better without that, Clara.'

"And, do you know, Mrs. Rymer, those words pained me so that I never spoke of going abroad to him after that."

"It was unpardonably selfish," interrupted Silvia.

"Nay," said Mrs. Thornton, eagerly. "he did not mean it so, he did not indeed; he thought it was all nonsense, and gentlemen dislikes all trouble of that kind so much."

Silvia held her peace, knowing that the loving heart and gentle lips would frame some excuse for him even had he been caught in the very act of murder.

"If I had been always strong, everything would have been so different," sighed Mrs Thornton; "but night after night I lay faint and ill. I could hardly expect him to stay with me—could I?"

"That depends," said Silvia, thinking in her own heart that when he owed the roof that sheltered him, the bread he ate, every comfort and luxury of his life, to the poor lady, he might in return have shown her the smallest possible attention and kindness.

"You must understand," said Mrs Thornton, "that all this time I kept my faith in him, and honestly believed that though he might be careless, he loved me very dearly indeed. I never knew real sorrow and real bitterness until the time came when I doubted that."

"Did such a time ever come?" asked Silvia, quietly.

"Yes, I will tell you about it, and you shall judge whether I had any cause to be angry or not."

Poetry.

THE BURIED MOTHER.

Out by the walls of a Danish town
The graves stood cool as the night came down
The Angelus prayer had long been said,
And the bell tolled out the psalm for the dead.

It swung for a while from the darkening steeple,
"Out of the depths," said the priest and people.
Through all the close-set town, and to move
The doors were shut for the silent hours.

But a mother, buried for half a year,
Woke with a crying in her ear.

She rose with the vague sleep still in her head
And clad in the shroud that wraps the dead.

She left the cold graves as she walk'd,
And took the street to her husband's halls.

She felt her long dead bosom ache,
For her seven children were all awake;

And none had broke them bread that night,
Or poured them drink, or lit an evening light.

And none had laid them pillow or sheet;
The dust of the day was on their feet.

Two strove for an empty cup, and one
Was crying—that was her youngest son.

She washed and kissed them, and hushed their cries,
While tears pressed out of her long-shut eyes.

But their father, who lay on a lower floor,
Had heard her step in the corridor.

And he rose and came, and saw her stand
With the children clinging to either hand.

She said, "The crying smote my heart,
It broke my dreams of death apart.

"I was loath to leave these seven. I died.
But when have I slept when the child has cried

"Take note, ere I pass to my many dead;
Your children woke and had no bread,

"No fire, no lamp; two were at strife;
One cried uncomforted. Tell your wife."

HIS CHOICE.

She is the belle of all the girls,
And ev'ry heart entrances,
As lightly through the waltz she whirls,
And like a fairy dances.

Her card is full, her heart is gay,
The tune is full of pleasure;
And so she trips the hours away
To music's joyous measure.

Her sister, lacking charm and grace,
Though for a partner waiting,
Has an expression in her face
Good nature indicating.

And if I had to chose a wife
Before I sought to gain one,
Between the two, upon my life,
I think I'd choose the plain one.

The hotel people not hearing Currie moving around on Friday morning went to his room and found he had disappeared with nothing on but his pants and shirt. As his team is still at the hotel, the supposition is that Currie awoke during the night, climbed out of the window and found his way to the lake and was drowned. ## HORSE NOTES.

SOME OF THE GREAT HORSES THAT ARE ON THE ROAD.

The following is a list of some of the great horses that are travelling in this district this season:—

DUGALD.—This pure-bred prize-winning Clydesdale has recently been purchased by Mr. Wm Jackson, of Cardinal. He is a dark bay, stripe on face, four legs black, little white on hind legs, and is three years old. He has taken first prizes at Brampton, Hokona, Woodbridge and Toronto, and Diploma and Silver Medal for the Best Prettiest Bred Horse of any age. He will stand this season at his own stable, lot 13, Centre Road, Mono.

TAM O'SHANTER, JR., was sired by that noted horse Tam O'Shanter, owned by the late William Patterson, of Merseville. He possesses all the good qualities of his sire and is a first class general purpose stallion. His route is:

MONDAY, leaves his own stable, Lot 9, Con. 1, E. Mono, and proceed by way of Glenccrat, to D. G. Buchanan's, for noon; thence to Joseph Henry's, Mono Centre, for night.

SATURDAY, he will proceed to Herning's Mills, for noon; thence to his own stable and remain till the following Monday morning.

H. BUTCHER, Proprietor.

VALENTINE.—This well-bred trotting stallion, owned by Mr John Osborne, Ballycroy, comes from some of the best Canadian Trotting Stock. Valentine is a golden chestnut, rising 4 years old, stands 16 hands high and weighs 1,200 lbs, and possesses all the qualities of a horse. The following is his route this season:

MONDAY, he leaves his own stable, Ballycroy, and proceeds to Huckley, for night.

TUESDAY, he will Proceed to Jno White's, Mono Centre, for noon; thence to Camilla, for night.

WEDNESDAY he will proceed to Wm. Dynes' Granger, for noon; thence to Mansfield, for night.

THURSDAY, he will proceed to McCarthy's Hotel, Rosemont, for night.

FRIDAY, he will proceed to Loretto, for noon; thence to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

ST. JOE.—Everybody knows or has seen that celebrated trotting coach stallion, St Joe. St Joe is a beautiful black, 9 years old, stands 16 hands 3 inches high, and possesses all the qualities of a first class trotter. Messrs Dwyer & Kearns, of Charleston, can pride themselves on owning such a stepper. He will make the following route:

MONDAY, he leaves his own stable, Charleston and proceed to Orangeville, for noon, thence to Mono Mills, for night.

TUESDAY, to Connor, for noon; to Palgrave for night.

WEDNESDAY, will proceed by Lockton, to Goth's, for noon; thence by Caledon East, to Sand Hill, for night.

THURSDAY, proceed by Campbell's Cross to Claude, for noon; thence home for night.

FRIDAY, proceed to Alton, for noon; thence to Cahmore, for one hour; thence to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

CLEVELAND HAMBLETONIAN is a beautiful coach horse, the property of Mr. John Waite, Caledon. He has sired some of the best coach horses in America, one pair of which were sold in Philadelphia, before they were four years old, for the big sum of $3,700. His route this season is:—

MONDAY, he leaves his own stable, lot 28, 2nd line East, Caledon, at noon, and proceed to Mono Mills, for one hour; thence to Galbraith's Hotel, Hockley, for night.

TUESDAY, proceed to Henderson's Hotel, Rosemont, for noon, thence to Primrose, for one hour, thence to Witter's Hotel, Shelburne, for night.

WEDNESDAY he will proceed to McCarvey's Hotel, Laurel, for noon; thence by Whittington to Morrison's Hotel, Camilla, for night.

THURSDAY, he will proceed to the Paisley House, Orangeville and remain all night.

FRIDAY, he will proceed to Willis' Hotel, Alton, for noon; thence to Cataract, for one hour; thence to Barrett's Hotel, Charleston, and remain all night.

SATURDAY, he will proceed to the Paisley House, Orangeville, for noon, and remain until 3 o'clock; thence to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

CALEDON'S PRIDE, or YOUNG WHAT'S WANTED.—Mr John Boyton, of Caledon, still owns this high-grade, heavy draught stallion. Young What's Wanted is 7 years old, stands 16½ hands high and was sired by What's Wanted, owned by T. & J. Little, Sand Hill. The following route will be continued during the season:

MONDAY, he leaves his own stable, Lot 13, Con 3, East, Caledon, and proceed to ... at Killborn's, for noon; thence to John Devine's, Lockton, for night.

TUESDAY, he will proceed to Joseph Legal's, for noon; thence to Cedarville, for one hour; thence to John Carroll's, Colgan, for night.

WEDNESDAY he will proceed to Lorretto, for noon; thence to Wm Spence's for two hours, thence to John O'Leary's, for night.

THURSDAY he will proceed to Thomas McFarlane's, for noon; thence to Henry Moffat's, for night.

FRIDAY he will proceed to Mr Carvey's, for noon; thence by Third Line to his own stable for night.

SATURDAY, he will proceed to Dwyer's Hotel Charleston, and back to his own stable where he will remain till the following Monday morning.

BONNIE SCOTLAND.—This well known heavy Draught is the property of Mr. John Aldous, proprietor of the Royal Hotel, Mono Mills. Bonnie Scotland has sure for a getter and his colts take a red ticket wherever shown. He leaves his own stable, Royal Hotel, on MONDAY, and proceed to Joseph Legal's, Connor, for noon; thence to Hockley, for night.

TUESDAY, he will proceed to John Lavery's, 7th Line, Mono, for noon; thence to Andrew McGuire's, Rosemont, for two hours; thence to Jonathan Flatt's, 3rd line, for night.

WEDNESDAY, he will proceed to Thos. White's, Glen Urben, for noon; thence to Thomas Holmes', for night.

THURSDAY, he will proceed to Michael Armstrong's, 1st East, Caledon, for noon; thence to Dean's Hotel, Alton, for night.

FRIDAY, he will proceed to John Leonard's, for noon; thence to Isaac Cherry's, 4th Line for night.

SATURDAY, he will proceed to Edward Stimson's, 1st line, Albion, for noon; thence to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

A FAMOUS QUARTO.—John Gilkinson & Son are proprietors of four of the best stallions in Canada. Catch Me is a recently imported heavy draught, and is the genuine stamp of a horse of the first water. His pedigree would take up too much space here, and we will have to refer the reader to his route bills for particulars. The firm still own that famous coal black trotter, Defiance, which took first prizes all over the province. The great Irish Thoroughbreds, Ambrino and Faugh-a-Ballagh have recently been added to this stable. Defiance and Ambrino will remain the season at home:

MONDAY, they will leave their own stable, Commercial Hotel, Orangeville, and proceed to the Royal Hotel, Mono Mills, for noon; thence Galbraith's Hotel, Hockley, for night.

TUESDAY, they will proceed to Mono Centre, for noon, thence by Primrose to Witter's Hotel, Shelburne, for night.

WEDNESDAY, they will proceed to Whittington, for noon; thence to their own stable, for night.

THURSDAY, they will proceed to Marsville, for noon; thence to Dale's Hotel, Hillsburg, for night.

FRIDAY, they will proceed to Cataract, for noon; thence to Burns's Hotel, Charleston, for night.

SATURDAY, he will proceed to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

Read this extract from the scientific papers of Great Britain and Europe:

The four greatest medical centres of the world are London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna. These cities have immense hospitals teeming with suffering humanity. Crowds of students throng the wards studying under the Professors in charge. The most renowned physicians of the world teach and practice here, and the institutions are storehouses of medical knowledge and experience. With a view of making this experience available to the public the Hospital Remedy Co. at great expense secured the prescriptions of these hospitals, prepared the specifics, and although it would cost from $50 to $100 to secure the attention of their distinguished originators, yet in this way their prepared specifics are offered at the price of the quack patent medicines that flood the market and absurdly claim to cure every ill from a single bottle.

A DANGER SIGNAL!

A Cold in the Head may be aptly termed a danger signal warning you that if neglected that dangerous and disagreeable disease, Catarrh, is sure to follow, perhaps leading to Consumption and the grave. At no season of the year is Cold in the Head more prevalent than during the Spring months, and at no other season do the people of this country suffer more generally from Catarrh, with all its disagreeable and annoying effects. Danger follows an instant neglect either of these troubles, but apply NASAL BALM, the only remedy that will give instant relief and effect a thorough cure. The following testimonials from among thousands in our possession bear witness to its standing merit.

Alex. Burns, Sydney, Ont., says: I may state that I have been affected with Catarrh seven or eight years, and it was attended by consequent symptoms such as foul breath, constant dropping into the throat, hawking and spitting, partial deafness, ringing in the ears and sickening pains in the head directly over either eye. I have used powders and douches, but all to no effect, the only results arising from the use of such was temporary relief, followed by the usual symptoms in a more aggravated form. The results arising from the use of Nasal Balm: Sweet breath, stoppage of the drawings into the throat, (consequently less hawking and spitting), clearness of hearing, and not once since I began its use have I had pain in the head. In fact, it is my opinion that a careful and persistent use of the Balm will effect a cure in the worst case of catarrh.

NASAL BALM INSTANTLY RELIEVES Cold in the Head.

A. W. Mallory, Mallorytown, Ont., says: My daughter suffered for years from a most distressing and annoying Catarrh. Her case was under the treatment of eminent physicians in the United States and Canada. Two months use of Nasal Balm has had more beneficial effects than all former treatment combined.

L. D. Dion, Dept. Railways and Canals, Ottawa, says: I am very glad to give you to-day the testimony that Nasal Balm has completely cured my catarrh, from which I suffered for nearly three years.

T. D. D. Lord, 8 Clarence-street, Toronto, says: I wish here to testify to the unequalled healing powers of your Nasal Balm. I have been troubled for three years by what the doctors call post nasal catarrh, and have tried everything in the city that could be obtained, in the shape of catarrh cures, and found no permanent relief from any of them, till a friend one day advised me to try your Nasal Balm, and I find that even one bottle has done me more good than all the medicines put together that I have persecuted myself with before. I was very much troubled with spitting and hawking, especially in the morning, so much so that my throat was continually in a raw condition, but I am now beginning to know what it is to be able to speak freely. I shal not fail to recommend it to any of my friends suffering from the like disease.

NASAL BALM POSITIVELY CURES CATARRH.

D. Derbyshire, Mayor of Brockville and President of the Ontario Creamery Association, says: Nasal Balm beats the world for Catarrh and Cold in the Head. In my own case it effected relief from the first application.

Isaac Waterman, Imperial Oil Co'y, Petrolia, Ont., says: Nasal Balm gave me the most perfect satisfaction of any medicine I ever used for Cold in the Head. I found it easy to use, quick in giving relief and effect a complete cure in a couple of hours.

If Nasal Balm is not kept in stock by your dealer it will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 Cent for small and $1 for large size bottles) by addressing

Beauty

Is desired and admired by all. Among the things which may best be done to enhance personal beauty is the daily use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. No matter what the color of the hair, this preparation gives it a lustre and pliancy that adds greatly to its charm. Should the hair be thin, harsh, dry, or fading gray, Ayer's Hair Vigor will restore the color, bring out a new growth, and render the old soft and shiny. For keeping the scalp clean, cool, and healthy, there is no better preparation in the market.

"I am free to confess that a trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor has convinced me that it is a genuine article. Its use has not only restored the hair of my wife and daughter to be

Abundant and Glossy,

but it has given my rather stunted mustache a respectable length and appearance."—E. Britton, Oakland, Ohio.

"My hair was coming out (without any assistance from my wife, either). I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor, using only one bottle, and I now have as fine a head of hair as any one could wish for."—R. T. Schmitter, Dickson, Tenn.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor in my family for a number of years, and regard it as the best hair preparation I know of. It keeps the scalp clean, the hair soft and lively, and preserves the original color. My wife has used it for a long time with most satisfactory results."—Benjamin M. Johnson, M.D., Thomas Hill, Mo.

"My hair was becoming harsh and dry, but after using half a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor it grew black and glossy. I cannot express the joy and gratitude I feel."—Mabel C. Hardy, Delavan, Ill.*

Poetry.

A SONG OF YOUTH AND AGE.

When on the dimpled cheek of Youth
Health's blooming roses blow;
When songs of rapture, hope and truth
From lips of beauty flow,
When youthful feet right gayly tread
Where there not two appear,
How joyously the days go round
The weeks, the months, the years.

The young bride bedecks with fearless eye
The lofty hill of Fame,
And hope upon its rosy wift high
Ere long to carve his name.
Joy thrills his heart at every sound
Fame's trumpet call he hears,
And merrily the days go round
The weeks the months the years.

The lady of his love most prove
A queen of beauty rare;
No vain coquette, but wife in love,
As true as she is fair.
Amid the tender stars at night
He sees her dear eyes shine,
As with a trusting fond delight,
He worships at her shrine.

When on the furrowed cheek of Age
Care's hollow wrinkles show,
The old man turns his life's last page
With trembling hand and slow.
Dark lower the skies, in every sound
Death's mournful dirge he hears,
And wearily the days go round,
The weeks, the months the years.

The old man sees through tear-blurred eyes
The lofty hill of fame,
Whose echo into hopes in vain lie,
Where none may mark his name.
One lonely little nameless mound
At every step appears,
And wearily the days go round,
The weeks, the months, the years.

The lady of his love, alas!
Hath closed her gentle eyes
With but one tiny turf of grass
To show him where she lies.
'Old wife of mine,' he whispers low
"Above the grave I see
The star of Faith whose beams I know
Shall guide me soon to thee."

CHAPTER XX.

MRS. THORNTON'S DISCOVERY.

"MY husband," continued Mrs. Thornton, "had a cigar-case that he seemed to like very much. I have often asked him who gave it to him, for he had a fashion of touching it with gentle, caressing fingers, as though it were very dear to him. 'Who gave you that, Gustave?' I asked one morning, as he was looking at it.

"He smiled—not with his eyes, as people do who are amused, but with his lips—a cold, constrained smile, that gave one a terrible impression of falseness.

"'I can not tell; let me think. I remember; I bought it at a fancy fair.'

"Perhaps I looked incredulous, for he continued:

"'Why do you ask me, Clara?'

"'Because you seem so fond of it,' I replied. 'You are always taking it out to look at it.'

"He laughed.

"'What a happy wife,' he said, 'to have no other rival than a cigar-case.'

"I took it up in my hands to admire the beautiful embroidery. He seemed restless and unquiet till it was in his possession again.

"'I paid very dearly for that,' he said. 'If ever you go to a fancy fair, Clara, you will understand how.'

"Yet I could not divest myself of some uneasy feeling over it, and one day he came to me saying that he had lost it.

"'Lost it I have not,' he said; 'it is somewhere about, but I have mislaid it. I wish you would give a look round, Clara.'

"So I went into his dressing room, rather an unusual thing for me to do. I intended to look in his wardrobe. I did so, but without any success; then I felt in the pockets of different coats. Mrs. Rymer, from one of them I drew out a letter; it was in an envelope, but lay loose in the pocket, with a photograph inside it. I cannot tell what impulse made me open it. I read these words—they are engraven on my heart, and will never be forgotten:

"'MY dearest—I inclose the photograph as you wish. So you played the grand coup. Rather a bore that kind of a girl; still one must hope for the best. Write by return. I shall expect you to-morrow.'

"There was no signature but the letter 'E.' Now, Mrs. Rymer, there was neither date nor envelope, so that I could not possibly tell when the letter had been written; but the terrible suspicion arose in my mind that it was newly written; that the grand coup meant marrying me, and that I was a bore. I had no reason for thinking so, none in the least; it might be a mere morbid fancy. What do you think? Tell me honestly—do not be afraid of hurting me. What do you think yourself?"

Think! She knew just as well as though Gustave Thornton had made her his confidante; she knew that he cared nothing for the unhappy wife; and she felt equally certain that he cared for many others. Still the piteous, pleading eyes asked for comfort. What could she say?

"You, of course, answer me!" cried Mrs. Thornton. "Tell me—what do you think?"

"I am thinking," replied Silvia, gently; "and this is what I say that if I were in your place, I should most certainly give my husband the benefit of the doubt. The letter may have been written long before he ever saw you. There can be no certainty; give him the full benefit of the doubt—generously."

The poor, pale, hopeless face cleared.

"So I will," she replied. "Then Mrs. Rymer, inside the case as I tell you, there was a photograph. Ah! I can not describe that—the portrait of such a beautiful girl, with a low brow and rippling hair, proud eyes and sweet lips—so beautiful, no man who had ever loved her could love me."

"You do not know that he ever did love her," said Silvia, gravely.

"No; it may have been a fancy, idle as the others—it may have been a fancy photograph—one the fear of which pleased him; but you could not even guess how it has preyed upon me; no one could. Night and day that beautiful face has been before me. Let me confess all my jealousy to you. When he is away, I am always thinking that perhaps he is with her. I picture to myself that beautiful face—pensive, smiling, gay, bewitching, and—"she added, in a sudden burst of passion, "it is killing me! It is killing me!"

"Still," said Silvia, gravely, "it may all be fancy. Have you ever seen any one like her?"

"No. And every time my husband speaks of friends—lady friends—I always ask the Christian name; but I know none beginning with E who would be likely to write to him in that fashion. Now tell me, quite honestly, do you think it all nervous fancy of mine?"

"I can not see any reality in it," replied Silvia; "and nervous people magnify everything."

She remembered it afterward as a strange coincidence. That very evening, Gustave Thornton went into his wife's boudoir. She was looking brighter and better than she had done for some days—the result, perhaps, of that conversation. She flushed crimson with delight, and certainly Mr. Thornton, in evening dress, looked pleasant enough to attract any one.

"Are you not going out, Gustave?" she asked.

"Not at present, if you can put up with my society for a short time, and if Mrs. Rymer will be kind to me, and not too severe, I shall be happy to stay with you for an hour."

If he had been a better man, the expression of her face must have touched him. She did not know how to welcome him enough, how to do sufficient for his entertainment; she would have laid the whole world at his feet if she could, while he sat, with a cynical smile on his handsome face, watching Silvia. Suddenly he turned to his wife:

"Clara," he said, "has it ever struck you that this great, solitary mansion is like a prison?"

"No," she replied. "I should sooner compare it to a paradise, when you are in it, Gustave."

"What a superabundance of sentiment you have. I think it the gloomiest place I have ever been in. What do you think, Mrs. Rymer?"

"Mrs. Rymer thinks nothing, and has no opinion to offer on the matter," said Silvia, coldly; and Mrs. Thornton raised her head in wonder at hearing her husband addressed in these cold, abrupt terms.

He did not seem to resent it in the least.

"Could we do nothing to make it a little livelier?" he asked.

In one moment she was all excitement at the prospect of pleasing him.

"He wants to spend more time at home," she thought. "What can be done to amuse him?" It was pitiful to see how the thin fingers worked almost convulsively at the fringe of her shawl.

"What would you like?" she said. "You know, Gustave, I would do anything."

"Yes—yes—I know—really the house is like a great tomb. Suppose now we have a dinner-party; that would fatigue you less than anything else, because the servants can manage everything. We have an excellent cook, fortunately."

"It would be very pleasant," she said, with a smile—but her heart misgave her. Weak, frail, trembling, how was she to bear the excitement?—and yet he never gave one thought of that.

"What is the use," he continued, "of this great house, and this retinue of servants, if we do nothing? I think, you know, Clara, that you have given way to invalid fancies long enough. A little change would do you good."

He either could not or would not recognize the fact that she was past that—that the only change possible for her would be when her soul put on immortality. She tried to look pleased and excited; but Silvia saw how the beetle color came and went—how the thin hands trembled—and the white lips quivered.

"Some friends of mine who have been abroad have just returned to England," she said, "and I am anxious to show them every attention."

But this time, as he spoke, he did not once look at his wife, and there was a slight expression of embarrassment as he met Silvia's clear, frank, half-scornful gaze.

"Friends of yours," cried his wife. "I shall be so pleased, Gustave. You never talk to me about your friends. Who are they?"

"The Baron Jules Sterling and his sister, a widow lady; they have been abroad some time, and only returned to England last week."

"Will you make out a list of those you would like to ask to meet them, and settle the date?" said Mrs. Thornton. "Then leave all the rest to me."

She did not say to me, as she would have done once; and as she spoke she looked at Silvia, as though she would fain ask her for help.

"I do not want a stiff, formal affair," he said, "but something light and conversational—bright, sparkling people—no Mrs. Grundies. I do think, of all the insufferable human beings, a dull woman is the most intolerable."

"Well, we will try to avoid that catastrophe," she replies, but her trembling lips show that the arrow has gone, as he intended it should, straight home.

"We will say next Tuesday," he continued, coolly, as though he had not just administered the mortal stab; "it will be something to look forward to—a little from the unvarying monotony and prison-like gloom."

Then Mr. Thornton rose, and, with a few graceful words, sauntered from the room.

CHAPTER XXI.

A STRANGER RECOGNIZED.

"THERE is something underneath," said Silvia to herself as the handsome face vanished. "Unless I am mistaken, we shall hear more of Madame la Baronne. How false his eyes are; he could not look at me—he never offered to look at his wife. There is more in it than we understand."

"Mrs. Rymer," said the weak, clear voice, "do not be angry—do not laugh—if I ask you one question."

"I will do neither," said Silvia, gently; "ask me any question that you will."

"When your husband was living, did he—did he kiss you sometimes before he left you?"

It was such a simple question, but it stabbed her like the point of a sharp sword. For one moment the memory of those past happy days rose and mocked her. He whom she had loved so dearly had never even left a room where she was sitting without kissing her, yet it had been all false—utterly all false.

"You have puzzled me," she said, recovering herself by a vigorous effort. "You forget what I will tell you so often, that your husband is not a demonstrative man."

"He was once. What has changed him?"

"Men are like chameleons, changing every moment," said Silvia, lightly; "and there is no reason to be given for it, except that it is their nature to do so."

The grave eyes lingered on her face.

"Mrs. Rymer, you said your name was Silvia, and Silvia is a beautiful name. May I use it? It seems to bring me nearer to you. Silvia, do you know that you always speak as though you had some great cause to dislike men?"

"That must be an idle habit," she replied, carelessly. "Now, shall we discuss this dinner party? You will like everything very nice, as it is in honor of your husband's friends. Do you know that while he was talking I was arranging a very elegant dress for you?"

She looked up with some animation.

"Were you? That was kind. What was it?"

"A grand combination of blue brocade, silver, and pearls. It shall be a triumph of art, if you will leave it to Felicie and me."

"That I will gladly do," said the poor lady.

"Then you must rest well for a day or two beforehand, so that you may not be tired, but may be able to talk to your guests. You shall not have one care on your mind. You must leave everything to me—flowers, lights, and invitations. Do not think of one single thing, except that you are going to please your husband by pleasing his friends. Promise me you will not have one thought—one sad thought, I mean—between now and then."

"I do promise," she said simply and gratefully as a child.

Silvia kept her word. She busied herself in superintending every preparation for the great event. Tuesday came, and she looked around the sumptuous drawing-room with no little pride. She had arranged the flowers so skillfully that the very aspects of the rooms was changed.

"We have surely a fairy at work here," said Mr. Thornton; "or if I dare compliment Mrs. Rymer, I should say a skillful and elegant lady."

But Mrs. Rymer did not even gratify him by appearing to hear the remark. Quickly, all the time, she was observing him, and she detected in him a subdued, triumphant excitement. Then she went to superintend Mrs. Thornton's toilet. Felicie had certainly excelled herself, and had called in art to help nature; the shining, graceful folds were so arranged as to conceal the painful thinness of the feeble figure; the soft, brown hair was tastefully dressed, and pearls interwoven in the rich coils. Did Felicie touch the pale cheeks with unrivaled bloom? At all events, Mrs. Thornton, dressed with the most exquisite elegance, flushed and happy at hearing Silvia's compliments, hoping to win her husband's admiration, looked prettier and better than she had done before.

"We had better go down to the drawing room, Silvia" she said; "our visitors will be here very soon, and they are strangers to me."

They went down together; Silvia in her dark crape dress, with her delicately lovely face, a pitiful contrast to the poor lady who held her hand so nervously. Mr. Thornton started as he saw his wife.

"Quite a resurrection!" Silvia heard him say to himself, with a moan; but Mrs. Thornton fortunately never observed it. She went up to him with a smile, and the shy, timid grace of a child.

"Are you pleased with me?" she asked, gently.

"You are very magnificent, Clara," he said, carelessly.

She placed her jeweled hand on his shoulder. "That is not enough to make me happy, Gustave," she said. "Are you pleased with me?"

It was not her pretty pathos, but the flaming indignation he saw in Silvia's face, that made him speak kindly to her.

"You look very nice," he said, and he kissed her lightly, carelessly, on the forehead. Still, it was a caress to her, and she turned away, poor, loving, deluded child, with a rapturous smile.

"I felt sure this was going to be a happy day," she said; and Silvia could have wept with sheer pity for her.

"Gustave," said Mrs. Thornton, "I wish you would tell me something about our visitors. I am afraid I shall be strange and ill at ease."

But before he had time to reply the drawing room door was opened, and the footman announced "Monsieur le Baron Sterling," and the next moment, "Mme. la Baronne von Patteuil."

Mr. Thornton went forward with an air of great cordiality to receive the visitors. A slight cry from Mrs. Thornton caused Silvia to look at her. She had sunk back, white, faint, and trembling, in her chair. Silvia went up to her quickly.

"Are you ill?" she asked. The sad eyes were raised to her face.

"Silvia," said Mrs. Thornton, in a faint whisper, "that is the lady of the photograph!"

"Never mind, it will not do to give way; there is nothing in it. Try to stand up."

"I must ask Madame la Baronne to pardon my wife," said Mr. Thornton, in his calm voice; "she is a great invalid, and the least exertion is too much for her."

The look he gave his unfortunat wife had much tender consideration in it. Mme. la Baronne was all grace, sweetness, and suavity. She took a seat by the poor wife's side, and commenced a string of tender inquiries about her health, while Silvia, listening, loathed and hated the false, cruel man, who had brought this new form of suffering to his unhappy wife.

THE DUKE IN TORONTO.

A Loyal Reception to the Royal Party—His Highness on Good Terms With Everybody.

TORONTO, May 28.—The Duke and Duchess of Connaught arrived this afternoon at 4.50 from North Bay. They were accompanied by Major-General Sir John C. McNeill, Queen's equery; Capt. Cavey, military secretary to the Duke; Mrs. Cavey and Dr. Kilkelly. The ducal party was met at Parkdale by the Mayor and the members of the City Council. The Lieutenant Governor was indisposed and could not join the party but his secretary and the commanding officers of C company did. They were introduced to the Duke and Duchess and then the train bowled into the Union station, where an immense crowd was in waiting. The Duke was dressed in a dark tweed suit, and looked brown from the sun. The Duchess chatted with the Mayor, and the royal couple, in short, placed themselves on such good with the loyal subjects of the Queen that they were cheered till the throats of the multitude became hoarse. The Mayor presented the Duchess with a handsome bouquet, which she carried in her hand, and the Duke shook hands with all who were introduced to him or brought under his notice.

They drove to the Queen's hotel where the army and navy veterans were drawn up. The Duke talked to each of them individually. Many of them told him they had seen him a child at Woolwich. Others had served under him. All were decorated with many medals. The Duke was particularly pleased to meet these old heroes. One man named Hanks was one of the nine survivors of the almost complete annihilation of the 23rd Regiment at Isandula in the Zulu war. Col. Cavey had served in this war and the Duke and he talked to the soldier for quite a time. He also promised Captain Andrews, the brave swimmer who has saved many lives and who is now blind, that he would recommend him for the Albert medal.

In the evening the royal party dined at the Government house, and a large party was invited, including His Grace Archbishop Walsh, the Attorney General the Chief Justice of Ontario, the Mayor, the Bishop of Toronto, the president of the Board of Trade, W. R. Meredith, and many clergymen and other prominent citizens. To-morrow the Duke will visit Osgoode hall, the University, the General hospital, the Ontario artists' exhibition, and in the evening, at the Pavilion, the civic addresses and the addresses from the council of the county of York and the Imperial Federation league will be presented. The rest of the evening will be spent at the Royal Canadian Yacht club on the Island. The Royal party left for Niagara on Saturday morning.

Practical Pointers.

As a simple, natural laxative, stomachic, blood, brain and nerve tonic, when taken as directed, the value of Burdock Blood Bitters cannot be overestimated, while as a cure for constipation, indigestion, liver disease, impure blood, sleeplessness, nervous and sick headache, it is the best that money can buy.

As we have only Mrs. Booth's word for that, we decline to put faith in it. Her husband has been asked time and again by the leading papers in England and elsewhere to publish a financial statement of the receipts and expenditure of the Army, but he declines to do so. Like the Czar of Russia, he does as he pleases, and nobody must say him nay.—Palmerston Telegraph.

The Sun.
IT SHINES FOR ALL.
ORANGEVILLE, JUNE 12, 1890.

DR. BARR'S VICTORY.

It is with as small amount of pleasure that we are able to say that Dufferin has remained loyal to the Conservative cause. With two candidates—a Grit and a Prohibitionist—against him Dr. Barr, the Conservative nominee, is able to say that he has polled more votes than the combined votes of Mr. Bailey and Dr. Gaviller. Although the vote polled was very small, a little over half the real vote, Dr. Barr managed to lead the Grit candidate by 526, and the Prohibitionist by 620.

THE SUN worked hard to secure Dr. Barr's election; and we are pleased to say our efforts have been crowned with success. We have not the least doubt that Dr. Barr will fill the position to which he was elected by the honest ratepayers of Dufferin to the satisfaction of all.

BARR VICTORIOUS!

Polling passed off very quietly in Orangeville Thursday. The small vote polled is accounted for by the heavy rain that prevailed during the whole afternoon. It was thought by all parties that this town would give a majority against Dr. Barr, but after the ballots were counted the doctor had a majority of 74. He also had a majority in every township, town, and village, except the township of East Luther and Dr. Gaviller headed the poll there.

There was very great difficulty in getting the returns owing to the storm partially disabling the telegraph lines.

The vote is as follows:

| Barr | Bailey | Gaviller |
|---|---|---|
| ORANGEVILLE. | | |
| 142 | 78 | 68 |
| SHELBURNE. | | |
| 119 | 45 | 18 |
| MELANCTHON. | | |
| 235 | 116 | 51 |
| MONO. | | |
| 216 | 50 | 53 |
| AMARANTH. | | |
| 173 | 71 | 76 |
| MULMUR. | | |
| 271 | 66 | 94 |
| EAST GARAFRAXA. | | |
| 90 | 32 | 40 |
| EAST LUTHER. | | |
| 84 | 97 | 111 |

Thus our candidate is elected by the significant majority of 526 over the Grit candidate and 620 over the ambitious Third Party man from Grand Valley; or he polled 15 votes more than the two men who were left at home.

EDITORIAL NOTES

MOWAT is safe for four years more. His majority, however, has been cut down to 17. In Peel K Chisholm defeated J. L. Hughes by a majority of 157.

ONE thing that we are exceedingly well pleased about in the recent elections is that Mr. W. H. Hammell has been returned for Cardwell. In our last issue we advised the electors of Cardwell to vote for Hammell. They did so and elected him by a handsome majority.

LAST Monday night's fire served as a forcible illustration the necessity of enforcing the fire by law more rigorously in future. These miserable wooden roofs were capital conductors for the devouring element, and the wonder is that the firemen succeeded in getting the fire under control when they did. What's the use of the council passing by-laws if they do not enforce them? Wake up! gentlemen, this is the latter part of the nineteenth century.

The question having been privately asked Mrs. Booth if it was right to sell the War Cry on Sunday, that lady has publicly answered the question, by causing a letter to be inserted in said paper, in which she says "that works of mercy and charity may not only be performed, but are positively enjoined to be performed on the Sabbath. And as the War Cry is emphatically Jesus Christ's paper, it is of course right and proper to sell it on any day of the week." She also says that the "profit it produces goes not into the pockets of private individuals, but it is used for the extension of the Kingdom."

THE emigration from Iceland to Canada and the United States has of late years been so large that complaints are now made that the island is in danger of being depopulated. It is said that this year as many as 20,000 persons—or more than a fourth of the remaining population—will leave the island. The extent of the drain is shown by the fact that, although the ordinary annual excess of births over deaths is 640, the number of inhabitants fell during the last four years from 71,613 to 69,224, showing a decrease of 2,389, instead of an increase of 2,560. The emigration is chiefly from the northern and eastern districts, where agricultural operations can be carried on only with the utmost difficulty. "The emigrants," says the recent blue book on the subject, "have settled principally in the North West provinces of Canada, and have sent home such favorable accounts of their new domicile that is natural that the emigration should increase. There has been a succession of unfavorable harvests and the competition of foreign steam fishing boats of the native seamen." This last grievance reminds us of the rivalry in our own fishing grounds and those of our neighbor, Newfoundland.—Montreal Gazette.

A BRIEF SESSION.

The Underwriter Has Heard from in The Matter of Our Poor System of Fire Protection.

When the legislators of our great town take it into their heads to do business on the nineteenth century plan they generally do so or—sit in the chamber until 11.30 P.M.

At the appointed time on Monday night Mayor Walsh, Reeve Lindsay, Deputy-reeve Sudsmit, and Aldermen Youmans, Green, Bailey, Ketcham and Gillespie were ready for the rush. Acting Clerk Irwin read the minutes of the previous meeting and the mayor read from Dominion Express Co., 75c.; Jno. Irwin $18; ordered to be paid. An account from A. Hughson amounting to $20 was referred to the Assessment committee.

SERIOUS INDEED.

A couple of weeks ago the citizens were a little startled to read in THE SUN an extract from a report made by the Fire Underwriters' Association regarding the inefficiency of our system of fire protection. The association forwarded a copy of the report to the council. Several aldermen aired their sentiments on the question, and the communication was referred to the F. & W. committee.

A RAILWAY DEAL.

Mayor Walsh informed the council he had received a letter from the president of the C. P. R. in the matter of the town's claim against that company. The C. P. R. offers the town the use of the old C. V. R. roadbed between Melville and Orangeville and in addition to that the station grounds at the foot of east Broadway. The matter is in the hands of the special committee.

REPORTS.

Reeve Lindsay read the treasurer's statement for May.

A ruction was raised when Chairman Gillespie brought in the F. & W. committee's report, recommending certain repairs at the waterworks. The Underwriter inspector's report will be considered before anything will be done, and, consequently the report was withdrawn.

EXTRAS.

The sum of $15 was voted to Chief Shields for time and trouble in enforcing Ketchum's dog by law.

The matter of repairing the high school was referred to the committee on finance.

Reeve Lindsay signified his intention of introducing a motion at the next meeting to change the persons who compose the F. & W. committee.

The deputy-reeve gave notice that he intended to move a change in the hour for meeting during the dog days.

MONO COUNCIL.

The council met on the 30th of May as a court of revision. The members all present, the reeve in the chair. The members having subscribed to the usual declaration, the following appeals were taken under consideration: On application the E½ of lot 21, in the 2nd. con., E. H. St, was transferred from the Non-Resident roll and placed on the Resident roll to Arthur McCarston; James Neil appeal to be lowered $50; William Jackson reduced $150; on motion of Still, seconded by Island, the S. E. corner of lot No. 11, 1st con., W. H. S., was entered on the assessment roll to Rev. G. B Morley at a valuation $300; David Horner reduced $100; appeal of George Little, jr., to be lowered on real property and also that he was assessed for property he did not occupy, the valuation of his property was fixed at $2000, and George Little, sr., was assessed for one acre at a valuation of $200; Robert Smith reduced $300; John Skelton reduced $100; Charles Scott reduced $100; James Robinson assessment sustained; James Dowling reduced $100; George H Harshaw reduced $50, E ½ 5, con 2, W. H. S, Samuel Ewing reduced $150; Wm Clark to be assessed S. E. p., E ½ 12, con., 4, 25 acres, value $75. Andrew Heatherington reduced $50, Garret Brown reduced $100. The court then adjourned.

The councillors then took their seats for the transaction of the general business of the township. The Reeve in the chair. James Robinson asks for damages sustained by teams driving through his his property.

Mr. Reid moved, seconded by Mr. Dyers, that Messrs. Island and Still be appointed to examine said property and ascertain the amount of damages received.

On motion of Mr. Reid, seconded by Mr. Still, the sum of ten dollars was granted to improve the hill opposite lot 13, 1st E. H. St

Mr. Reid moved, seconded by Mr. Still that the sum of ten dollars be granted to Wm. Bell to improve the road opposite lots 9 and 10, 2nd. line, E H S.

Mr. Dynes moved, seconded by Mr. Reid, that Messrs. Island and Still be appointed to examine the road, lot 9 to 13, 5th line., and also that Messrs. Island and Dynes be appointed to examine the 2nd line, opposite lot No. 32.

On motion of Mr. Reid, seconded by Mr. Still, the sum of ten dollars was ordered to be paid to John Reaney for work performed on Town line, Mono and Adjala.

On motion of Mr. Reid, seconded by Mr. Still, the sum of ten dollars was granted to W. E Hall to assist in fencing a new line of road through part of lot No. 8, in the 2nd con., E. H. S.

Moved by Mr. Dynes, seconded by Mr. Still that the sum of sixteen dollars and fifty cents be paid to Wm. McKim for cedar and work performed under the supervision of William Little, overseer.

On motion of Mr. Island, seconded by Mr. Still, the sum of twelve dollars was granted to repair the road opposite lots No. 10 and 11, 3rd. line, E. H. St.

On motion the sum of three dollars was ordered to be paid to Hugh McKenna for work performed on the 6th line opposite lot No, 12.

On motion of Mr. Still, seconded by Mr. Island, the sum of ten dollars was granted to George Hewett, indigent.

Moved by Mr. Island, seconded by Mr. Dynes, that Messrs. Reid, Still and Island be a committee to superintend the survey of the road where it diverges from the original allowance and intersects the property of W. E. Hall, E ½ of lot No. 11, con., 3. E. H. S., and to have the necessary papers prepared for conveyancing the said line of road to the corporation of Mono.

Moved by Mr. Island, seconded by Mr. Reid, that the clerk be instructed to notify the several pound keepers of their appointment to said office, and also that they subscribe to the required declaration of office.

The council then adjourned until the first Friday in August, at the hour of ten o'clock a. m.

ANDREW HENRY,
Clerk.

Local Intelligence.

To-day is fairing.

The Old Stone Mill is running again.

Pay Orangeville a visit on Dominion day.

For the best flour, go to the Stone Mill.

Farmers, get your grinding done at the Stone Mill.

Read the G. P. R.'s farmers' excursion ad. in another column.

In another column Mr. Thos. Dawson advertises the loss of a mare.

A young lady picked up four dollars on Broadway the other evening.

Posters and small bills for Dominion day celebration are out. Note the attractions.

Shelburne, Grand Valley and Credit Forks correspondence held over until next week.

Four cases were tried before Judge McCarthy at the general sessions held here this week

Nightwatchman Parkin is preserving the peace of our town while the chief-constable is at Barrie.

The Orangeville driving association will hold a matinee on the driving park to-morrow (Friday) evening.

The first championship lacrosse match in Orangeville this season will take place on the Dufferin lacrosse grounds Friday afternoon.

G. T. & Gen. Pass. Agent Edgar has our thanks for a guide book of the fishing and hunting resorts reached by the G. T. railway.

All the arrangements in connection with the Orange battalion's excursion have been completed, and they will be here on Saturday.

While Miss Jennie Duffy was crossing a bridge on Church street last Saturday evening she stumbled and fell into the creek, badly bruising her face.

The Dufferins did not go to Shelburne on Friday to play their first championship match of the season, and the game has been postponed in consequence.

Two well-known citizens of the town engaged in a pugilistic encounter last Friday morning. Scratched faces and discolored optics were the result of the battle.

Mr. J. W. Bengough, the well known cartoonist, entertained a large crowd at the town hall on Tuesday night. His local hits provoked a great amount of laughter.

Among those who were successful in passing examinations recently held at the Toronto School of Pharmacy, we notice the name of T. E. Sawtell, son of Mr E. Sawtell.

The court of revision for the town has has been very busy for the past two nights. Many appeals have and are yet to be dealt with. The majority of appellants gained their point.

The P. S. trustees held their regular monthly meeting on Tuesday evening. They considered the advisability of purchasing a new bell for the school, the present one being badly cracked.

Jailer Sutherland, Chief Shields and Robt. Irwin are attending the supposed burglars' trial, which is going on at Barrie. It will be remembered that the crooks were captured in Orangeville about three weeks ago.

We have received from Mr. Arch. Blue a report of the royal commission, appointed to enquire into the mineral resources of Ontario. The report is very interesting reading and should be read by every man in Ontario.

COUNTY COUNCIL.—The members of the Dufferin County council met in the court house, Orangeville, on Tuesday last, but as the great provincial struggle was approaching they adjourned for two weeks, and will meet on Monday, the 16th. Geo. Bailey and Dr. Gaviller, both members of the council, were aspirants for Dufferin.

JOHN ON THE WATCH.—Joe Peteps was fined $2 at Tuesday morning's police court for spitting tobacco juice on the floor of Her Majesty's postoffice here. Caretaker Wilkins says he has strict orders from the government to prohibit tobacco spitting and to keep dogs out of the postoffice; and he further says he intends to enforce those rules.

AUCTION SALE.—The Rev. G. H. Webb, of Cardwell, advertises an auction sale to take place at his residence on Wednesday, the 18th inst. Horses, household furniture etc, etc., will be sold without reserve. "Jimmy" Patterson will commence proceedings at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The rev. gentleman, we believe, intends to remove to Toronto.

A WASHOUT AT CROMBIE'S.—On Wednesday night as a freight train was coming down from Owen Sound the engine and several cars left the track at Crombie's crossing, killing three cattle which were part of a carload. The accident was caused by a washout, owing to the extensive floods of the forepart of the evening. The express from Owen Sound Thursday morning was delayed several hours in consequence.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.—At the time of the heavy rain on Tuesday lightning struck the stable of Mr. John Preston, clerk of East Garafraxa, near Marsville. Mr. Preston was in the stable at the time, and narrowly escaped being instantly killed. The building took fire after the lightning struck it, and would have been consumed had it not been for the dextrous efforts put forth by Mr. P. to save it. As it was, the lightning destroyed some of his farming implements.

FARMERS' WELL PICNIC.—A picnic under the auspices of the Dufferin Farmers' Institute will be held in the driving park, Grand Valley, on Friday, the 20th inst. Besides a number of our local orators who will address the picnickers are: Charles Drury, Minister of Agriculture, Prof. Panton, M. A., of Guelph, and others. Any eight or ten people presenting themselves at any station on the C. P. R. will be given reduced rates. The farmers of Dufferin and adjoining counties are cordially invited to be present with their ladies.

A RAILSTORM.—Last Wednesday evening a genuine rainstorm swept over this section of the country. Thunder and lightning accompanied the storm and struck terror to the hearts of many of our citizens. When the storm was at its height, an alarm of fire was sounded, and almost immediately the streets which were completely deserted a moment before were now filled with excited people. There was no fire, however, and the firemen, who had responded to the call in a remarkably short time, returned to the fire hall. The electric light had to be shut down for an hour during the storm.

NEW GRAIN DEALERS.—On Saturday last Messrs. Clarke & McCutcheon, of Bolton, purchased the large elevator at the C. P. R. station lately occupied by Gilchrist & Kent. Competition in the grain line in Orangeville is not so brisk as it might be, and the new comers are consequently welcomed by the farmers. It is a notorious fact that the farmers living within a few miles of Orangeville team their grain miles past this town, when Orangeville should be their nearest and best market. Messrs. Clarke & McCutcheon are said to be men of extra business qualities and they will no doubt make a success of their investment.

AN APPRECIATIVE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—Editors who receive complimentary tickets to Agricultural fairs and other places are often looked upon as deadheads, but the managers of an Ohio county fair, who have had some experience in such matters, had the following printed upon the complimentary tickets they issued: "This ticket probably has been paid for ten times over by the paper to which it is issued. It will be honored in the hands of any man, woman or child, white, black, red or yellow who favors the association by presenting it. It is good for entrance and grand stand, and the bearer if driving, will be entitled to pass a team free. The association recognizes that its splendid success is owing largely, if not wholly, to the notices so freely given by the press, and while we cannot render an equivalent in cash, we return our grateful thanks."

PERSONAL.

Mr. Thos. Clegg, of Toronto, was in town this week.

Mr. W. J. Middleton, of Toronto, was in town this week.

Mrs. J. S. Youmans is visiting her parents at Epping.

Clerk Preston of East Garafraxa gave us a pleasant call yesterday.

Miss Katie Nesbitt, of Toronto, is visiting at the Elgin house.

Rev. C. E. McIntyre is attending the Methodist conference at Chatham.

Mr. Ed. Hand and sister, of Stanton, were visiting friends in town last week.

Mrs. Clare, of Preston, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Alex. Johnston of this town.

Mr. T. Bull, of Cooksville, spent a few days with his father in law, Mr. S. Donner, last week.

Mrs Foley left Wednesday morning for an extended visit to friends in different parts of Michigan.

Mr. Jas. E. Booth, of Toronto, formerly proprietor of the Gordon house here, renewed old acquaintances this week.

Mrs. J. Gilkinson left on Monday for a trip through England, Ireland and Scotland. We hope Mrs. G. will have a pleasant voyage.

BLOUNT.

We are getting plenty of rain now.

Business is booming around here and vicinity.

A sad spectacle was beheld near Blount the other day. A farmer from Caledon, a lawyer from Orangeville, and a clerk in one of the principal stores of the county town came out here and got lost. Neighbors, when they heard the news, went to search for them next morning, but no trace of the lost men could be found, except an empty bottle which at one time contained "forty rod." We have since learned that they got back to Orangeville all right.

MELANCTHON STATION.

Mr. Henderson, of Toronto, is visiting at Mr. J. Silk's.

Potato planting, and sheep washing are the orders of the day.

Mr. Wm. Polley had a successful ploughing bee on Monday last.

Mr. Joseph Bell left on Monday for Rosemount, where he has found employment.

Mr. Thomas Hunter raised a frame barn on Saturday last. Thos. Slack and Jas. Sawden were captains, the latter coming out second best. Size 30x40, Jas. Arnold, builder.

So far, this spring has been a very unfavorable one for the farmers who occupy low land, on account of so much rain. But fine weather has arrived at last. Considerable fall wheat has been ploughed up, but that which remained looks very well. Spring crops look splendid. Trees of every description are out in leaf and the forest presents a beautiful appearance. The fruit trees promises a good yield, especially cherries and plums.

"For a long time I had no appetite, was restless at night, and very much debilitated. After taking two bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla my strength and appetite returned, and my health was completely restored."—D. M. Fisher, Oswego, N. Y.

Chopping done for 7 per cent at the Old Stone Mill.

GREAT FLOODS

A JOHNSTOWN AT HOME.

Great Damage Caused By A Flood In Orangeville Thursday Afternoon.

Bridges, Houses, Side-Walks and Dams Demolished.

HALF-A-MILE OF THE C. P. R. TRACK WASHED OUT

Happily no Lives were Lost—Many Narrow Escapes From Death—Citizens Imprisoned in Their Houses

Tuesday was a memorable and awful day in Orangeville. A thrilling event occurred that will be remembered as long as Orangeville lasts. The little creek, known as the Mill creek, which flows eastward through the South and East wards was the cause of a great deal of damage to property. The recent heavy rains swelled the heretofore unimportant creek to which swept everything before it. Away up on west Broadway where the C.P.R. crosses the road can be seen a undermined railway track and a wide gully that impedes communication. Coming down the railway to Centre street, opposite the Orange hall, the entire sidewalk, culverts and railway track are far from their former positions. Then the track between Centre and Bythia streets is badly displaced. At Stevenson's carding mill the bridge across Bythia street and the mill race was completely flooded away. The pond below the mill was filled with water, which began to run over the embankment when

A RAGING TORRENT

THE DAM GAVE AWAY.

The immense volume of water was greatly increased by this break, and it dashed wilder than ever down across John street, carrying sidewalks, bridges, fences and immense stones down the torrent for further destruction. Now commences the great damage to property. After crossing John street and carrying part of Mr. Thos Dull's orchard the avalanche struck the rear end of an unoccupied house and dashed it to pieces like an egg-shell Next it struck the residence of Mr. John Graham and dashed the kitchen almost to pieces. Mrs. Graham was in the house at the time. Mr. G. Aiken and three other young men made their way to the house and rescued the lady from her perilous position. While doing so, however, they were nearly

SWEPT AWAY BY THE CURRENT.

The next house struck was that of Mr. Jas. Foulds. This was a substantial brick structure and stood the onslaught remarkably well. But notwithstanding its substantiability, the foundation was partly torn away. The inmates were prisoners in their own house, and had to remain there until the flood subsided. At this juncture the water was so high that it ran down Church street in front and behind the residence of Mr H. Haley The water in the house rose almost to the ceiling. It destroyed everything in the house and planing mill. Then it struck the Mill street bridge and knocked it into a million pieces. The old building at the end of the bridge, occupied by James Riddell several years ago as a paint shop, was struck and carried a few yards down the stream. It struck an obstruction and the immense waves washed it nearly all away. The torrent continued its wild career down to King Bros.' furniture factory, which is situated on a little higher ground. However, the flood reached up to it and washed nearly half of the foundation from under it. The under part of the bridge on Wellington street, below the factory, was carried away, but the upper part hung together and formed the only tie that connected the two sides of the town.

The raging waters continued on their mad course to Dull's old mill pond, the dam of which could not withstand the tremendous pressure, and consequently burst, letting thousands of tons of rock and other debris down onto east Broadway. The shingle mill, which is driven by water from the pond, was badly wrecked, nearly half the entire foundation being swept from under it. The machinery in the mill was washed away by the flood.

Mr. Moses Dodds occupies a small frame building just below the dam and the back part of it was totally demolished. The next and last house damaged by the visitation was occupied by Mrs. Collins and the Misses Gaban. The structure was very much shook up. Not a vestige of the stable on the rear of the lot remains to be seen. Nearly all the houses affected by the flood lost furniture kitchen utensils, etc, and in some cases every room on the first floors is covered with mud, varying in depth from one to three feet.

It is something surprising to see where the water quarried out immense stones and carried them before it like chips.

The loss in Orangeville caused by the flood is very extensive. One thing to be thankful for is that no lives were lost, although the flood, unlike that which occurred at Alton last fall, continued for about fifteen hours. Several trains were cancelled until the track could be repaired, and the town was in darkness, the electric light works having been rendered useless by the flood.

Reports from the adjoining townships greatly add to the list of losses by the flood last week. Nearly every bridge in Mono has been rendered useless and the Hockley road has almost disappeared. Wheelock's saw mill and mill dam on the Hockley road were completely wiped out, as were also the sawmill of Hall & Armstrong and the shingle mill of Dan Markle. A Mono councillor said it would take $3000 to repair the damage.

SPRAY.

The stream that caused all the damage is now as pacific as it ever was before.

The R. & R. committee lost no time in erecting temporary bridges and putting the streets in a passable condition.

The passengers on the steamboat express had to be transferred by rigs from the station to the Junction owing to the washouts on the track.

The town will have to expend a considerable amount of money in repairing the streets and rebuilding the bridges affected by the calamity of a week ago.

The lower portion of east Broadway presented a dismal sight after the flood. Huge boulders, immense trees, cord wood and shingles lay in large piles over the street. In some places the roadbed was washed out to the depth of three feet. Church street was left in very much the same way.

Andy Collins is the proud possessor of a beautiful hound pup. The dog was chained in his stable at the time when the flood struck the building and carried it away. After the water had somewhat subsided the dog appeared on high ground without a scratch.

It was very amusing to see the way the young ladies were conveyed across the stream after the water had somewhat calmed down. Away upon Centre street two enterprising young men undertook to carry a young lady across the flooded district. They utilized their hands for a chair, and succeeded in getting the young lady to the other side of the stream. Of course they didn't mind being up to the breast in water when on such an errand.

THE SPELL BROKEN!

Fire Closely Follows the Flood.

The Union Block Receives a Close Call on Monday Night—Bad Roofs Carry the Flames Along—The Firemen do Good Work—Loss all Covered by Insurance.

The spell that has kept Orangeville free from fires for the past few months was suddenly broken on Monday night. At about 11:20 o'clock Fred Elliott and Jack Haley noticed smoke issuing from the roof of the Union block. They immediately gave the alarm, and in about ten minutes' time the firemen had two lines of hose laid from the hydrant at the corner of Broadway and Mill streets.

THE UNION BLOCK

is situated at the north side of Broadway and was originally a three-story brick building, but another half story, consisting of wooden material, was subsequently added, and this was the principal factor that made the fire spread so rapidly and greatly handicapped the firemen in their work. The ground flat of the block is occupied by T. MacAdam, grocer, G. A. Campbell, boots and shoes, Crozier & Fleming, dry goods and groceries, J. S. Mann, confectionary and fruit store. On the second flat are the central telephone office, Mechanics' institute library and reading-room, W. H. Dame's photograph gallery and W. J. Johnston's tailor shop. Happily only two rooms of the third flat were occupied, and these were utilized as a dress-making establishment by Miss McKeown.

One branch of the hose was taken up the stairway to Dame's photograph gallery, where the fire is supposed to have originated, and did very effective work. The other branch was at the front, but there wasn't sufficient pressure to throw the water to the top of the building. After several vain inducements to make the water go just three feet higher, the firemen pulled the hose on top of an adjoining building and from their point of vantage managed to get the fire under control, but it was 2:30 o'clock Tuesday morning before the gallant fire laddies could leave their post of duty. The fire, however, was confined to the second and third flats and did not reach the first.

LOSS AND INSURANCE.

Miss Mann holds an $800 policy in the Royal, which will cover her loss, the stock being damaged while being removed. Crozier & Fleming's extensive stock was badly damaged by water, most of the goods were carried to a vacant store across the road. They were insured in the Western and Royal for $5000. Mr G. A. Campbell's large stock of boots and shoes were carried into the street, but not before they were considerably damaged by water. He is insured in the Western for $2,500. Mr MacAdam's immense stock was not removed, from the store and was badly damaged by water. His loss, however, is covered by a $4000 policy in the Royal. The Mechanic's Institute library was roughly handled in being taken out, and a number of books are missing. We were unable to ascertain the amount of the insurance on the library. W. H. Dame estimats his loss at $3000, and is insured in the International of Ireland for $900. Nearly all the contents of Johnston's tailor shop were removed, but about $100 worth of clothes were rendered useless by smoke and water. He is insured in the Queen's for $375. Miss McKeown lost household furniture, etc. to the amount of $100; no insurance. The insurance on the building fully covers the loss. G A. Campbell having his part insured in the Lancashire or $5500, and Ed. Bennett his portion in the Western for $1700.

SPARKS

Engineer Harkles had steam up in eleven minutes.

The firemen had a supper at the Gordon house after the fire.

Mr. Campbell has temporary quarters in the Dury block, one door west of Walsh's law office.

If those abominable roofs had not been there, one quarter the damage would not have been done.

Monday night was the first time the firemen had a chance to show their new suits. They pronounce them "just the thing."

The electric lights burned until half-past two—two and a half hours longer than the contract calls for—and rendered the firemen great assistance.

There is not a ladder in the fire department that would reach to a second story window. This matter should be attended to at once.

It was quite apparent to everyone that the firemen lacked the knack of working together. A little drill would greatly improve our otherwise efficient brigade.

Several town people were caught in the act of walking—or running—away with boots that belonged to somebody else. They may appear at the police court before long.

CATARRH,

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS—HAY FEVER

A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N.B. This treatment is not a snuff or an ointment; both have been discarded by reputable physicians as injurious. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 303 West King Street, Toronto, Canada. Toronto Globe.

Sufferers from Catarrhal troubles should carefully read the above.

A sensation has been created throughout the South by the announcement from Rev. Sergio Maxey, a noted revivalist and Baptist minister, that he will go on the stage September 1. Maxey to-day stated his object was to unite the pulpit and the stage. He will be on the stage six days in the week and preach on Sunday. He is a nephew of ex United States Senator Maxey.

Rich and Poor,

Prince and Peasant, the Millionaire and Day Laborer, by their common use of this remedy, attest the world-wide reputation of Ayer's Pills. Leading physicians recommend these pills for Stomach and Liver Troubles, Costiveness, Biliousness, and Sick Headache; also, for Rheumatism, Jaundice, and Neuralgia. They are sugar-coated, contain no calomel, are prompt, but mild, in operation, and, therefore, the very best medicine for Family Use, as well as for Travelers and Tourists.

"I have derived great relief from Ayer's Pills. Five years ago I was taken so ill with that I was unable to do any work. I took three boxes of Ayer's Pills and was entirely cured. Since that time I am never without a box of these pills." Peter Christensen, Sherwood, Wis.

"Ayer's Pills have been in use in my family upwards of twenty years and have completely verified all that is claimed for them. In attacks of piles, from which I suffered many years, they afford greater relief than any other medicine I ever tried." — T. F. Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for a number of years, and have never found anything equal to them for giving me an appetite and imparting energy and strength to the system. I always keep them in the house." — R. D. Jackson, Wilmington, Del.

"Two boxes of Ayer's Pills cured me of severe

Headache,

from which I was long a sufferer." — Emma Keyes, Hubbardston, Mass.

"Whenever I am troubled with constipation, or suffer from loss of appetite, Ayer's Pills set me right again." — A. J. Kiser, Jr., Rock House, Va.

"Ayer's Pills are in general demand among our customers. Our sales of them exceed those of all other pills combined. We have never known them fail to give entire satisfaction." — Wright & Hannelly, San Diego, Texas.

CUPID'S HARNESS.

Most women naturally look forward to matrimony as their proper sphere in life, but they should constantly bear in mind that a fair, rosy face, bright eyes, and a healthy, well-developed form, are the best passports to a happy marriage. All those wasting disorders, weaknesses, and functional irregularities peculiar to their sex, destroy beauty and attractiveness and make life miserable. An unfailing specific for these maladies is to be found in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrappers, and faithfully carried out for many years. $1.00 per Bottle, or Six Bottles for $5.00.

A. & W. JOHNSTON,

Successors to H. E. Reid & Co.

HAVING purchased the stock of the late H. E. REID & CO., it is our intention to remove to the corner now occupied by our Hardware Store, and it is necessary to reduce the stock preparatory to moving. In order to do this, we have made a general reduction in all lines, everything having been marked down to slaughter prices. The stock is replete with all the latest novelties. Below we quote a few of the bonâ fide bargains we intend offering:

PRINTS.—We start a line of Washers at 7c. per yard.
A nice assortment Light Colors at 8c., regular price 10c.
" " Dark " " 10c, " " 12½c.
Scotch Zephyrs ..... " 7½c, " " 8c.

Dress Goods.—All Dress Goods reduced 25 per cent.

Tweed.—We offer $1.00 Tweed for 75c., 75c for 50c., 50c. for 40c.

Cottonades & Shirtings reduced in proportion.

READY-MADE CLOTHING.

We lead the Town in Ready-Mades, both Men's and Boys. Our stock is elegant order, having a full assortment sizes, thus affording customers a rare opportunity to procure a Spring Outfit at very low figure. We make a specialty of BOYS' CLOTHING, and keep a large range to select from. We guarantee to suit you in Price, Fit and Quality.

MILLINERY DEPARTMENT.

This stock is all new, having been bought within the last month, we have already taken the lead in this department and we still hope to maintain it, if Low Prices, Stylish Goods and Courteous Milliners will do so. We are sure of success.

BOOTS & SHOES.—We have our stock well-assorted and are bound to please in style and price.

GROCERY DEPARTMENT.

We have a choice stock of Fresh Groceries. Town orders delivered daily. We will add that we intend to keep the entire stock well assorted in every department, and our customers may always rely on being suited.

We hope that by strict attention to business and fair dealing to retain the patronage of the late H. E. Reid & Co. We are, yours truly,

FACES AND FACES.

Some faces are supremely fair,
Some sparkling in their splendor,
Some are demure and demeanly,
And some divinely tender.

Some wine us with one fatal glance
From eyes so brightly beaming;
Some smile the smile that brings a trance,
Till life is lost in dreaming.

Some flit before us, sweet and gay,
To fill our hearts with laughter;
Then fade, as fancies fade away,
And leave no echings after.

And some—some faces sorrow-hased,
Whose holiest thoughts are thronging—
Come back, come always in the midst
Of everlasting longing.

So faces come and faces go;
Some make existence sweeter,
And some, they make life sad, we know,
Yet being sad, complete.

IN FLY-TIME.

There is no house, however watched and tended,
But flies roam here and there,—
No place, however so well by screens defended,
These insects do not share!

The air is filled with humming—buzzing—flying—
If they were only dead!
The heart of housewife for deliverance crying
Would then be comforted.

Let us be patient! These fly-time afflictions
For a brief space arise,
To disappear amid the maledictions
We care not to disguise.

Where do flies go? To climes where other mortals
Their fly-papers spread out,
And quickly set wide all the fly-trap portals,
The enemy to rout?

Perhaps they do—but there's no diminution;
Next season finds us still
Poor victims to the usual distribution,
Against our wish or will.

And though at times, all wearied with valn smiting
And with one lips compressed,
We've sworn to give up all this useless fighting
And give the flies a rest,

We will take courage and dismiss this feeling—
Unceasingly wage war,
A lifelong battle with the enemy now scaling
Our latted evermore.

"The early bird catches the worm." Later in the day the leisurely moving sportsman gathers in the bird.

A writer says—There are some things a woman doesn't know. There may be but no man can tell her what they are.

Point for Barnum—Always engage a squint-eyed man for a lion tamer, because he can fix two beasts at once with his eyes.

Lady (to deaf old gentleman)—Do you like bananas? D. O. G.—Well, I must say I like old-fashioned neck-cloths better.

Brown—"Did the dog eat up much when he got into the pantry?" Mrs. Brown—"Yes, everything but the dog biscuit."

"We are all interested in the coming woman," says an exchange. Not half so much, though, as we are in the woman who has already come.

He—Why didn't you run after the horse car when it started without you? She—Because that is one of the instances when it is hard for a girl to catch on.

"Scraggs," said Leak, "is a fool." "But Leak," said some one, "he says you're a fool." "Well," said Leak, triumphantly, "who minds what a fool says."

Finnegan—What would you do if you had $1,000,000? Mudge—I'd lick about fifteen fellows that I am keeping my hands off at present, because I am not able to stand a fine.

Fashionable Mamma—Doctor, I want this child vaccinated where nobody will ever see the scar. Physician—All right, ma'am. (To little girl)—Push back your bangs, my dear.

A genius on the skirts of the Black Forest in Germany has made a clock that he warrants to run without winding until midnight of the year 9999. As a bit of mechanism this may prove a marvelous interest, but the interior displays his carelessness in fixing the date of consummation so far in the future that he will be blissfully ignorant of failure or success. Our Black Forest friend has constructed his clock on the wrong theory.

BAD AFFAIR AT LONDON.

A Young Man and Woman Drowned in the Thames.

LONDON, May 26.—A drowning accident occurred at Springbank at 3 30 this afternoon, whereby a young man named Adam Johnson, clerk in a dry goods store, and a girl named Ida Doherty, daughter of an Grand Trunk Railway Conductor Doherty, of this city, lost their lives. While one others, those mentioned were boating on the Thames and ventured too near the brink of the waterworks dam. The river being very high and the current swift, the foolhardiness to see how far they could go without being carried over can be imagined. They tried oars, but the second time they went too far into the maelstrom, and despite the efforts of Johnson and his male friend in the boat, they were carried over the crown of the dam, and two of them were never seen after they after they were hurled out of the boat. The two others, Mr. Simpson and Miss Phillips, were speedily rescued from their perilous position, but no further trace can be found of Johnson and Doherty, who were probably 17 or 18 years of age. The river, from recent heavy rains, is higher at present than it has been for several months, and a very rapid current sweeps along, more especially as the dam is neared. The accident caused a pall to fall over the festivities at the ball grounds and Queen's park, where the Sons of England had a successful celebration.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—These remedies are unequalled throughout the world for bad legs, wounds, foul sores, bad breasts, and ulcers. Used according to directions given with them there is no wound, bad leg, or ulcerous sore, however obstinate or long standing, but will yield to their healing and curative properties. Many poor sufferers who have been patients in the large hospitals under the care of eminent surgeons, and have derived little or no benefit from their treatment, have been thoroughly cured by Holloway's Ointment and Pills. For glandular swellings, tumours, piles, and diseases of the skin there is nothing that can be used with so much benefit. In fact, in the worst forms of disease, dependent upon the condition of the blood, these medicines, used conjointly, are irresistible.

A circular has been issued stating that the members of the Enfranchisement Association of Canada will convene in session at Toronto, Association Hall, Thursday, June 12th and 13th, commencing at 10 A. M. Rev. Annie Shaw, National Organizer for the National American Women Suffrage Association, will be present, and many other distinguished speakers from United States will contribute to the interest of the convention. Questions of vital importance to the work will be discussed. Delegates from the various organizations throughout the Provinces will be cordially received, and persons desirous of organizing in their own localities will receive helpful instructions to that end. On the evening of Friday, 13th, a reception will be given to the Rev. Annie Shaw. Among subjects to be discussed at the convention are the following:—"The Ballot; its relation to Economics," "Woman as Wage earner," "The Higher Education of Women," "Woman in the Medical Profession." A short paper expected from each organization and reports of work from each.

A Traveller's Experience.

Mr. Wm. Leavitte, representing Messrs Ames Holden & Co., Montreal, states:—Nasal Balm is the best preparation on earth for catarrh, my own case being of the worst kind; and after trying every remedy offered without relief, I was induced to try Nasal Balm, which afforded immediate relief. The rapid manner it relieves stoppage and clogging of the nasal passages, stops the droppings of poisonous secretions from the head into the throat, is truly wonderful, and should be known to every sufferer from catarrh or cold in the head.

Hamilton Spectator:—"This is the last full week of the Mowat-Meredith election campaign. The outlook is altogether with Mr. Meredith. He is making a tour of the Province, only equalled by the progress of Sir John Macdonald in 1877-8. He speaks to thousands every day and his addresses are such as to make many converts to his side. Personally he is the most forceful man in the fight. The Meredith candidates stand to win seventeen constituencies and to lose four. The Catholic vote has been conceded by Conservatives as solid for the Mowat party and therefore as not able to cost Meredith any more votes; whereas, on account of this "solidarity," a large number of Protestant Reformers are making up their minds either to abstain from voting for the Reform candidate or to vote for the Opposition standard bearer."

What It Will Do.

1 to 2 bottles of B.B.B. will cure Headache.
1 to 2 bottles of B.B.B. will cure Biliousness.
1 to 4 bottles of B.B.B. will cure Constipation.
1 to 4 bottles of B.B.B. will cure Dyspepsia.
1 to 6 bottles of B.B.B. will cure Bad Blood.
1 to 6 bottles of B.B.B. will cure Scrofula.
In any case relief will be had from the first few doses.

Ask For Ayer's

Sarsaparilla, and be sure you get it, when you want the best blood purifier. With its forty years of unexampled success in the cure of Blood Diseases, you can make no mistake in preferring Ayer's to any other. The forerunner of modern blood medicines, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is still the most popular, being in greater demand than all others combined.

Sarsaparilla

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is selling faster than ever before. I never hesitate to recommend it."—George W. Whitman, Druggist, Albany, Ind.

"I am safe in saying that my sales of Ayer's Sarsaparilla far excel those of any other, and it gives thorough satisfaction."—L. H. Bush, Des Moines, Iowa.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla and Ayer's Pills are the best selling medicines in my store. I can recommend them conscientiously."—C. Buckhaus, Pharmacist, Roseland, Ill.

"We have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla here for over thirty years and always recommend it when asked to name the best blood-purifier."—W. T. McLean, Druggist, Augusta, Ohio.

I have sold your medicines for the last seventeen years, and always keep them in stock, as they are staples. "There is nothing so good for the youthful blood" as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—R. L. Parker, Fox Lake, Wis.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla gives the best satisfaction of any medicine I have in stock. I recommend it, or, as the Doctors say, 'I prescribe it over the counter.' It never fails to meet the cases for which I recommend it, even where the doctors' prescriptions have been of no avail."—C. F. Calhoun, Monmouth, Kansas.

For Colds or Pain.

YARMOUTH, Nova Scotia, last month I had a bad cold, I took a bottle of Nasal Balm and the cold left me in two days, which was very rare. I get no relief until I used Nasal Balm. Yours truly, etc., etc.

REUBEN CROSSETT, St. Marys, Ont.

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.—The young woman Martha McLean, who was arrested some time ago for shooting her lover, N. L. Hutchinson, and then attempting to commit suicide by taking laudanum, was brought up before Judge Mathers and jury at the General Session yesterday. The young man Hutchinson gave the evidence as already published. He stated further, however, that he thought as much of Miss McLean as he did before she had hit him with the bullet that almost ended his life. Mr. Haverson appeared for the defence. The jury, acting in the spirit that seemed to possess young Hutchinson, brought in a verdict of not guilty. The pair embraced each other affectionately and affectionately, and left the court room together. It is said that this tragical romance will be brought to a close inside of a month by the marriage of the couple. The trouble seems to have been caused by impertinent interference by acquaintances of the young man, who had whispered slander in his ears.

GALT, May 27.—Thomas B. Fisher, aged about 40 years, was found in his own house last night stabbed in the left breast over the heart. Dr. Wardlaw was summoned but found it impossible to save the man's life. An open pocket-knife was discovered under the table. It is considered a case of suicide, although no reasons for such an act are known, except the deceased is said to have been a man of violent temper and was under the influence of liquor yesterday. The dead man leaves a widow and four young children.

HORSE NOTES.

SOME OF THE GREAT HORSES THAT ARE ON THE ROAD.

The following is a list of some of the great horses that are traveling in this district this season:—

DUGALD.—This pure bred prize-winning Clydesdale has recently been purchased by Mr. Wm. Jackson, of Lardwell. He is a dark bay, stripe on face, fore legs black, little white on hind legs, and is three years old. He has taken first prizes at Brampton, Bolton, Woodbridge and Toronto, and Lipplemia and Silver Medal for the Best Province Bred Horse of any age. He will stand this season at his own stable, lot 11 Centre Road, Albion.

TAM O'SHANTER, II., was sired by that noted horse Tam O'Shanter, owned by the late William Patterson, of Marsville. He possesses all the good qualities of his sire and is a first class general all purpose stallion. His route is:

MONDAY, leaves his own stable, Lot 9, Con. 1, E. Mono, and proceed by way of Glenerosa, to D. G. Beckhamm's, for noon; thence to Joseph Henry's, Mono Centre, for night.

TUESDAY, proceed to Thos. Fearn's, for noon; thence to Shelburne, for night.

WEDNESDAY, proceed down 3rd line of Amaranth to ———, for noon; thence to John Rennie's, for night.

THURSDAY, proceed to Laurel, for noon; thence to Geo. Rennie's, for night.

FRIDAY, proceed to ———, for noon; thence to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

W. E. HALL, Proprietor.

ROYAL CLEAR GRIT.—a well bred Trotting Stallion.—We referred to this horse in a previous issue of Tan ARC. The route he will travel is:

MONDAY, he leaves his own stable, lot 24, 2nd line Melancthon, and proceed to W. Fraser's Lot 16, 2nd line Mulmur, for noon; thence to Dean's Hotel Primrose, for night.

TUESDAY, he will proceed to Morrison's Hotel, Camilla, for noon; thence to the Dufferin House, Orangeville, for night.

WEDNESDAY, he will proceed to Dean's Hotel, Alton, for night.

THURSDAY, he will proceed to James Hilliard's, Lot 30, 5th Line, Albion, for noon; thence to Wm Farrell's Vanster for night.

FRIDAY, he will proceed to George Rennie's Lot 3 3rd Line Amaranth, for noon; thence to Black's Hotel Shelburne, for night.

SATURDAY, he will proceed to Horning's Mills, for noon; thence to his own stable and remain till the following Monday morning.

H. BUTCHER, Proprietor.

VALENTINE.—This well-bred trotting stallion, owned by Mr John Cohran, Ballycroy, comes from some of the best Canadian Trotting Stock. Valentine is a golden chestnut, rising 5 years old, stands 16 hands high and weighs 1,050 lbs., and possesses all the qualities of a horse. The following is his route this season:

MONDAY, he leaves his own stable, Ballycroy, and proceeds to Huckley, for night.

TUESDAY he will Proceed to Jno White's, Mono Centre, for noon; thence to Camilla, for night.

WEDNESDAY, he will proceed to Wm Dynes', Granger, for noon; thence to Mansfield for night.

THURSDAY, he will proceed to McCarthy's Hotel, Rosemont, for night.

FRIDAY, he will proceed to Loretto, for noon; thence to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

ST JOE.—Everybody knows or has seen that celebrated trotting coach stallion, St Joe. St. Joe is a beautiful black, 9 years old, stands 16 hands a inches high, and possesses all the qualities of a first class roadster. Messrs Dwyer & Kearns, of Charleston, can prove themselves on coming and a stepper. He will make the following route:

MONDAY, he leaves his own stable, Charleston, and proceed to Orangeville, for noon; thence to Moore Mills for night.

TUESDAY to Cumner, for noon; to Palgrave for night.

WEDNESDAY, will proceed by Lockton, to Bell's, for noon; thence by Cardon East, to Sand Hill, for night.

THURSDAY, proceed by Campbell's Cross to Claude, for noon; thence home for night.

FRIDAY, proceed to Alton, for noon; thence to Cataract, for one hour; thence to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

CLEVELAND HAMBLETONIAN is a beautiful coach horse, the property of Mr John White, Caledon. He has sired some of the best coach horses in America, one pair of which were sold in Philadelphia, before they were four years old, for the big sum of $3,700. His route this season is:—

MONDAY he leaves his own stable, lot 18, 2nd line East, Caledon, at noon, and proceed to Moore Mills, for one hour; thence to Galbraith's Hotel, Hockley, for night.

TUESDAY proceed to Henderson's Hotel, Rosemont, for noon; thence to Primrose, for one hour; thence to Witter's Hotel, Shelburne, for night.

WEDNESDAY he will proceed to McCarney's Hotel Laurel for noon; thence by Whittington to Morrison's Hotel Camilla, for night.

THURSDAY he will proceed to the Paisley House, Orangeville and remain all night.

FRIDAY, he will proceed to Willis' Hotel, Alton, for noon; thence to Cataract, for one hour; thence to Burrell's Hotel Charleston, and remain all night.

SATURDAY he will proceed to the Paisley House, Orangeville, for noon, and remain until 7 o'clock; thence to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

CALEDON'S PRIDE, or YOUNG WHAT'S WANTED.—Mr John Hogkin, of Caledon, still owns this high grade heavy draught stallion. Young What's Wanted is 7 years old, stands 16 hands high and was sired by Wat's Wanted, owned by T. Gill, Lot 16, sand Hill. The following route will be continued during the season:

MONDAY, he leaves his own stable, Lot 19, Con. 3, East, Caledon and proceed to ——— Elliott's, for noon; thence to John Downs' Lockton, for night.

TUESDAY, he will proceed to Joseph Logan's for noon; thence to Cedarville, for one hour; thence to John Agnew's, Cardigan, for night.

WEDNESDAY, he will proceed to Loretto, for noon; thence to Wm Spence's for two hours; thence to John O'Leary's, for night.

THURSDAY he will proceed to Thomas McKellan's, for noon; thence to Henry Moffatt's, for night.

FRIDAY, he will proceed to Mr Garvey's, for noon; thence by Third Line to his own stable, for night.

SATURDAY, he will proceed to Dwyer's Hotel, Charleston, and back to his own stable, where he will remain till the following Monday morning.

BONNIE SCOTLAND.—This well-known heavy Draught is the property of Mr John Aldous, proprietor of the Royal Hotel, Mono Mills. Bonnie Scotland is sure to get a ticket and his colts take a red ticket wherever shown. He leaves his own stable, Royal Hotel, on MONDAY, and proceed to Joseph Legat's, Connor, for noon; thence to Hockley, for night.

TUESDAY, he will proceed to John Laverty's, 7th line, Mono, for noon; thence to Andrew McCaguer's, Ballycroy, for two hours; thence to Jonathan Flatt's, Melville, for night.

WEDNESDAY, he will proceed to Thos. White's, Glen Cross, for noon; thence to Thomas Holmes', for night.

THURSDAY, he will proceed to Michael Armstrong's, 1st East, Caledon, for noon; thence to Dean's Hotel, Alton, for night.

FRIDAY, he will proceed to John Lamont's, for noon; thence to Isaac Cherry's, 6th Line, for night.

SATURDAY, he will proceed to Edward Simpson's, 1st line, Albion, for noon; thence to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

FAMOUS QUARTO.—John Gilkinson & Son are proprietors of four of the best stallions in Canada. Catch Me is a recently imported heavy draught, and is the genuine stamp of a horse of the first water. His pedigree would take up too much space here, and we will have to refer the reader to his route bills for particulars. The firm still own that famous coal black trotter, Defiance, which took first prizes all over the country. The great Irish Thoroughbreds, Asiatic and Faughn Ballagh, have recently been added to this stable. Defiance and Asiatic will make the season as follows:

MONDAY, they will leave their own stable, Commercial Hotel, Orangeville, and proceed to the Royal Hotel, Mono Mills, for noon; thence Galbraith's Hotel, Hockley, for night.

TUESDAY, they will proceed to Mono Centre, for noon; thence by Primrose to Witter's Hotel, Shelburne, for night.

WEDNESDAY, they will proceed to Whittington, for noon; thence to their own stable, for night.

THURSDAY, they will proceed to Camilla, for noon; thence to Burrell's Hotel, Charleston, for night.

FRIDAY, they will proceed to Cataract, for noon; thence to Gale's Hotel, Hillsburg, for night.

SATURDAY, he will proceed to his own stable, and remain till the following Monday morning.

Ask for HOSPITAL REMEDY for General Debility. Price $1.00.

Read this extract from the scientific papers of Great Britain and Europe:

The four greatest medical societies of the world are London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna. These cities have numerous hospitals teeming with suffering humanity. Crowds of students throng the wards studying under the Professors in charge. The most renowned physicians of the world teach and practice here, and the institutions are storehouses of medical knowledge and experience. With a view of making this experience available to the public the Hospital Remedy Co. at great expense secured the prescriptions of three hospitals, prepared the specifics, and although it would cost from $25 to $100 to secure the attention of their distinguished originators, yet in this way their prepared specifics are offered at the price of the quack patent medicines that flood the market and absurdly claim to cure every ill from a single bottle.

A DANGER SIGNAL!

A Cold in the Head may be aptly termed a danger signal warning you that it neglected that dangerous and disagreeable disease, Catarrh, is sure to follow, perhaps leading to Consumption and the grave. At no season of the year is Cold in the Head more prevalent than during the Spring months, and at no other season do the people of this country suffer more generally from Catarrh, with all its disagreeable and annoying effects. Do not for an instant neglect either of these troubles, but apply NASAL BALM, the only remedy that will give instant relief and effect a thorough cure. The following testimonials from among thousands in our possession bear witness to its sterling merit.

Alex. Burns, Sudbury, Ont., says: I may state that I have been affected with Catarrh seven or eight years, and it was attended by consequent symptoms such as foul breath, constant dropping into the throat, hawking and spitting, partial deafness, ringing in the ears and sickening pains in the head directly over either eye. I have used powders and douches, but all to no effect, the only result arising from the use of such was temporary relief, followed by the usual symptoms in a more aggravated form. The results arising from the use of Nasal Balm: Sweet breath, stoppage of the dropings into the throat, (consequently less hawking and spitting), clearness of hearing, and not once since I began its use have I had pain in the head. In fact, it is my opinion that a careful and persistent use of the Balm will effect a cure in the worst case of catarrh.

T. D. D. Loyd, 6 Clarence street, Toronto, says: I wish here to testify to the unequalled healing powers of your Nasal Balm. I have been troubled for three years by what the doctors call post nasal catarrh, and have tried everything in the city that could be obtained, in the shape of catarrh cures, and found no permanent relief from any of them. A friend one day accosted me to try your Nasal Balm, and I find that even one bottle has done me more good than all the medicines put together that I have persevered with before. I was very much troubled with spitting and hawking especially in the morning, so much so that my throat was continually in a raw condition, but I am now beginning to know what it is to be able to speak freely. I shall not fail to recommend it to any of my friends suffering from the like disease.

NASAL BALM INSTANTLY RELIEVES Cold in the Head.

A. W. Mallory, Mallorytown, Ont., says: My daughter suffered for years from a most distressing and annoying Catarrh. Her case was under the treatment of eminent physicians in the United States and Canada. Two months use of Nasal Balm has had more beneficial effects than all former treatment combined.

L. D. Dion, Dept. Railways and Canals, Ottawa, says: I am very glad to give you to day the testimony that Nasal Balm has completely cured my catarrh, from which I suffered for nearly three years.

NASAL BALM POSITIVELY CURES CATARRH.

D. Derbyshire, Mayor of Brockville and President of the Dairymen's Creamery Association, says: Nasal Balm heads the world for Catarrh and Cold in the Head. In my case it effected a cure from the first application.

Isaac Waterman (Imperial Oil Co), Petrolia, Ont., says: Nasal Balm cures my Catarrh and Cold in the Head. In my case it effected a complete cure in a couple of hours.

If Nasal Balm is not kept in stock by your dealer it will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 Cents for small and $1 for large size bottles) by addressing

EDITORIAL NOTES.

MARY ANDERSON, the American actress, was married in London, Eng., on Tuesday.

JAY GOULD has been fined $100 by Judge Fitzgerald, of New York, for refusing to act as a petit juror.

LAST Thursday evening Editor A. F. Campbell and Public School Inspector J. L. Hughes, of Toronto, were banqueted at Brampton.

MESSRS. JOHN DILLON, William O'Brien, and John Redmond will shortly make a tour of America in the interest of the Irish National movement.

WE are glad to see the town council follow the advice of THE SUN in the matter of procuring workable appliances for our fire brigade. They also concur with us when we come down on firetrap roofs.

REV DR CAYSER, formerly principal of the Baptist College in Toronto, died on Wednesday evening in Philadelphia. He had been in poor health ever since his resignation of the principalship two years ago.

ON Tuesday Archduchess Valeria publicly renounced all claim to the throne of Austria in order that she might marry the man of her choice, remarking that a loving husband would make a true woman happier than a thousand thrones.

MORE than a thousand happy fathers have applied for the land grant offered by the Quebec Government to parents in the province who can boast the possession of twelve or more children. It is stated on good authority that the man who hath his quiver full of them is happy But what is to be the verdict regarding the men whose quiver is not merely full but running over? Were it not for the land bonus it might be said of those in Quebec at least that the excess of joy had become almost painful.

AN exchange remarks:—Those flippant and lively old persons who boast that they are 100, 110 or 115 years old, with teeth sound and eyes undimmed, have been put to shame by the editor who is responsible for a current paragraph declaring that Count Punourostra (Count Fist in the Face), a Spanish nobleman, who got his title from having struck Charles V. in the face, has just died To have lived 300 years or more is getting into close communion with Methuselah. It behooves our own patriarchs to show up the falsity of this statement or make a combined attack upon the editor who has ruthlessly plucked their laurels.

A COLLINGWOOD man has been arrested for trafficking in counterfeit bills, better known as "green goods" The case is worthy of note because it is one of a class formerly common, but now happily rare. There can be little doubt the law of 1888 respecting the advertising counterfeit money has helped materially in dispelling the idea that the spurious medium of exchange can be profitably and safely handled. Under the new statute the sending of a letter offering to sell counterfeit bills is a felony, punishable with five years' imprisonment, while the removal from the post-office of a letter addressed to a fictitious individual and containing an offer of 'green goods' is an offence calling for similar punishment. It was stated in Parliament that not many years ago otherwise respectable merchants had bought counterfeits for circulation, and it is known by the court records that a justice of the peace went into the business in 1887. The fraud is very risky now

DEATH OF MR JAMES PATTULLO.

The death of Mr. James Pattullo at Orangeville on Friday last removes one of Caledon's oldest settlers. The deceased was born in Scotland in the early part of the present century, and emigrated to Canada about the year 1820 and settled in Caledon, then a wilderness, where he continued to reside until the year 1867, when he removed to East Garafraxa and on dividing his inheritance with his family came to Orangeville, and for the past five years has resided with his son, the Police Magistrate.

The deceased was a good type of that sturdy Scotch pioneer who has done so much for Canada and has helped to make this country the good, growing and prosperous home of thousands, the present generation will never know how much they are indebted to such early settlers, who, under many privations hewed out homes for their children and converted what was once the forest of the Indians into peaceful and happy homes for thousands who now enjoy the fruits of their labor.

The deceased gentleman was a sterling Methodist and was known from one end of the county to the other, in the church as one of its oldest and most consistent members, and many of the early preachers will remember his hospitable roof with feelings of reverence.

He leaves surviving him seven sons and three daughters all of whom attended the funeral which took place on Sunday last.

WEEKLY NEWS LETTER.

SOME GATHERED FACTS FOR GENERAL READERS.

The Cowles Case Settled—The Alleged Murderer of Mrs. Tripp—Duke of Connaught Sails—The Franchisement Movement—Conventions and Assemblies—Political and Other Gossip.

TORONTO, June 16.—The celebrated Cowles abduction case is no longer a sensational. The excitement has died out. Mrs. Cowles has secured her daughter abducted some weeks ago by her husband and the happy mother and child will soon go to their home in Ohio. The husband and father is now lying in the hospital at Montreal dangerously wounded but it is expected that he will recover. He has entirely exonerated his brother-in-law, Mr. Hale from blame, regarding the shooting affray, which, it will be remembered, occurred in a cab while the parties were driving along St. James' street Montreal, Hale, it is understood, thought that Cowles intended to shoot his wife, and got the drop on him, by shooting before he could draw his revolver. Hale has been liberated on personal bail and will likely be only fined by the police magistrate. This ends a wonderful episode, which might have developed into an awful tragedy.

Talking of tragedies reminds me, that Dr. W. E. Tripp, of Ingersoll has been arrested for murdering his mother. The Doctor became notorious some time ago by running away with somebody else's wife. His mother, it is alleged died from poisoning, and Dr. Tripp is believed to be the person who administered the deadly drugs. He has been allowed to go on his personal bail of $200 to reappear before the magistrate this week.

Exit His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught. They have left Canada, and are steaming across the Atlantic bound for England and home once more. His Royal Highness has been in India as Commander-in-chief of the army for several years. They left Quebec last Thursday in the Allan line "Sardinian" Lord and Lady Stanley and other members of the Governor General's family saw them off.

An interesting case has just been commenced in Montreal. Last July Dr. Jeannotte prescribed for a child of the present plaintiff, and the prescription was filled at Devins' pharmacy. The child died shortly afterwards, and Couillard took out an action for $1,500 damages against the physician and druggist jointly, on the ground that the former prescribed morphine instead of quinine and the latter delivered the poisonous drug without taking the precautions prescribed by law, the result being the child's death.

Toronto is hustling to get her Summer carnival at the end of this month, in shape. It is going to be, judging from present arrangements, a grand and gorgeous affair. The idea of summer carnivals seems to be finally imbedded in the minds of Canadian people. Halifax and St. John and a few other cities started these celebrations last year. This year Toronto is going to startle and delight the country, and Gait has already done so. The carnival at Gait was held last week, and was a tremendous success. There are more towns to follow

Conventions, annual meetings, synods and such like affairs seem to be the order of the day now A large number of district assemblies have been meeting here. Toronto, Hamilton, Montreal and Ottawa have all had their turn.

Presbyterian, Methodist, Anglican, Medicine, Education and Women's Rights, Doctors of Law, of Life and of Divinity have been airing themselves in all their glory. Toronto University held its annual Convocation in a tabernacle built on the lawn Behind it were the blackened ruins of that noble pile of building, long know to fame. Hon. Edward Blake, Chancellor of the University and William Mulock delivered the addresses. The Dominion Women's Enfranchisement Association also met in Toronto The members long to vote. They had a fine little organ I believe during the meeting and much hair was torn. It seems that the ladies wishing to be polite sent a resolution of welcome to the medical scientists and doctors who were also in session last week Some of the doctors wanted to thank the kind ladies. Others didn't. There were more of the latter than of the former, and a resolution was adopted condemning the Dominion Woman's Enfranchisement Association. The ladies in return passed a resolution unanimously condemning the learned doctors, man nors The matter then ended. In Ottawa where the Presbyterians have been holding communion, people have been somewhat started by the animosity displayed against that Canadian law of allowing a man to marry his deceased wife's sister One of the ministers was deposed on account of having made such a marriage.

Strikes have not been many this year, but what few there have been seem to be all settled satisfactorily The Toronto strikes have been all arranged The strike in Hamilton of the weavers in the Ontario Cotton Mills has just been settled The strike has lasted 44 days, and many of the striker's families have suffered severely from the loss of wages. Sir John Macdonald has been in town for a few days. He came to attend the fashionable wedding of Miss VanKoughnet. The visit of the Veteran Premier is generally thought a great deal of by the good Conservatives of this city.

What will be the composition of the next Ontario Cabinet is a question that bagatizes Reform politicians. It is said that ex-Col Gibson refuses to seek another constituency. Some say North Waterloo will be offered to him if he desires again to enter public life Col Clarke is a probable candidate for the Treasurership, and if Mr Gibson declines a seat, Mr. Harcourt, it is said, will be Secretary Rumour gives Mr Freeman the Speakership, but should Mr Gibson reenter the House Mr. Harcourt will likely be Speaker, at his experience as chairman of Committee of the Whole House will be taken into account His friends, however, would sooner see him in a fighting position, as he is one of the best debaters in the House, although seldom heard. Mr O'Connor, of South Bruce, is also in the running. He is a fluent speaker. Mr. Dryden is mentioned as Minister of Agriculture Mr Drury will, it is expected, take the chrivalty of Simcoe, which is worth anything from $5,000 per year up.

BIRCHALL'S CASE.

Chief of Police Wills, of Woodstock, on a Hunt for Evidence,

LOCKPORT N Y June 16.—Chief of Police Wills, of Woodstock, Ont, has recently been in this city searching for evidence that might have a bearing upon the trial of Birchall. The chief found and examined a very large trunk at the Erie depot in Tonawanda which came there checked to Birchall just before he was said to have been murdered. The trunk had been at Tonawanda until a few days ago, when it was taken away by a stranger who presented a check for it. Chief Wills believes the trunk was designed to enclose Birchall's victim and to be sent over Niagara Falls The chief also reported that an important witness who has been thought to have disappeared has been located, and will testify at Birchall's trial in October.

MURDERER SMITH HANGED.

LONDON, Ont., June, 14.—Promptly at 8 o'clock this morning Henry Smith, the wife murderer, was conducted from his cell to the scaffold, supported by four sheriff's deputies. A short prayer was said by one of the attending ministers, during which the executioner adjusted the black cap, and at 8 10 sharp the string was cut and Smith was launched into eternity. There were but twenty persons allowed within the court yard, but a crowd of boys on an adjacent shed viewed the whole scene with evident amusement. The hangman arrived here yesterday morning and says this is his seventeenth execution.

Local Intelligence.

All kinds of feed at the Stone Mill.

A telephone has been placed in the residence of Dr. Fraser.

The east Broadway hotels did a rushing business on Saturday.

Mrs Lennox, a sister of the late G B. Island, died at Barrie on Saturday last.

Frank Crozier had his hand badly cut at the Orangeville steam bottling works one day last week.

All the arrangements have been completed to hold a monster celebration here on the 12th of July.

Photographer Still has a number of excellent views of the locality where the recent destructive flood passed through.

The town companies of the 36th battalion left Orangeville on Tuesday for Niagara, where they will spend the next two weeks.

Will the young lady who picked up $4 on Broadway a couple of weeks ago please call at this office? An owner has been found.

A farmer's team dashed down Broadway at a terrific pace last Thursday afternoon. One of the horses fell when opposite the Elgin house, which prevented sure destruction. Very little damage was done.

R. Crozier, proprietor of the Queen's hotel, had J. White summoned to appear before the P. M. on Monday for creating a disturbance in the Queen's. Mayor Walsh appeared for the prosecution, and a fine of $5 and costs was imposed.

A communication has been received at this office from one who signs himself "Pilgrim" The letter is headed: "Is the Church of England a Thief?" Before publishing it, however, we would like "Pilgrim" to call on THE SUN and enlighten us a little on the matter. The accusations are very serious, and if "Pilgrim" couldn't prove his assertions he would be in a pretty tight box.

WANTED.—A strong, intelligent boy to learn the printing business. One having passed the entrance examination preferred. Apply at THE SUN.

AT ST. MARK'S.—On Tuesday next, June 11th, St. John the Baptist's day, the Lord Bishop of Niagara will hold an Ordination in St. Mark's church at 11 A M, when one candidate will be ordained Deacon, and one will be advanced to the order of Priest. At 7 P. M. on the same day there will be held the Confirmation services in the same church.

ESCAPED.—The burglars who were arrested here some time ago and were convicted at Barrie last week on four charges of larceny were taken to Kingston to serve a sentence of three and five years respectively. While remaining over night at the police cells in the Limestone City, the robbers made their escape, and up to the present time no trace of them have been found.

ROBINSON-MCKIM.—A very pleasant event took place at the residence of Sheriff McKim, Guelph, on Thursday last, it being the marriage of his third daughter, Maggie, to F. W. Robinson, B. A. Both the contracting parties formerly resided in Orangeville, Mr. Robinson being assistant teacher in our high school and Miss McKim having occupied a position in the registrary office. They have the best wishes of a host of friends for their future happiness.

THE DRIVING ASSOCIATION'S MATINEE.—The Orangeville driving association held a "matinee" on the driving park on Friday evening, when interesting races were run between Riddell Bros. King Imperial, Hank Crozier's Billy Go Easy, L Scott's Johnnie, J. W. Neil's Black Hawk, Will Johnston's Daisy, J C Fox's Nellie, R. Beatty's Bay, and C W Sydie's Minnie S Another matinee will take place to morrow evening, and as no admission fee is charged, the citizens are cordially invited to be present.

THE LANSDOWNES WON.—A pretty good number of people witnessed the lacrosse match between a picked team of the town and the Riversides, of Toronto, last Saturday afternoon. The Toronto boys were much taller and heavier than the home team, but the kids could leave them far behind in playing lacrosse. After playing about an hour and a half the score stood 5 to 0 in favor of Orangeville. The gate receipts amounted to about $21.

EARLY DEMISE.—The death occurred on Saturday May 31st, in San Francisco, of Miss Annie Chapman, a former resident of this town, and sister of Mr. Thos. W. Chapman, of the firm of Judge Chapman & Co. The deceased who was only 19 years of age, had suffered from heart disease for some years. Her remains were brought to the residence of her brother, here, on Saturday, and were interred in the Forest Lawn cemetery on Sunday last. The funeral was largely attended.

JOE REID AGAIN.—Joe Reid is one of the most unfortunate of men. Every time he comes to town he gets mixed up in a row, and generally receives the most punishment. On Saturday afternoon Joe and a local painter had an altercation over some trivial matter, and decided to settle the dispute by resorting to pugilism. This they did, right on Broadway and in front of the town hall, too, and the way the painter walloped Joe around brought a howl of delight from the urchins present. Friends interfered and separated the combatants, and the fight was accordingly brought to a close.

BUSINESS TOURS.—Those pondering over the important question of where to go for their summer holiday, will find the little volume "Summer Tours," issued by the General Passenger Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway, a most useful adviser. It describes a delightful variety of tours by rail, lake and river, to popular inland and seacoast resorts, to the Rocky Mountains, the Pacific Coast, Alaska, &c., &c., from which the attractive long or short trips may be selected to suit the wishes of all tourists. The book is published in pocket form, neatly gotten up and adorned with many handsome illustrations, and may be obtained free upon application to W. R. Callaway, District Passenger Agent, 118 King St. West, Toronto, or D. McNicoll, General Passenger Agent, Montreal.

THE VICTORIOUS LORNES.—The Dufferins of this town and the Lornes of Mt. Forest played their first championship match this season on the Duffer in lacrosse grounds, last Friday afternoon, and a great disappointment it was for Orangeville. At ten minutes past four the ball was faced off, and five minutes afterwards the Dufferins forced the sphere through the Lornes' goal. After a brief rest play was resumed, and the home team rapidly dazzled the Mt. Foresters to such an extent that the visitors succumbed after playing five minutes. The score now stood 2 to 0 in favor of Orangeville. The Lornes braced up and took the third game in twenty five minutes. Game number 4 went to the Dufferins in thirty seconds. The Lornes perceived that the Orangeville men were getting pretty well fagged out and started in with a rush, taking the next three games in thirty five, ten and fifteen minutes respectively, thereby winning the match by four goals to three. Lacrosse seems to be on the decline in this part of the country, as there is not a club in the district that has as strong a team as last year's. However, the Lornes were jubilant over their victory, and returned home on the evening train very, very happy boys.

PERSONAL.

Detective Rogers, of Toronto, spent a few days in town this week.

Miss Mary Hallam, of Wingham, is visiting at the Dufferin house.

Mrs. Samuel Wallace, of Warren, Pa. is the guest of Miss Dulsie Wallace.

Mr. Thomas Dick, formerly of the postoffice staff here, is at present at Detroit, Mich.

Mrs. W. H. Robinson and daughter, of Toronto, visited friends in Orangeville last week.

Mrs West, who has been visiting friends here for the past few weeks, returns to Toronto to night.

Mr. A. E. Henderson, son of Rev. A Henderson, has secured a situation in the Bank of Commerce here.

Mr. Robt. Hewitt, contractor, of Toronto, ex-deputy-reeve of Orangeville, dropped into our sanctum on Monday. We are always glad to receive a call from ex Orangevillains.

COUNTY FATHERS.

All The Members Present, But not Much Business Transacted the First Day.

All the members of the council were present at the adjourned meeting, which was held in the court house here on Monday afternoon. Warden Gallaugher occupied the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted.

The clerk read and referred the following:

ACCOUNTS

Free Press, $1 50; Lewis Sheppard, $3.00, James Bain & Son, $6 00; Advertiser, $1 50; Dufferin Star, $1 50; The Sun, $35 24; J. H. Hulse, $18; T. Stevenson, $1 73, Post, $1 50; N. Gordon, $11.50; J. C. Reid, $540.

PETITIONS

From the trustee of S.S. No. 12 and others praying for the appointment of arbitrators to form a new school section in East Garafraxa.

From George Dodds and a number of others requesting the council to appoint arbitrators to consider the advisability of altering the boundaries of S.S. No. 9, Mono, and of forming a union with S S. No. 9, Mulmur.

From N. I. Yourex and four others asking the council to appoint arbitrators to deal with certain school matters in section No. 9, Amaranth, as the township council refused to take action in the matter.

From Malcolm Davie and twenty others requesting the council to appoint arbitrators to form a new school section in Amaranth, as the council of that township refused to act. A counter petition was put in by the trustees of section No. 9, praying that no action be taken in the matter.

From Chairman McLaren asking for a grant to help repair the high school building.

From Captain Williams, of No. 8 company, 36th battalion, asking for a room in the court house for the purpose of storing arms, clothing, etc., of said company.

A COMMUNICATION

was received from the Education Department apprising the council of the amount of the legislative school grant appropriated to the township municipalities.

On motion of Mr. Jelly, seconded by Mr. Wiggins, the council adjourned until Tuesday morning.

[Owing to the pressure on our columns this week we are compelled to hold over the remainder of the proceedings until our next issue.

THE FIREMEN'S WANTS.

They want a new Reservoir, Crowbars, Pails, Ladders and Axes.—They are vested all Except the Reel—Other Matters Dealt with by the Fathers.

When THE SUN's representative arrived at the council chamber on Monday evening he found the interior a little changed since the last meeting. The mayor's throne, which formerly occupied a position at the south side of the "green table," was changed to the east side of the room, thus giving the chief magistrate a complete view of the fathers of a great town. The change is a good one, although it took the councillors a long time to see the point.

The aldermen were a little dilatory about coming, and when the clerk read the minutes, which were approved, Mayor Walsh, Reeve Lindsey, Deputy-reeve Endacott, Ald. Yeomans, Greer, Ketchum, King, Cohean, Pinkney and Gillespie were present.

ACCOUNTS.

from THE SUN, $14 95, Advertiser, $10.-98, were referred to the Printing committee, with instructions to order the payment thereof if found correct; J. J. Hubbard, $1.00; Toronto Rubber Co. $88.10; ordered to be paid.

THE F. & W. REPORT.

Ald. Gillespie read the F. & W. report, which recommended the purchase of a new hose-reel, two long ladders, crowbars, axes and pails; that the engine and boiler were in need of repairs; and that the hydrants and everything else in the department were in good condition. The council went into committee of the whole and all the recommendations of the report were adopted, with the exception of purchasing a new reel, which would cost in the neighborhood of $175. The reel question will be taken up later on.

Ald. Bailey brought in the R. & B. report. It gave an inventory of the losses the town sustained by the late floods, and the work done by the committee in making temporary repairs. The report was adopted.

BY LAWS.

Deputy reeve Endacott introduced a by law to compel the construction of dry-earth closets. The limits are the same as the fire limits, but extends farther westward to include the public school. The by-law received its first and second readings, and will be further dealt with at the next meeting.

A $1500 LOAN.

A prominent farmer of Mulmur asked the loan of $1500 of the town's sinking fund. Reeve Lindsey introduced a by-law authorizing the loan, and it received its third reading. This is considered an excellent chance for the corporation to invest the money. The loan is to run ten years, and the interest is to be not less than 6 per cent.

Ald. Ketchum introduced a by-law to amend the fire by-law in such a way that the walls of buildings must be eighteen inches higher than the roof This amendment, if enforced, will put a stop per on firetrap roofs that so handicap our firemen when at work on them.

BRIEFS.

Ald. Ketchum will introduce a by-law to amend the dog by law, by which persons who have paid a license in other towns will be exempt from purchasing a tag here.

The council will meet at 8 o'clock instead of 7.30 during the months of June, July, August and September.

The lots in arrears of taxes will be sold by public auction under the supervision of the Finance committee.

The special committee will wait on the council of the township of Caledon to see what they will do in fixing the old C. V. R. roadbed, between Orangeville and Melville, as a public thoroughfare, providing they accept the offer made by the C. P. R. The same deputation will urge the Caledon council to clean up the Credit river.

The council adjourned shortly after 9 o'clock.

AN AWFUL FATALITY.

A C. P. R. Engine Smashes Through a Culvert—Five Lives Lost.

An awful disaster occurred on the Ontario and Quebec division of the Canadian Pacific railway between Claremont and Locust Hill at 11.30 o'clock on Tuesday evening, which resulted in the instant death of five employes of that company, some of whom leave sorrowing families.

The details of the disaster are these: After the heavy rains a few days ago, followed by a downpour on Tuesday morning, the companies officials had been busily engaged in repairing culverts and portions of roadbed damaged by washouts. Bridge Inspector Wanless had been busily engaged superintending repairs west of Toronto, and he came through on Tuesday night to the city. Mr. Wanless had an idea that a culvert near Claremont ought to be looked after, and he went on east on the local train which runs as far as Havelock. When the train arrived at Locust Hill station the inspector decided to leave the train with its passengers at that point, while he went on with the engine to examine the culvert in question before allowing a passenger train to run over it.

On the engine which was detached from the local were the following employes of the road:

John Wanless, jr., of Parkdale, inspector of bridges and buildings along the Ontario division.

James Atton, of West Toronto Junction, engine driver.

George Oliver, of West Toronto Junction, fireman.

Jerry Moriarity, of Green River, section foreman.

Hiram Lott, of Green River, sectionman.

David Highswander, of Green River, extra employe, repairing washouts.

The culvert, of the safety of which Mr. Wanless had his suspicions, is about two miles west of Claremont. To reach this suspected culvert from Locust Hill the engine had to cross a massive stone culvert, which had an arch of about 25 feet, giving plenty of room, one would think, for storm water to run through. That this solid piece of stonework was unsafe was far from the mind of the bridge inspector. He was anxious as to the safety of the culvert beyond But, at the same time, it was right here that Mr. Wanless and his fellow-employes went down to their death. As soon as the weighty locomotive reached the middle of the arch the west abutment went to pieces, throwing the engine into the swollen stream beneath. Five of the crew lost their lives, while one of their number, Highswander, who was hanging to the end of the tender, jumped and escaped with a broken leg.

Yesterday morning the body of Mr. Wanless was recovered. The body was badly bruised and scalded, while both legs were broken. The remains were taken home to his bereaved wife and four children in the afternoon.

At half-past two o'clock yesterday afternoon, after dragging the stream for a distance, the body of Engineer Atton was found a half a mile below the scene of the accident. The poor fellow's watch had stopped at 11.36 p. m., which shows clearly the time the culvert gave way. He had evidently jumped when the crash came, but the surging waters beneath soon had him as a victim. He was drowned and not killed when the engine went down. His remains were also taken in the evening to his home at West Toronto Junction. Mr. Atton leaves a wife and seven children. Fireman Oliver also leaves a wife and two children, while the others had no families.

Owing to the high water, it was impossible to make any attempt yesterday to lift the engine out of the bed of the stream. At 10 o'clock yesterday it was completely under water, but the torrent subsided about six feet in the evening. The engine is upside down, having turned completely over after falling off the culvert. As the bodies of Oliver, Moriarty and Lott cannot be found, it is the opinion of the company's officials that they are under the locomotive. Wrecking apparatus, such as steam derricks, etc, are at the scene of the disaster, and an attempt will be made this morning to lift the engine out of the stream.

Mr. James Atton, the engineer, was a former resident of this town; Mr. John Wanless formerly resided at Charleston and much sympathy is expressed for the bereaved families.
